Bilandic bans SST here

AFTER 16 MONTHS of Concorde test flights to the United States and a last-minute flurry by friends and foes of the supersonic transport, President Carter tentatively opened the door to landings across the United States, subject to local approval.

by KURT BAER

Chicago Mayor Michael A. Bilandic Friday said the supersonic jet airplane Concorde is not welcome to land at the city's O'Hare Airport.

Bilandic's pronouncement came shortly after U.S. Transportation Sec. Brock Adams announced that the federal government would not ban the SST from U.S. airports, but would allow cities to decide for themselves whether they want the controversial plane.

The Concorde violates both national and city noise limits, Bilandic said during a luncheon speech at the Bismarck Hotel, Chicago.

Unless the noise level comes down, Bilandic said he will oppose the plane.

"THE BURDEN of proof should shift to those who are the proponents and unless there is some redeeming value not yet evident, that action (city approval for Concorde) should not be taken. That plane should not land here," the mayor said.

The convenience of supersonic travel for a relative few passengers does not outweigh the damage that would befall the many residents who live around O'Hare, the world's busiest airport, Bilandic said.

The Carter Administration's new SST policy and Bilandic's immediate reaction ended, at least for now, months of speculation about Concorde's future and the possibility of O'Hare landings.

The 16 Anglo-French Concordes now flying or under construction would be exempted from federal noise standards, "provided their noise levels are not increased above the present levels and they do not operate over the United States at supersonic speeds," Adams said.

Any 'second generation Concordes, whether built in the United States or a foreign nation, would have to meet the same noise limits as subsonic jets, Adams said.

CONCORDE IS twice as noisy on takeoff as the loudest subsonic and is up to four times louder than newer quieter subsonics.

The administration decision includes a curfew on SST flights between 10 p.m. and 7 a.m. local time.

Adams said the decision represents a proposal on which the public will be allowed to comment until a final rule is published sometime next year.

The decision was designed "to protect the health and safety of the American people, set a fair and reasonable noise standard for SST operations and strike a balance between legitimate domestic and international interests of the United States," Adams said.

U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, a staunch SST opponent, telephoned Bilandic shortly after Adams' announcement in Washington to put the mayor on early notice of local opposition to Concorde landings at O'Hare.

Reversing an old adage, Mikva said, "What's not good for the suburbs is not good for Chicago. Even if Concorde would mean a few extra passengers landing at O'Hare, the impact on suburban lifestyles would be a definite detriment to Chicago."

A STUDY BY the Federal Aviation Administration showed that most of the noise from Concorde would be directed west and Northwest of O'Hare, over the suburbs, not the City of Chicago.

Suburbanites feared that Bilandic would sacrifice their interests for the SST at O'Hare. But city hall sources said Friday that Bilandic has a history of environmental concern and that, as an alderman, he authored Chicago's anti-noise ordinance, one of the toughest in the nation.

Buck passed on race track woes

Hundreds who lived and worked at Arlington Park Race Track this summer endured substandard housing and health conditions while authorities responsible for the conditions passed along the blame.

Violations of minimum health and housing codes have been tolerated by the race track backstretch where nearly 2,000 workers lived, some of them families dwelling in rooms designed for only two.

The Illinois Racing Board says the race track and the Village of Arlington Heights are responsible for enforcing local health and safety codes. The village says the track has the enforcement obligation under terms of a 1974 agreement. Track officials blame the backstretch employes for the poor conditions.

MEANWHILE, workers are confined to an isolated world behind the parimutuel windows, working seven days a week tending to pampered race horses in an environment of low pay, meager lodging and crime.

The situation seems to typify the inbred regulatory system surrounding the racing industry, where the regulators as well as the industry stand to lose money if penalties are imposed against race tracks.

"Greed is the biggest problem," said one official familiar with the backstretch problems. "Everything in the industry depends on the racing. The state regulates, but it makes so much money from it, it couldn't shut down a track. The village gets tax dollars from it. Nobody represents the workers.'

Those in regulating positions also seem to hold the workers in the backstretch in low esteem, a Daily Herald investigation found. The officials say they are concerned with the welfare of the employes, but they tell outsiders that the employes are transients from low economic classes that destroy property.

Village and race track officials say they did not know code violations were occurring or that families were living on the backstretch in 12-by 11-foot rooms.

William Thayer, general manager at Arlington Park, said "there isn't a race track in the country that has" housing for families. The children who lived this summer with their parents "were snuck in at night," he said.

BUT SPORTSMAN'S Park in Cicero does provide for families and has included some special, large rooms in its dormitories to accommodate them.

Sportsman's Park is considered exemplary in what it has provided on its backstretch. Lucy Reum, state racing board chairwoman say the conditions are good because Sportsman's has had "a better profit margin" in recent years than Arlington Park.

The Cicero track's handle last year for 42 thoroughbred racing days and 37 harness racing days totaled $123,933,596 compared with Arlington Park's $170,913,057 handle for 103 racing days.

Arlington Park officials say they have spent considerable sums to install sprinklers in all horse barns in the backstretch and upgrade the area, including building a $250,000, 127-room dormitory in 1976. Two other dorms have 159 rooms each.

Track officials point to classes offered at Harper College for backstretch workers and recreation like a softball league organized during the summer for employes.

BUT THEY HAVE allowed substandard living conditions to exist, placing the fault on the workers.

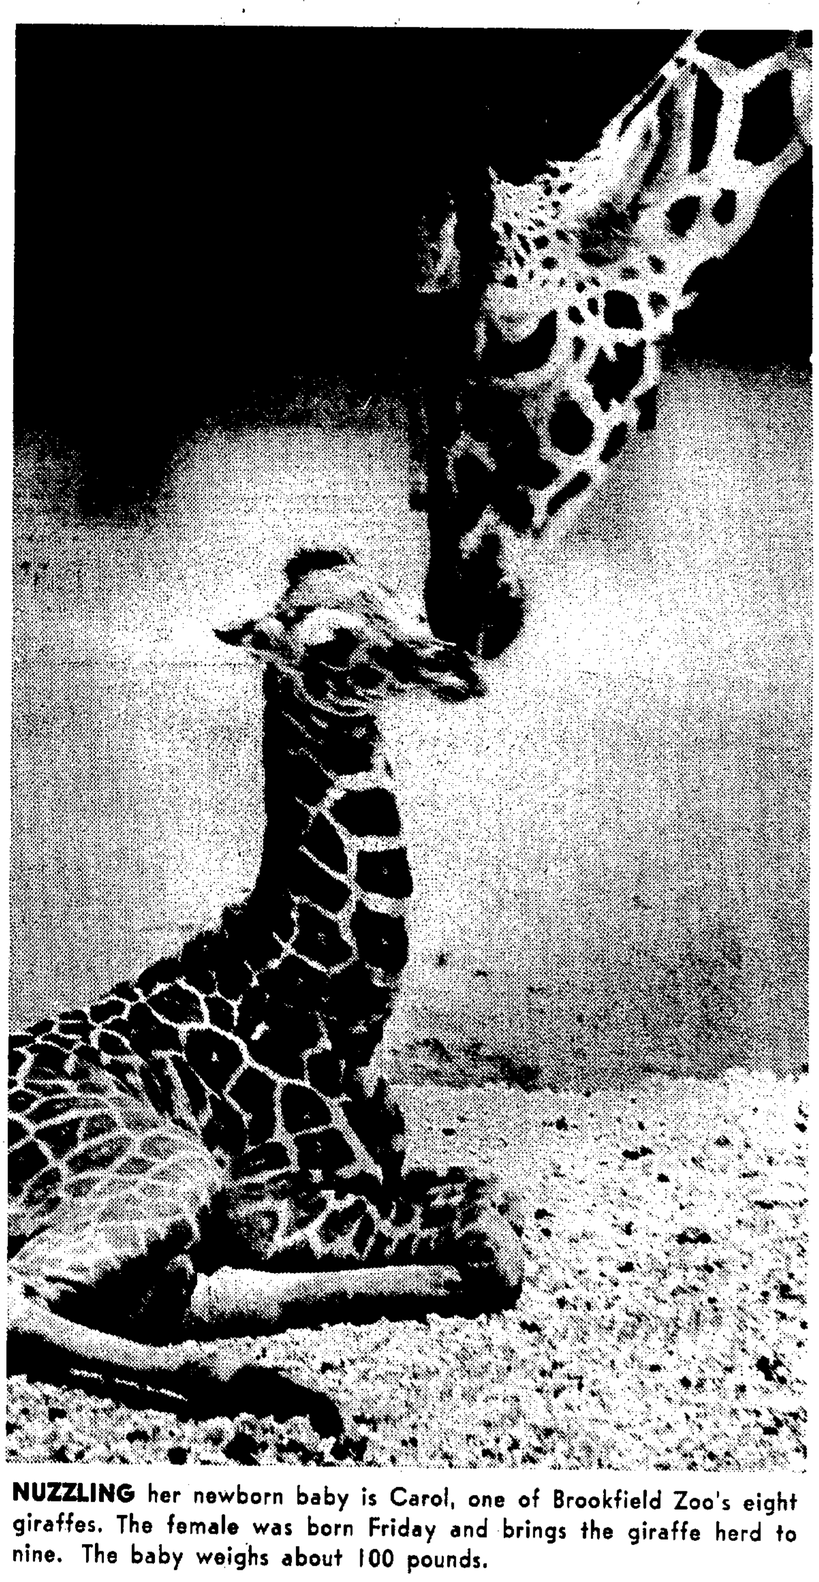

"You must bear in mind that grooms and hotwalkers are not our employes, they're the trainers' employes," Thayer said. Dormitory rooms are alloted to trainers who in turn assign their workers to them, he said.

The rooms are rent-free but require a $50 deposit to the race track. That is usually all the workers can afford on wages that average $150 per week.

"For some reason these people can't understand that the back side is their home," Thayer said. He said inspections, painting and repairs are made at the beginning of each racing season but that workers vandalize the area.

Parks seek loan to aid prairie farm

Arlington Heights Park District officials plan to seek bank loans to finance the purchase of additional land to build a historical prairie farm and garden park.

The park district already owns 10 acres on the proposed prairie farm site north of Golf Road at Belmont Avenue and Council Trail Road and now has been assured of receiving as much as $100,000 from the state to acquire an adjacent five acres.

The grant from the Ill. Dept. of Conservation is an agreement that the state will pay 50 per cent of the fair market value of the five-acre site, up to $100,000.

The appraised value of the land is $200,000, Parks Director Thomas Thornton said.

BECAUSE THE Dept. of Conservation's commitment expires June 30, 1978, the park district must proceed with attempts to get a bank loan for the $700,000 project.

The prairie farm development, planned for about three years, is envisioned as a recreation of a post-Civil War farm, complete with 100-year-old farm buildings, crops, an apple orchard and an orientation center to further show life on a prairie farm 100 years ago.

The park board has not approved any construction, but it has contemplated financing the project through the park's museum tax levy of 5 cents per $1,000 assessed valuation. The levy raises between $40,000 and $50,000 a year.

Receipts from the museum tax levy would have to be combined with land dedication money the park district receives from developers and admission receipts from the exhibit to pay off any bank loans on the project, Thornton said.

AN ECONOMIC feasibility report on the prairie farm proposal, recently completed by Preservation Urban Design Inc., of Ann Arbor, Mich., concludes the park district could finance and construct the entire project to open for the 1978 season. "There is little question the development would be economically feasible," the report states.

Thornton said a comprehensive proposal about the prairie farm will be prepared to assist park district officials in obtaining a bank loan for the project. He also is hopeful that some large agricultural firms will make donations to the project.

High school students probably will be asked to help with construction of the project, Thornton said.

"I think it will be a success if it's ever done," Thornton said.

House raises retirement age to 70

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House voted Friday to allow millions of Americans to continue working beyond the normal retirement age of 65.

The measure, passed on a 359-4 vote and sent to the Senate, would raise to age 70 the provisions of a 1967 law that prohibits employers from discriminating on the basis of age against persons 40 to 65 years old.

With some exceptions, that would mean employes in private enterprise throughout the country who now are required to retire at age 65 could continue working to age 70.

The bill, to take effect immediately on signing by President Carter, would eliminate entirely the normal mandatory retirement age of 70 for federal employes, leaving them with no upper age limit.

THE HOUSE rejected an effort by Rep. John Erlenborn, R-Ill., to delay the effect of the measure for two years after enactment.

Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill., a co-sponsor of the bill with Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., said "this is the most significant advance in civil rights in a decade. No longer will it be legal for employers to fire people just because they are 65."

Pepper, the 77-year-old chairman of the House Committee on Aging, brought a host of over-65 celebrities in and out of government and the entertainment world to testify before his panel on the need for the measure.

"THIS IS A restoration of the civil rights of the elderly not to be discharged from their job just because of an arbitrary ruling on age," said Pepper. "This is just as wrong as discrimination because of sex or race."

Twenty-two million Americans are age 65 and over. About 20 per cent of the men in this group and 8 per cent of the women still work.

At the urging of the AFL-CIO, the bill makes a concession regarding mandatory retirement provisions negotiated between management and labor in collective bargaining. In such cases its provisions would not take effect for two years or until the contract expires whichever comes first.

Partly because he is used to it.

Partly because the romance is gone.

FOR 35 YEARS, he worked with the gandy gangs and the hoggers. Thirty-five years of seeing that the morning mail got hung for the Hiawatha westbound to Elgin. Thirty-five years of handling the freight and taking the wires and selling the tickets to impatient customers standing in 10-minute lines that formed at his window five minutes before their scoot pulls out.

And now, Lorenz, sits in his home in Hanover Park and says he doesn't care any more.

If he never sees a train again, he says, it won't make that much difference to him.

"You miss the people you worked with," he concedes. "Naturally, when you see them again, the talk goes to railroading. I don't think that ever leaves you, but as far as going over to watch the trains going by, I never think about it."

He is 65 now, retired for three years after spending a big chunk of life with the Milwaukee Road.

For about 10 of those years, he was depot agent at the railway's Ontarioville station.

It was a different kind of railroading then, he says, and Ontarioville was a different kind of place.

"It was a small town. You knew all the people there, and I really liked railroading too," Lorenz recalls. "Rinne's tavern was right down the street, and on Friday nights, everybody would go over there."

LORENZ LIKED the town so well, that he decided to build his house there at 2061 Elm Ave.

That was in early 1950's.

It was years earlier that he got started with the railroad.

Hair samples linked to ape-man

SEATTLE (UPI) — A hunter of the legendary Sasquatch says their samples found in three different corners of the country may confirm that the shy seven-foot hairy ape-man really exists.

Jon Beckjord, director of Project Grendel, a group of 21 laymen and scientists interested in solving the Sasquatch mystery, claimed this week that the evidence provides "strong indications" that "a breeding population of such primates does in fact exist in the remoter areas of the U.S."

Beckjord said the three hair samples, found over the last two years in Washington, California, and Maryland, were analyzed by Tom D. Moore, forensic hair expert at the Wyoming Fish and Game Laboratory.

ACCORDING TO Beckjord, Moore concluded that the three samples probably came from the same species of animal but could not be identified as coming from a human being or any known Wyoming mammal, black bear, gorilla, chimpanzee, orangutan, gibbon, simian or langur monkey.

Moore also told Beckjord that the unknown hairs exhibited some characteristics found in primate hairs in general.

One of the hair samples, found on the Lummi Indian Reservation near Bellingham, Wash., had blood on it. Beckjord said the blood sample was tested by a University of California biochemist who reported that the blood came from a mammal, but not a bear, dog, or any carnivore.

WHILE THE analyzed samples do not actually "prove" the existence of Sasquatch primates, "they do represent a major milestone for research of this type," Beckjord said.

The Sasquatch hunter added that he tends to agree with a theory that the Sasquatch is descended from Gigantopithecus, a Chinese ape-man that Beckjord says may have migrated to North America across the Bering Straits 50,000 years ago.

He also said Sasquatch has been able to remain hidden all these years because the Pacific Northwest timberlands are so large and sparsely populated "you could probably hide a battalion of anything in those areas."

Woes greet mom jailed in custody case

CHICAGO (UPI) — Troubles are piling up for Margaret Bejnarowicz, who gained custody of her 7-year-old son after an international clash with her ex-husband, a lawyer said Friday.

Mrs. Bejnarowicz Thursday was pushed down a flight of stairs at Cook County Jail where she is serving a 30-day contempt sentence for taking the child, Wojciech, the lawyer, Mel Sloan, said.

She was treated at Cermak Hospital, the jail hospital, for a head injury and bruises and returned to her cell.

Sloan called for removal of Mrs. Bejnarowicz from the jail. She is a British subject, he said, and an international treaty prohibits jailing of criminal and civil prisoners together.

Sheriff Richard Elrod said the county does not have other facilities. However, Sloan said Mrs. Bejnarowicz could be housed in facilities for witnesses or at a YWCA under guard.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Bejnarowicz still does not know where her son is. He disappeared with his father about the time a judge granted Mrs. Bejnarowicz custody.

The father, Dr. Zygmunt Bejnarowicz, a dentist, took the child from his mothar on a London street last December after a five-year search for the boy.

Hair samples linked to ape-man

SEATTLE (UPI) — A hunter of the legendary Sasquatch says their samples found in three different corners of the country may confirm that the shy seven-foot hairy ape-man really exists.

Jon Beckjord, director of Project Grendel, a group of 21 laymen and scientists interested in solving the Sasquatch mystery, claimed this week that the evidence provides "strong indications" that "a breeding population of such primates does in fact exist in the remoter areas of the U.S."

Beckjord said the three hair samples, found over the last two years in Washington, California, and Maryland, were analyzed by Tom D. Moore, forensic hair expert at the Wyoming Fish and Game Laboratory.

FORMER ONTARIOVILLE depot agent Theodore Lorenz was a railroad man for 35 years and can remember the days when hoboes walked the tracks and the mail went into Elgin on a fast freight. Today, he says, computers have taken the thrill out of railroading.

"I just learned railroading from a fellow in the depot," he says. "In those days, you took anything that you could find for a job, and this looked as promising as anything."

He started out at 55 cents an hour, doing janitorial work around the station and filling in for vacationing agents. He liked Ontarioville, he says, and was first in line when the position opened.

He remembers those chilly winter mornings. He'd get to the train station at 6 a.m., open his window and pour coal in the old stove heater.

And sometimes when he'd come in, he would find a hobo still sleeping in there or he'd see one walking down the tracks.

"They used to be here all the time in the summer months," he says. "A lot of those fellows that I have talked to, they move from north to south and south to north, working their way."

And he remembers the men from the gandy gang camps down near Madison Street in Chicago. They did temporary work for the railroad, tying rail and putting in tiles, but mostly they waited for work.

"They were generally a bunch of drunks," Lorenze says. "Some of them were tough. Some of them were jelly fish. You couldn't say anything about them as to character except they were drunks."

AND HE REMEMBERS when the students from Ontarioville used to take the train in to Elgin for school each day. He tried and tried, Lorenz says, to talk Milwaukee Road's management into a special price for students, but by the time they heeded his advice, the schools started busing and it didn't make any difference.

And he remembers the sounds, those sounds that he says don't mean much to him any more.

"A funny thing, when you heard the sound of the train going down the track," he says, "you could immediately tell if the train had a flat wheel or if something was wrong.

"You immediately know. You can hear it.

"When I worked at different stations, I use to carry a cot, and do my cooking on those old coal stoves. The only time you'd wake up would be when there was something wrong. You'd hear the clatter out there."

NOW THOUGH, those days are gone, Lorenz says. The Milwaukee Road started closing down the small depots in 1955, and the Ontarioville station was one of the first to go. He switched to a depot in Roselle and then one in Spaulding, and now he is retired, and retirement isn't that tough, he says.

He doesn't care that a new station and parking lot is being built in Hanover Park. He might take a stroll over there to get a peek once it's finished, he says, but it doesn't much matter to him, he never takes a train.

It wasn't so much railroading that changed, he says, as it was management.

The people running the railroads from downtown are ruining it, he says. They don't know what effects their decisions have on outlying depots, he says, and they don't listen if a local depot agent tries to tell them.

"I wouldn't go back to railroading for any money," Lorenz maintains. "The fun is all gone out of railroading. It's just a matter of dog eat dog. Computers instead of people.

"A BUNCH of young guys up there with pencils and paper who don't know a box car from a gondola." So, he says, it is out of his blood. He will take his two coffee breaks a day down at Gus' and putter around the house and work in his garden and vacation in Brownsville, Tex.

And he won't even think about railroading, he says, he doesn't miss it.

Yet, there are times when he's out on the road driving, and a big string of freight cars pulls past.

As they clatter by, he can't keep himself from staring.

"I still have to look around to see how many Milwaukee cars go by," Lorenz says. "I can't help it."

Carter plans 4-continent, 11-day jaunt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter will make an 11-day swing through four continents — including the first presidential visit to black Africa — in late November "to promote the sort of world we all want to live in," the White House announced Friday.

The 24,000 mile, eight-nation trip to Latin America Africa East and West Europe and Asia will be the second overseas trip of Carter's presidency — and an extravaganza reminiscent of the globe-trotting that marked the Nixon and Johnson presidencies.

Besides the African stop in Nigeria, the Nov. 22-Dec. 2 tour will take Carter inside the Soviet bloc, to Poland, for the first time; and to three major nonArab oil exporters — Venezuela, Iran and Nigeria — whose friendship would be crucial in the event of another oil embargo.

Carter said during his presidential campaign he would spend most of his first year in office in Washington, and to skip dramatic, time-consuming overseas jaunts during that period.

THE WHITE HOUSE advised the news media Thursday, the morning after budget director Bert Lance announced his resignation that Carter would have an "important" announcement to make Friday morning. It proved to be the prospective grand tour outlined by National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski.

"His preference is to stay at home," Brzezinski said in response to questions about the timing of the trip. "This trip, however, does seem to us to be important. It reflects continued efforts to promote the sort of world we all want to live in."

Others noted that Congress will be adjourned during Carter's trip and that his travel options will be limited through much of 1978 — an election year in which he has promised to campaign intensively for Democrats and to lobby hard for such major unfinished legislative business as the Panama Canal treaties.

Carter attended a two-day summit of non-Communist industrial nations in London in May.

His travel itinerary:

Leave Washington Nov. 22, for Caracas, Venezuela; to Brasilia, Brazil, Nov. 23; to Lagos, Nigeria, Nov. 24; in New Delhi, India Nov. 27-28; a lunch stop in Tehran, Iran, Nov. 29; to Paris Nov. 9; to Warsaw, Dec. 1; to Brussels Dec. 2; and return to Washington the afternoon of Dec. 2.

Brzezinski gave these assessments of the host countries:

- Venezuela — "A leading democracy in Latin America, heavily engaged in global development, playing a leading role in international economic cooperation."
- Brazil — "A traditional friend . . . playing a very important role in the world scene, particularly in regards to international economic system."
- Nigeria — "A most important African country . . . which has played a constructive and moderating role in dealing with African security and politics." No plans have been made to meet with other African leaders in Lagos, "but I see no reason . . . to exclude the possibility."
- India — " A country which has again reaffirmed its commitment to democracy . . . whose policy now of genuine nonalignment we respect."
- Iran — Plays "a major regional role" and is a traditional ally, getting U.S. arms and economic aid and furnishing oil.
- France — "One of our oldest allies."
- Poland — "Our relations with Poland are an important expression of our efforts to promote peaceful accommodation and constructive detente."
- Belgium — Brussels is NATO and Common Market headquarters, and Carter will confer with leaders of both.

Gas firm cuts service to 8,000

CRYSTAL CITY, Tex. (UPI) — LoVaca Gathering Co., one of the major distributors of natural gas in the state, Friday cut service to the 8,000 residents of this impoverished South Texas community because it failed to pay $800,000 in delinquent bills.

While residents bought electric stove to replace their gas stoves and stockpiled wood to heat their homes, city leaders promised to continue their fight against what they said were illegal and unjust rate hikes.

"LoVaca is raping people as far as rates are concerned," said Crystal City legal aid attorney Paul D. Rich, who failed in an eleventh hour attempt before the Texas Supreme Court to keep gas flowing to the prairie town.

"YOU'RE GOING TO see a lot of cold, ill people this winter," he said. "And perhaps a lot of deaths also."

Most of the residents of the town, located about 130 miles southwest of San Antonio, are Mexican-Americans. More than half receive some form of welfare.

In January, 1975, Crystal City stopped paying its bills to protest an interim rate increase which threatened to raise the city's costs from 36 cents to $2 per 1,000 cubic feet.

After two years of legal battles, a supervisor in Corpus Christi, Tex., flipped a switch in the computerized control complex Friday morning to begin depressuring the lines. Twenty-six minutes later, the final valve had closed.

THE GIANT utility company had claimed that the community had had more than enough time to pay the delinquent bills — estimated to be about $800,000 — and said it was time to end a two-year "litigational circus."

"Other customers are watching," LoVaca said. "They cannot understand the discrimination that's going on — why they have to pay the rates and Crystal City doesn't."

There were indications that the legal battle was far from over.

"AT THIS POINT we're pursuing the lawsuit in Bexar County under the Texas deceptive trade practices act alleging overcharges by LoVaca," said Austin attorney Peter Torres, another legal representative for Crystal City. "We hope for an early resolution of the suit."

In Washington, Mayor Francisco Benavides met with local congressmen and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen Jr., D-Tex., and said he hoped to speak with members of the Federal Power Commission to see if the FPC could intervene.

Mrs. Benito Macias said residents were taking the loss of gas in stride.

"We have a camper we use for vacation which has a butane stove," she said. "I guess I'll be going out to the camper to cook supper until we provide other means. I have an electric fry pan. And of course you can always go outside and have a barbeque."

Concorde not welcome at O'Hare, Bilandic says

corde will be allowed to continue landing at Washington's Dulles International Airport where it has been in operaton on a trial basis for the past 16 months.

Adams also said the administration "continues to support a trial period of up to four Concorde flights a day into (New York's) Kennedy Airport, pending a decision on the final SST noise rule and subject to court action."

THE NEW YORK trial was authorized at the same time as the Dulles trial. But local opposition and a court battle have kept service to Kennedy from starting.

In one neighborhood over which jets from O'Hare fly low, reaction to the Carter announcement was swift, sure and predictable.

"I'm not too happy about it," said Patricia Galla, 2720 Scott St., Des Plaines. Mrs. Galla recently started a mail campaign to Carter and other federal officials, in hopes of fighting O'Hare landings of the Concorde.

"I just don't feel the Concorde should be landing in the United States," Mrs. Galla said. "Because of the noise and because of the environmental impact."

Up the street a block, Eva Hahn protested what she views as other nations forcing the Concorde upon the U.S.

"I hate to see other nations tell us what to do," she said, referring to Great Britain and France, manufacturers of the Concorde. "And if they don't do something about the noise, then we shouldn't allow it here."

BUT MRS. HAHN, who with her family lives at 2613 Scott St., Des Plaines, said her family isn't yet ready to move.

"Where are we going to go?" she asked, a futile tone to her voice.

Mrs. Hahn, her husband and three children all signed the letters from Mrs. Galla's mail campaign. "Maybe that will help."

Across Scott Street, Betty Ackerholm said she spoke both for herself and her husband, Glenn, when she said, "We've got all the noise we can stand now."

But neither will the Ackerholms move.

"House prices are just too high," she said.

Legislation introduced against racial quotas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two House members prompted by a "reverse discrimination" case before the Supreme Court, Friday introduced legislation to bar the government from imposing racial quotas in hiring or school admissions.

Representatives Bob Walker, R-Pa., and Elliott Levitas, D-Ga., said about 20 other House members support their bill which, according to Walker, would not interfere with "affirmative action" programs to combat discrimination.

Walker and Levitas said their move was prompted by the case of Allan Bakke, a 37-year-old white who cliamed his application to the University of California Medical School at Davis was rejected because the school set aside a specific number of admissions for minorities.

THE SUPREME COURT opens its new term Oct. 3 and will hear arguments in the Bakke case the following week. The U.S. Justice Dept. has prepared a brief in which it will ask the court to return the case to the California Supreme Court without ruling directly on the quota issue.

The California court agreed with Bakke that the medical school discriminated against him because it set aside 16 of 100 admission openings for members of minority groups.

In its brief made public Monday, the Justice Dept. steered clear of the quota issue but said race, and the effects of discrimination in the past, should be taken into account in school admission programs.

Walker told a news conference," "That brief takes a far too narrow view of the implications contained in the Bakke case." He said the bill he and Levitas are sponsoring would outlaw strict quotas while allowing use of "goals or timetables" in opening up jobs and education to minorities."

FORMER ONTARIOVILLE depot agent Theodore Lorenz was a railroad man for 35 years and can remember the days when hoboes walked the tracks and the mail went into Elgin on a fast freight. Today, he says, computers have taken the thrill out of railroading.

"I just learned railroading from a fellow in the depot," he says. "In those days, you took anything that you could find for a job, and this looked as promising as anything."

He started out at 55 cents an hour, doing janitorial work around the station and filling in for vacationing agents. He liked Ontarioville, he says, and was first in line when the position opened.

He remembers those chilly winter mornings. He'd get to the train station at 6 a.m., open his window and pour coal in the old stove heater.

And sometimes when he'd come in, he would find a hobo still sleeping in there or he'd see one walking down the tracks.

"They used to be here all the time in the summer months," he says. "A lot of those fellows that I have talked to, they move from north to south and south to north, working their way."

And he remembers the men from the gandy gang camps down near Madison Street in Chicago. They did temporary work for the railroad, tying rail and putting in tiles, but mostly they waited for work.

"They were generally a bunch of drunks," Lorenze says. "Some of them were tough. Some of them were jelly fish. You couldn't say anything about them as to character except they were drunks."

AND HE REMEMBERS when the students from Ontarioville used to take the train in to Elgin for school each day. He tried and tried, Lorenz says, to talk Milwaukee Road's management into a special price for students, but by the time they heeded his advice, the schools started busing and it didn't make any difference.

And he remembers the sounds, those sounds that he says don't mean much to him any more.

"A funny thing, when you heard the sound of the train going down the track," he says, "you could immediately tell if the train had a flat wheel or if something was wrong.

"You immediately know. You can hear it.

"When I worked at different stations, I use to carry a cot, and do my cooking on those old coal stoves. The only time you'd wake up would be when there was something wrong. You'd hear the clatter out there."

NOW THOUGH, those days are gone, Lorenz says. The Milwaukee Road started closing down the small depots in 1955, and the Ontarioville station was one of the first to go. He switched to a depot in Roselle and then one in Spaulding, and now he is retired, and retirement isn't that tough, he says.

He doesn't care that a new station and parking lot is being built in Hanover Park. He might take a stroll over there to get a peek once it's finished, he says, but it doesn't much matter to him, he never takes a train.

It wasn't so much railroading that changed, he says, as it was management.

The people running the railroads from downtown are ruining it, he says. They don't know what effects their decisions have on outlying depots, he says, and they don't listen if a local depot agent tries to tell them.

"I wouldn't go back to railroading for any money," Lorenz maintains. "The fun is all gone out of railroading. It's just a matter of dog eat dog. Computers instead of people.

"A BUNCH of young guys up there with pencils and paper who don't know a box car from a gondola." So, he says, it is out of his blood. He will take his two coffee breaks a day down at Gus' and putter around the house and work in his garden and vacation in Brownsville, Tex.

And he won't even think about railroading, he says, he doesn't miss it.

Yet, there are times when he's out on the road driving, and a big string of freight cars pulls past.

As they clatter by, he can't keep himself from staring.

"I still have to look around to see how many Milwaukee cars go by," Lorenz says. "I can't help it."

Gas firm cuts service to 8,000

CRYSTAL CITY, Tex. (UPI) — LoVaca Gathering Co., one of the major distributors of natural gas in the state, Friday cut service to the 8,000 residents of this impoverished South Texas community because it failed to pay $800,000 in delinquent bills.

While residents bought electric stove to replace their gas stoves and stockpiled wood to heat their homes, city leaders promised to continue their fight against what they said were illegal and unjust rate hikes.

"LoVaca is raping people as far as rates are concerned," said Crystal City legal aid attorney Paul D. Rich, who failed in an eleventh hour attempt before the Texas Supreme Court to keep gas flowing to the prairie town.

"YOU'RE GOING TO see a lot of cold, ill people this winter," he said. "And perhaps a lot of deaths also."

Most of the residents of the town, located about 130 miles southwest of San Antonio, are Mexican-Americans. More than half receive some form of welfare.

In January, 1975, Crystal City stopped paying its bills to protest an interim rate increase which threatened to raise the city's costs from 36 cents to $2 per 1,000 cubic feet.

After two years of legal battles, a supervisor in Corpus Christi, Tex., flipped a switch in the computerized control complex Friday morning to begin depressuring the lines. Twenty-six minutes later, the final valve had closed.

THE GIANT utility company had claimed that the community had had more than enough time to pay the delinquent bills — estimated to be about $800,000 — and said it was time to end a two-year "litigational circus."

"Other customers are watching," LoVaca said. "They cannot understand the discrimination that's going on — why they have to pay the rates and Crystal City doesn't."

There were indications that the legal battle was far from over.

"AT THIS POINT we're pursuing the lawsuit in Bexar County under the Texas deceptive trade practices act alleging overcharges by LoVaca," said Austin attorney Peter Torres, another legal representative for Crystal City. "We hope for an early resolution of the suit."

In Washington, Mayor Francisco Benavides met with local congressmen and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen Jr., D-Tex., and said he hoped to speak with members of the Federal Power Commission to see if the FPC could intervene.

Mrs. Benito Macias said residents were taking the loss of gas in stride.

"We have a camper we use for vacation which has a butane stove," she said. "I guess I'll be going out to the camper to cook supper until we provide other means. I have an electric fry pan. And of course you can always go outside and have a barbeque."

Legislation introduced against racial quotas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two House members prompted by a "reverse discrimination" case before the Supreme Court, Friday introduced legislation to bar the government from imposing racial quotas in hiring or school admissions.

Representatives Bob Walker, R-Pa., and Elliott Levitas, D-Ga., said about 20 other House members support their bill which, according to Walker, would not interfere with "affirmative action" programs to combat discrimination.

Walker and Levitas said their move was prompted by the case of Allan Bakke, a 37-year-old white who cliamed his application to the University of California Medical School at Davis was rejected because the school set aside a specific number of admissions for minorities.

THE SUPREME COURT opens its new term Oct. 3 and will hear arguments in the Bakke case the following week. The U.S. Justice Dept. has prepared a brief in which it will ask the court to return the case to the California Supreme Court without ruling directly on the quota issue.

The California court agreed with Bakke that the medical school discriminated against him because it set aside 16 of 100 admission openings for members of minority groups.

In its brief made public Monday, the Justice Dept. steered clear of the quota issue but said race, and the effects of discrimination in the past, should be taken into account in school admission programs.

Walker told a news conference," "That brief takes a far too narrow view of the implications contained in the Bakke case." He said the bill he and Levitas are sponsoring would outlaw strict quotas while allowing use of "goals or timetables" in opening up jobs and education to minorities."

Carter plans 4-continent, 11-day jaunt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter will make an 11-day swing through four continents — including the first presidential visit to black Africa — in late November "to promote the sort of world we all want to live in," the White House announced Friday.

The 24,000 mile, eight-nation trip to Latin America Africa East and West Europe and Asia will be the second overseas trip of Carter's presidency — and an extravaganza reminiscent of the globe-trotting that marked the Nixon and Johnson presidencies.

Besides the African stop in Nigeria, the Nov. 22-Dec. 2 tour will take Carter inside the Soviet bloc, to Poland, for the first time; and to three major nonArab oil exporters — Venezuela, Iran and Nigeria — whose friendship would be crucial in the event of another oil embargo.

Carter said during his presidential campaign he would spend most of his first year in office in Washington, and to skip dramatic, time-consuming overseas jaunts during that period.

THE WHITE HOUSE advised the news media Thursday, the morning after budget director Bert Lance announced his resignation that Carter would have an "important" announcement to make Friday morning. It proved to be the prospective grand tour outlined by National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski.

"His preference is to stay at home," Brzezinski said in response to questions about the timing of the trip. "This trip, however, does seem to us to be important. It reflects continued efforts to promote the sort of world we all want to live in."

Others noted that Congress will be adjourned during Carter's trip and that his travel options will be limited through much of 1978 — an election year in which he has promised to campaign intensively for Democrats and to lobby hard for such major unfinished legislative business as the Panama Canal treaties.

Carter attended a two-day summit of non-Communist industrial nations in London in May.

His travel itinerary:

Leave Washington Nov. 22, for Caracas, Venezuela; to Brasilia, Brazil, Nov. 23; to Lagos, Nigeria, Nov. 24; in New Delhi, India Nov. 27-28; a lunch stop in Tehran, Iran, Nov. 29; to Paris Nov. 9; to Warsaw, Dec. 1; to Brussels Dec. 2; and return to Washington the afternoon of Dec. 2.

Brzezinski gave these assessments of the host countries:

- Venezuela — "A leading democracy in Latin America, heavily engaged in global development, playing a leading role in international economic cooperation."
- Brazil — "A traditional friend . . . playing a very important role in the world scene, particularly in regards to international economic system."
- Nigeria — "A most important African country . . . which has played a constructive and moderating role in dealing with African security and politics." No plans have been made to meet with other African leaders in Lagos, "but I see no reason . . . to exclude the possibility."
- India — " A country which has again reaffirmed its commitment to democracy . . . whose policy now of genuine nonalignment we respect."
- Iran — Plays "a major regional role" and is a traditional ally, getting U.S. arms and economic aid and furnishing oil.
- France — "One of our oldest allies."
- Poland — "Our relations with Poland are an important expression of our efforts to promote peaceful accommodation and constructive detente."
- Belgium — Brussels is NATO and Common Market headquarters, and Carter will confer with leaders of both.

corde will be allowed to continue landing at Washington's Dulles International Airport where it has been in operaton on a trial basis for the past 16 months.

Adams also said the administration "continues to support a trial period of up to four Concorde flights a day into (New York's) Kennedy Airport, pending a decision on the final SST noise rule and subject to court action."

THE NEW YORK trial was authorized at the same time as the Dulles trial. But local opposition and a court battle have kept service to Kennedy from starting.

In one neighborhood over which jets from O'Hare fly low, reaction to the Carter announcement was swift, sure and predictable.

"I'm not too happy about it," said Patricia Galla, 2720 Scott St., Des Plaines. Mrs. Galla recently started a mail campaign to Carter and other federal officials, in hopes of fighting O'Hare landings of the Concorde.

"I just don't feel the Concorde should be landing in the United States," Mrs. Galla said. "Because of the noise and because of the environmental impact."

Up the street a block, Eva Hahn protested what she views as other nations forcing the Concorde upon the U.S.

"I hate to see other nations tell us what to do," she said, referring to Great Britain and France, manufacturers of the Concorde. "And if they don't do something about the noise, then we shouldn't allow it here."

BUT MRS. HAHN, who with her family lives at 2613 Scott St., Des Plaines, said her family isn't yet ready to move.

"Where are we going to go?" she asked, a futile tone to her voice.

Mrs. Hahn, her husband and three children all signed the letters from Mrs. Galla's mail campaign. "Maybe that will help."

Across Scott Street, Betty Ackerholm said she spoke both for herself and her husband, Glenn, when she said, "We've got all the noise we can stand now."

But neither will the Ackerholms move.

"House prices are just too high," she said.

Thompson acts on election bills

by STEVE BROWN

Of our Springfield bureau

SPRINGFIELD — Gov. James R. Thompson acted on three controversial election measures Friday: signing the election consolidation bill, changing provisions extending voting hours to 7 p.m. and approving a bill strengthening GOP power in the suburbs.

The governor's action will consolidate all elections in Illinois and limit the number of tax increase referendums that can be scheduled.

Thompson also used his amendatory veto to alter a bill, sponsored by State Rep. Roger Stanley, R-Streamwood, to extend polling place hours from 6 p.m. until 7 p.m. The measure was designed to help suburban commuters who arrive home after 6 p.m., but a series of legislative moves had amended the bill so that the suburbs would not have benefited from the extra hour.

HE ALSO APPROVED a measure backed by State Rep. Donald L. Totten, R-Hoffman Estates, that will apportion delegates to national political conventions according to a complex formula that generally will give more delegates to congressional districts according to party strength.

In the past, GOP strongholds in the suburbs received the same number of delegates as weaker Republican areas in the city. The new measure will give Republicans greater strength in suburban districts, while Democrats will gain power in the cities.

The governor also called on the Illinois General Assembly to conduct a special session beginning Oct. 24 to correct flaws in the consolidated elections bill.

LEGISLATION TO delay the effective date of the bill until 1981 will be introduced by State Sen. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, sponsor of the consolidated election bill.

The delay, Regner said, would give legislators one to 1½ years to "develop changes and work out the problems."

Without the delay local officials elected to four-year terms last spring would have to seek reelection in 1979.

Local officials also had complained that the new bill would cause problems with establishing precincts for elections by including schools, park district, library and municipal elections on the same date.

Thompson's action on the longer voting hours could jeopardize the future of that measure. Chicago Democrats opposed the bill because it would give the heavily Republican suburbs a better chance to turn out voters.

Stanley feared that an amendatory veto, which must be sustained by the legislature, could give the Democrats another chance to defeat the measure, which passed by narrow margins in both chambers of the legislature in June.

Gag Brisbon if he interrupts: judge

Henry Brisbon, charged with robbing and killing two persons on Interstate 57 four years ago, will be gagged or removed from the courtroom if he interrupts testimony of witnesses again, a judge says.

Brisbon, 21, Chicago, stood up Friday while his cousin, Venice Brisbon, 21, Chicago, was testifying against him and said, "Is it going to help me if you sit up there and tell that lie?" Miss Brisbon was telling the jury Brisbon came to her family's home June 3,1973, the night of the slayings, and told her and her friends that he and three othr men had killed Dorothy Therese Cerny and her fiance, James Schmidt, both 25, that night. Brisbon watched the proceedings with his hands clenched and his lips pursed for several minutes before interrupting the testimony. Cook County Circuit Court Judge James M. Bailey had the jury removed from the courtroom and called Brisbon before the bench. Brisbon sat without moving and Bailey again ordered him to stand.

Ex-vehicle chief Carter indicted

Former Chicago public vehicle license commissioner James Y. Carter has been indicted by a federal grand jury on charges he extorted money from taxicab operators he was charged with regulating. Carter, a former state representative, also was charged with income tax evasion. Assistant U.S. Attty. Walter Jones Jr. Friday said Carter, 62, could be sentenced to as much as 175 years in prison and fined $120,000 if he is convicted on all counts of the indictment.

The 13-count indictment charged Carter "engaged in a pattern of extortion by demanding and receiving about $138,000 from nine taxicab operators" from 1962 through 1975.

'Could pad bid': Ingram official

An official of Ingram Barge Inc. says a Metropolitan Sanitary District official told him he could pad the firm's bid for a sludge-hauling contract by $1 million and still get the contract. Francis Obergie, executive vice president of Ingram Barge, Oak Brook, a subsidiary of Ingram Corp., New Orleans, testified Friday he raised the bid after Valentine Janicki, sanitary district vice president, told him April 15, 1971, Ingram could without losing the contract. The contract, awarded seven days later, eventually paid Ingram $43 million for hauling treated sewage from Chicago to Fulton County farmland. Oberle said William Benton, former Ingram vice president, also told him to go ahead and increase the bid. Benton has been the prosecution's key witness in the trial. The government alleges bribes totaled $1.2 million.

Deaf mute remains in custody

Donald Lang, a deaf mute charged with murdering two women, remains in the custody of the Illinois Dept. of Mental Health althought the department says he is not mentally ill and his rights are being violated. Cook County Circuit Court Judge Joseph Schneider Friday extended a temporary restraining order forbidding the department from releasing Lang. Lang, 32, twice was convicted of murder but those verdicts were overturned by courts which held that Lang, who cannot read, write, speak or hear, is unable to communicate with his attorneys.

Linda Madden may leave Wyler

Linda Madden, a 17-year-old Colorado Springs girl who has undergone treatment with an experimental drug, may leave Wyler Children's Hospital Saturday. Linda's doctor and family have been looking without success for a suitable nursing home in the Chicago area and have considered taking her back to Colorado Springs. However, they hope she can remain near Wyler, where she was administered the drug. A spokesman at Wyler said Friday night Linda would stay the night but he said she might leave Saturday. Linda suffers from a rare form of encephalitis. She has been treated with Isoprinosine at Wyler.

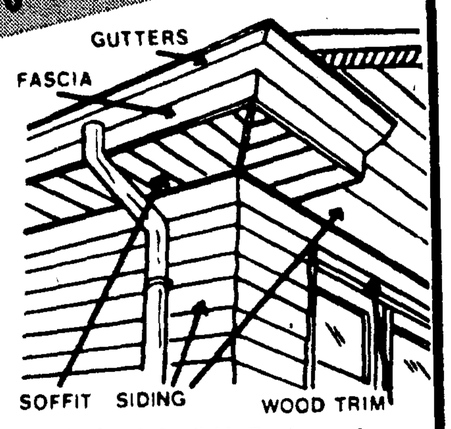

Cops' convictions overturned

U.S. District Court Judge Frank J. McGarr has overturned the conviction of two Chicago policemen who were found guilty on charges of failure to report a heroin purchase, it was revealed Friday. Patrolmen Charles Blasco, 38, and Donald Jennings, 47, were found guilty on Sept. 17 be a jury of failing to report a heroin purchase carried out by one of their informants. McGarr, in his decision, noted the jury deliberated a full day, then declared itself "hopelessly deadlocked" before resuming deliberations and finally reaching a verdict. He also said he doubted the credibility of the government's witnesses, most of whom were admitted dope dealers.

Families cope with house lag in Levitt development

by THOMAS J. MOORE

The David Barth family — formerly of Schaumburg, currently of Palatine and desperately trying to move to Buffalo Grove — has hit a few snags with their new house.

The family contracted last October to buy a house in Strathmore Grove, a Levitt and Sons Inc. development in the Lake County section of Buffalo Grove, and expected to move in last July. Instead, the four-member family is living in a one-bedroom apartment in Palatine, and the completion date of their new house has been moved up to late October.

"It's caused a tremendous amount of inconvenience," Barth said. "And nobody has said, 'We're sorry'."

Joel Aronson hasn't had to wait as long for his new house in Buffalo Grove. Not yet anyway.

He signed a contract in January that called for a delivery date no later than Sept. 15. The delivery date has been moved twice and Aronson now hopes to move in Nov. 22.

ARONSON, AN accountant who works out of his Lake Zurich home, sold his present home in May and told the buyer he could move in Oct. 1. With that date only a week away, Aronson is beginning to explore the possibilities of what he can do until his new house is finished.

"Finding alternate residence is the big problem," Aronson said. "There is some financial hardship but it's primarily the invonvenience and what do you do with it."

Both the Barths and Aronsons enrolled their children in Kildeer Elementary School in Long Grove, anticipating being in their new houses around the time school started.

"The kids are kind of cut off from making new friends because they have to leave the area right after school and can't play with the other children," Barth said.

ARONSON AND Barth are among at least 16 families that have purchased houses in Strathmore Grove northeast of Arlington Heights Road and Ill. Rte. 83 and are waiting to see those $65,000 to $85,000 houses finished. Some of those 16 families plan to get together today to discuss their common plight and what can be done about it. One alternative to be considered is picketing Levitt operations on Sunday as a protest of the delays.

"Really, all we want is our house," Aronson said. "Time is of the essence to the buyer but it means nothing to the seller."

The delays in completing houses are common to the building trade, according to Richard Kobylski, assistant vice president for sales and marketing for Levitt homes in Schiller Park.

WEATHER LAST winter is the culprit in the delays. Kobylski said severe cold idled not only the construction companies but the makers of bricks, whose furnaces are fired with natural gas.

The cold brought increased demand for home insulation around the country and manufacturers have been unable to meet the demand.

Levitt was placed on an insulation allocation that cut the number of area houses finished in a week from 35 to 10. A second insulation supplier was found and the company is now able to produce at the rate of 20-25 houses a week. The rate in Buffalo Grove is six to eight.

"We're doing everything we possibly can to get these homes completed the right way," Kobylski said.

THE COMPANY has received telephone calls and letters from those facing delays, but no one has asked to be let out of his deal.

"To date, I haven't given anybody money back because of delays," Kobylski said. "Everybody is willing to wait."

He said it is to the firm's advantage to finish the houses as quickly as possible.

"It's costing more money to build now. Levitt is taking it on the chin," Kobylski said.

MEANWHILE, THE buyers see little recourse. The purchase contract allows for a delay of up to nine months should shortages or bad weather occur. And some buyers, including Barth, had no delivery date on the original contract on which to base the nine-month extension.

An appeal to the Buffalo Grove village board this week for help in speeding construction failed to bring action.

William G. Raysa, village attorney, advised the trustees, "Based upon the facts that I have, the village should not enter into a dispute between the seller and purchasers."

A 110-POUND FALCON with a 12-foot wing span came to rest on the wall of Forest View High School Thursday. The sculpture, made by Elgin artist Barry Sweeny, right, is a gift to the school from the Class of 1977 and was received by class counselor Ken Kaleta. Made of aluminum alloy, the sculpture took Sweeny 500 hours to complete and cost the class $1,500.

Arlington Terrace road repairs start next week

After 13 months of dodging potholes, wrecking tires and paying for front end alignments, the residents of Arlington Terrace subdivision will get some relief next week.

Their problems began in August of 1976 when Rolling and Michael Manor lanes, Waterman Road and Dale Avenue south of Palatine Road were torn up to make way for a new sewage line designed to eliminate basement flooding and sewage backup in the Arlington Heights area.

Since then work to repair the streets has been delayed by cold weather and a disagreement over interpretation of the type of material specified in the contract, Village Engineer Al Sander said.

Earlier this week equipment was moved into the area and Sander promised work will begin Monday and be completed within a week.

The subcontractors are Stephen Bros. of Elgin and Peter Baker Paving Company of Lake County, Sander said. The money paid the original contractor, Ziegler & Sons Construction Co. of Round Lake, will pay for the repair project.

Those living in the area welcome the repairs.

As one area resident, Mrs. James Enright of 2307 E. Michael Manor Ln., said, "They tell us to be patient, but after a while your patience runs out."

On active duty in armed forces

On active duty with the armed forces are these Palatine residents: Air Force Capt. Paul A. Skopal, an instructor pilot, has been assigned to Mather AFB, Kenneth L. Ritz is participating in the Naval Academy's summer training program. He is a midshipman second class scheduled to graduate in 1979.

Lt. Joseph H. Puca, a pilot with a unit of the Air Forces in Europe, has arrived for duty at Hahn AB, Germany....Airman William C. Milbourn has been assigned to duty with the Air Force Systems Command, Kirkland AFB, N.M.

Higher prices suggested

Rob Roy plan changes told panel

A higher-priced development with fewer dwellings could replace a proposed high-density development for Rob Roy Country Club at no monetary loss to the seller, the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals was told Friday.

The board heard final arguments from Prospect Heights representatives as to why the county should not rezone the unincorporated 180-acre tract from single-family to general residence.

The proposed development would contain 995 apartments, condominiums and houses with a nine-acre golf course.

THOMAS M. COLLINS, of Elmhurst, an appraiser for the city of Propect Heights, said a development of 450 higher-priced units and an 18-hole golf course would give the seller the same land value. Approximately $25,000-$30,000 per acre.

Such a project would be permissable under present zoning, he said.

Rob Roy is owned by Patrick McDonald, 401 E. Camp McDonald Rd., Prospect Heights, who wants to sell it to the developer, Anthony Pasquinelli of Flossmoor.

"When an objector — offers an alternative and gives you the same land value while giving twice the open space, that's a significant choice," Board Chairman Alex Seith said, after hearing Collins' testimony.

Land value and open space are both important considerations, he said.

The appraiser for the developer countered that higher-priced units would not sell in the area of Rob Roy, Wheeling and Euclid roads.

However, neither he nor Collins would produce an estimated price for a development of 450 units on that acreage.

Prospect Heights has argued during three board meetings in the past month that Pasquinelli's development was too dense, did not have enough open space and contradicted the long-range land-use plan of local and regional government bodies.

The comprehensive plans of nearby towns, the county and the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission show the site entirely as open space or open space generously mixed with low-density housing.

THE DEVELOPER'S representatives argued the nine-hole golf course is an exceptionally large area of open space.

It also serves, along with 37 proposed houses on half-half-acre lots, as a buffer to surrounding half-acre residences in Prospect Heights, they said.

Houses on less than quarter acre lots, condominiums and apartments would lie in the interior and along the southern boundary of the site.

The zoning board will study both parties' arguments in the next month and come up with a recommendation on the rezoning petition sometime in the near future.

That recommendation will be passed on to Cook County Board for a final ruling.

N. Miami water polluted for spite

Someone apparently out for revenge dumped a rotten smelling chemical in North Miami Beach's water supply, forcing 40,000 residents Friday to tote jugs and plastic containers to fire hydrants and tank trucks. Residents of the north Dade County area served by the Sunny Isles water plant lined up at Army tank trucks and fire hydrants supplied by other water plants to get water after being told Thursday not to use their tap water. Det. Stan Marple said police were searching for a suspect after questioning another person Thursday. "The man has revenge as a motive," Marple said. "Whoever contaminated the water would have to have knowledge of the process of the water department, and the fact that the pesticides used could not be detected in the water. He would also have to have access to the water department," the detective said.

Fire kills 7 in New Jersey

A fire swept through a rundown tenement in Elizabeth, N.J., Friday, killing a 44-year-old woman who was babysitting for six of her grandchildren. Authorities said the woman, identified as Anna Avela, was found bunched near a bedroom door with four of the young victims. They were covered with debris from a collapsed ceiling. The remaining two victims were found dead in the living room of the apartment — one under a television set and the other under a burned out cushion.

Soviets 'prompted' killer satellite

Concern over Soviet tests of satellite killers prompted the Carter administration to award a contract to ready a comparable weapon for use in any "space war" by 1982, administration sources report. The Air Force has approved a $58.7 million contract for development and testing of a space weapon described as a cylinder the size and shape of a large tomato can which can home in on a target's heat and crash into it at high speed. The 1972 U.S.-Soviet anti-ballistic missile treaty bans interfering with "national technical means" for reconnaisance-spy satellites. Pentagon spokesman Thomas B. Ross said the treaty does not prohibit tests such as the Russians have been conducting. Pentagon spokesmen declined Friday to confirm the Air Force contract involved an anti-satellite system.

Legion disease cases probed

Health authorities in Atlanta Friday reported that new cases of Legionnaires' disease were under investigation in Vermont and New Mexico, and said an antibiotic may prove effective against the mysterious illness that killed 29 in Philadelphia last year. The national Center for Disease Control also revealed that two cases of the disease occurred in July in Philadelphia, site of the 1976 outbreak. The cases were confirmed through blood samples. The victims were identified as a 70-year-old woman and a 50-year-old man, both of whom recovered after lengthy hospital treatment.

Park may talk on neutral ground

Tongsun Park's attorney Friday said his client appears willing to talk with Justice Dept. prosecutors in a neutral country about his role in alleged attempts to bribe members of Congress. Attorney William Hundley, back from Seoul where he met for several days with the South Korean businessman, said, "I advised him if we could work out talking to justice officials in a third country we ought to do it. I think he'd follow my advice. He said he would. Hundley said he plans to meet with top Justice Dept. officials in about a week, probably Oct. 3, and present his proposal for a rendezvous in a country which has no extradition treaty with the United States — such as the island of Bali in Indonesia.

U.N. seeks Lebanon truce

The United Nations Friday said it is trying to negotiate a truce in South Lebanon to rescue an American and a Frenchman trapped under fire in their U.N. observation post for the past week. The two men, members of the U.N. truce Supervisory Organization stationed along the Lebanese-Israeli border, have been cut off for seven days at their post near the border village of El Khiam. El Khiam is the scene of heavy fighting between Palestinian guerrillas and Israeli-backed Christian militia forces.

China decrees science 'leap'

The Chinese Communist party has decreed a "great leap forward" in science and technology, promising scientists better facilities and the freedom "to think, to speak and act." The program, described in a circular issued by the party Central Committee, also called for expanded academic exchanges with other countries. The circular was issued in connection with a national science conference in the spring. It was made public Thursday by the New China News Agency and Peking Radio.

State removes mental patients from home

by TOM LAUE

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — The Illinois Dept. of Mental Health Friday removed 13 mentally ill or retarded patients from a Springfield nursing home accused of tolerating unsanitary conditions and open sex and drug abuse by staff members.

Don St. Lawrence, head of the department's developmentally disabled division for 18 counties, said the decision to transfer nine retarded and four emotionally disturbed patients from the Ridgewood Nursing Home was "made in the last few days. They weren't getting the kind of program activities they shoujd."

For example, St. Lawrence said, patients who were supposed to get regular exercise did not.

RIDGEWOOD ALSO is under scrutiny by the Departments of Public Aid and Public Health but those agencies have been barred by court orders from acting swiftly and must go through lengthy hearings before other patients might be moved.

Both Public Aid Director Arthur Quern and Public Health head Paul Peterson refuse to talk about Ridgewood because the agencies are involved in closed hearings that could cost the home its license or end federal Medicaid financing.

However, many charges against the home going back years have become public knowledge. They include allegations — many by former Ridgewood employes — that nurses took drugs intended for patients and staff members had sex in plain view of elderly patients.

Other complaints include a host of alleged Public Health code violations, patient abuse, inadequate clothing and food and grossly unsanitary conditions. One former worker said urinals and dishs were washed together.

Public Aid and Mental Health workers said a man was allowed to go untreated for a broken arm nine days and another patient had weeping bedsores.

Public Health hearings are going on now and the Public Aid probe resumes Oct. 12.

N. Miami water polluted for spite

Someone apparently out for revenge dumped a rotten smelling chemical in North Miami Beach's water supply, forcing 40,000 residents Friday to tote jugs and plastic containers to fire hydrants and tank trucks. Residents of the north Dade County area served by the Sunny Isles water plant lined up at Army tank trucks and fire hydrants supplied by other water plants to get water after being told Thursday not to use their tap water. Det. Stan Marple said police were searching for a suspect after questioning another person Thursday. "The man has revenge as a motive," Marple said. "Whoever contaminated the water would have to have knowledge of the process of the water department, and the fact that the pesticides used could not be detected in the water. He would also have to have access to the water department," the detective said.

Fire kills 7 in New Jersey

A fire swept through a rundown tenement in Elizabeth, N.J., Friday, killing a 44-year-old woman who was babysitting for six of her grandchildren. Authorities said the woman, identified as Anna Avela, was found bunched near a bedroom door with four of the young victims. They were covered with debris from a collapsed ceiling. The remaining two victims were found dead in the living room of the apartment — one under a television set and the other under a burned out cushion.

Soviets 'prompted' killer satellite

Concern over Soviet tests of satellite killers prompted the Carter administration to award a contract to ready a comparable weapon for use in any "space war" by 1982, administration sources report. The Air Force has approved a $58.7 million contract for development and testing of a space weapon described as a cylinder the size and shape of a large tomato can which can home in on a target's heat and crash into it at high speed. The 1972 U.S.-Soviet anti-ballistic missile treaty bans interfering with "national technical means" for reconnaisance-spy satellites. Pentagon spokesman Thomas B. Ross said the treaty does not prohibit tests such as the Russians have been conducting. Pentagon spokesmen declined Friday to confirm the Air Force contract involved an anti-satellite system.

Legion disease cases probed

Health authorities in Atlanta Friday reported that new cases of Legionnaires' disease were under investigation in Vermont and New Mexico, and said an antibiotic may prove effective against the mysterious illness that killed 29 in Philadelphia last year. The national Center for Disease Control also revealed that two cases of the disease occurred in July in Philadelphia, site of the 1976 outbreak. The cases were confirmed through blood samples. The victims were identified as a 70-year-old woman and a 50-year-old man, both of whom recovered after lengthy hospital treatment.

Park may talk on neutral ground

Tongsun Park's attorney Friday said his client appears willing to talk with Justice Dept. prosecutors in a neutral country about his role in alleged attempts to bribe members of Congress. Attorney William Hundley, back from Seoul where he met for several days with the South Korean businessman, said, "I advised him if we could work out talking to justice officials in a third country we ought to do it. I think he'd follow my advice. He said he would. Hundley said he plans to meet with top Justice Dept. officials in about a week, probably Oct. 3, and present his proposal for a rendezvous in a country which has no extradition treaty with the United States — such as the island of Bali in Indonesia.

U.N. seeks Lebanon truce

The United Nations Friday said it is trying to negotiate a truce in South Lebanon to rescue an American and a Frenchman trapped under fire in their U.N. observation post for the past week. The two men, members of the U.N. truce Supervisory Organization stationed along the Lebanese-Israeli border, have been cut off for seven days at their post near the border village of El Khiam. El Khiam is the scene of heavy fighting between Palestinian guerrillas and Israeli-backed Christian militia forces.

KEN VANDERBEEK gets the treatment from two hospital clerks who apply wax and ink on his face and arm. The makeup was used to simulate injuries he suffered as a "victim" of a disaster conducted by Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge.

Rail disaster trains for success

by KEN VANDERBEEK

All around me people were groaning and screaming as they waited for the ambulances to arrive.

Minutes earlier the train I was on had derailed and fell on its side after a car collided with it.

I had been thrown from the train. And now I was on the ground, flat on my back.

As the flashing lights of the ambulances approached me I could barely make out a protruding bone in my right arm.

ONE MAN waved his hands in a half-mad struggle to attract the attention of paramedics in hopes they would take him to the hospital before anyone else.

Several other injured passengers lay near me or were still trapped in the train.

"Oooh, help me," someone groaned. "Anybody, help me!"

The scene had all the characteristics of a real disaster. But it was only a drill.

I and 27 other volunteers agreed to be "victims" in the mass-casualty drill coordinated by the Park Ridge and Niles fire departments and the staff of Lutheran General Hospital, 1775 Dempster St., Park Ridge. Some of the victims were doctors from the hospital, others were paramedics or friends of hospital staff members.

LUTHERAN GENERAL employes conduct disaster drills twice a year so they will know what to expect if a real one occurs.

The drill began at the Park Ridge Fire Dept. where hospital employes made us up to look like we had been injured in a major accident.

"Who wants to be the dead car driver?" asked Debbie Buckley, a registered nurse from Lutheran General who coordinated the drill.

"Me," someone answered.

THERE WAS laughter in the room, but once the drill started we became serious.

When the face of the "dead victim" had been covered with white powder, it was my turn. I had volunteered to "receive" facial lacerations and a fractured arm.

Debbie Graff, a clerk-typist at the hospital, worked on me. She applied flesh-tone wax on my arm to simulate swelling and then pushed in a splintered chicken bone to resemble a multiple fracture. Then she took an eye dropper and squeezed red ink on both wounds.

I joined the other victims in the rear parking lot of the station where we lay on the pavement until the ambulances arrived. It was about 8:15 p.m. and cold. I was shivering when paramedics arrived.

MISS BUKCLEY had told paramedics to wait at least 10 minutes before they got to the scene, which she said is the average time it should take to respond.

"What happened to you?" a Park Ridge paramedic asked me.

"My arm," I groaned. "I think it's broken."

"I'm sorry, but you'll have to wait," he said. "We've got more serious injuries up ahead."

I was one of the last victims to be taken to the hospital. I ended up sitting in the front seat of the ambulance because my wound wasn't serious enough to require a stretcher.

WHEN I ARRIVED at the hospital three blocks away, things started picking up. For the first time in my life I noticed what a perfect combination efficiency and speed make in saving lives.

Seconds after I was helped by a paramedic into the hospital, a nurse dressed my wound and gave me a fake shot of Demeral to numb my arm. From then on I was called Victim No. 3 and in hospital jargon, "a conscious apprehensive with open fracture of right humerous, lacerations of face, forehead and cheek."

I was put in a wheelchair and pushed down a hallway toward an exit leading to the surgery unit.

"God, you really look gross," a nurse said as she passed by.

ON THE WAY my attendant became lost until a hospital guard asked in a German accent, "Surgery, mam?" My nurse answered, "Yes," and he said, "Then, come with me."

Outside of surgery I noticed many of my comrades in a hallway waiting to be operated on. Some had fractures, others had more serious injuries — broken spines, burns and crushed abdomens.

I was soon listed in fair condition and after a report of my wounds and personal background, the drill ended. It had started and ended so fast. Paramedics had rushed 28 victims to the hospital and nurses had taken them to areas for treatment — all within an hour.

"I'm pleased with the way things went," said John A. Wilke, chairman of the hospital's emergency plans committee.

DR. HILLYARD Abzug, director of the emergency medicine committee, was also pleased.

"Of all the drills we've ever worked, this has been the best," he said. "There were some problems, like nursing attendants sometimes getting lost in the building as they tried to help the victims; but generally the whole program was a success."

But perhaps a short conversation between one of the male victims and Miss Buckley best summed up the drill.

"I was treated very well, maybe too well," the victim said.

"Ha, by whom, the nurses or the doctors?" Miss Buckley asked.

"By the nurses, of course."

Daily Herald reporter Ken Vanderbeek gives this first-hand account as a "victim" of a disaster drill conducted by the staff of Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge. Twenty-seven volunteers participatd in the simulated train wreck, which was coordinated by the Park Ridge and Niles fire departments. The hospital conducts disaster drills twice a year.

Backstretch life is not the same at every race track as the workers who travel from Arlington Park Race Track to Sportsman's Park in Cicero have learned.

Sportsman's Park, where both thoroughbreds and harness racing are held a total of eight months a year, has invested substantially in building new brick and concrete barns and dormitories in a long-range plan to upgrade backstretch conditions.

"We had a long-range plan of building," spokesman Mike Paradise said. "We've done a lot of things that you don't get money back on, too, but it helps the people."

ABOUT 600 PERSONS live on the grounds in some 320 rooms above the barns. Families are permitted on the backstretch and the track even has designed larger rooms to accommodate families in the newer buildings.

Once the larger rooms are filled, the stall manager Albert Jozwiak says families will be given two rooms, with one parent assigned to each.

Sportsman's was the first track in the country to build separate washrooms into its dormitory rooms. Only the oldest dormitory, built in 1968, does not have separate facilities, but that building is scheduled for remodeling to add individual washrooms.

Another new barn-dormitory is being completed and will be ready for use in October, one month before the start of Sportsman's thoroughbred season.. The rooms are free and no deposit is required. "I can't see charging a $25 or $50 deposit when most of these are only making $55 per horse," Jozwiak said.

Jozwiak said he does not believe in barring families from the track "because if you did throw them out, I'm afraid the kids would starve."

"You've got to do what you can to accommodate the horsemen," he said.

Doors on the rooms are solid rather than screened. Built-in heaters are included in the rooms.

THE TRACK, owned by the Fox Valley Trotting Club and the National Jockey Club last year also built a recreation room for backstretch employes. The facility includes two carpeted, paneled rooms with pinball machines, color television and billiard tables.

"We took a gamble on it, but we said let's see how it works out," Paradise said. "It's been super and they really kept it up well."

Jozwiak said vandalism is not a bad problem on the backstretch, although he said the workers of the thoroughbred circuit are "tougher" than those of the harness racing circuit who are primarily Illinois horsemen.

"None of them are really bad, and if they are we kick them out," Jozwiak said.

PARADISE SAID the backstretch improvements have been part of a comprehensive effort to accommodate both the public and the workers of the racing industry.

"It's not done overnight," he said. "I think eventually every track will have to be doing what we're doing.

"There's no question that more time and more money has got to go into the backstretch. People don't realize we have people living back here."

the lack ofworking fire extinguishers in the 50-unit trailer park in the backstretch.

"People steal them," Thayer said. "We have vandalism even though we have more security per square foot here than in the rest of Arlington Heights."

DANIEL TARRY, village environmental health officer, backed up Thayer, saying fire extinguisher theft is "one of the major problems we have found even in our apartment complexes." But most major complexes and both School Districts 214 and 25 told The Daily Herald they have experienced little if any problem with extinguisher thefts in recent years.

Thayer could not explain why daily fire inspections are not performed by the track, as required in a five-year agreement made with the village in 1974.

Thayer and Hirth also said the workers were to blame for the violation of another provision dictating that backstretch personnel be trained in the use of firefighting equipment.

They said the workers have shown little interest in attending the two fire fighting classes offered during the season, but workers said they were unaware of the classes.

Three years ago in a letter to the village, Thayer quoted then-president of Arlington Park, John F. Loome, as saying such classes would "be worthless because, among other things, the nature of the stable help and their low intelligence quotient do not readily make them adaptable to instructions."

BACKSTRETCH SECURITY rules have been allowed to lapse by the track and the village. Provisions requiring all backstretch personnel to be given identification cards and all visitors to wear buttons when on the backstretch grounds are disregarded.

Thayer said the track keeps excellent records and has nothing to hide. But he said identification cards are not issued because "the help resented wearing them."

"We gave them last year, but the help resented wearing two badges (state racing board badges must be worn.) There is no sense duplicating something, and they resent wearing two badges, so we didn't do it this year."

Tarry and Hirth point to lack of village staff to carry out inspections. Tarry, who inspects the track, said he also is responsible for all village apartment complexes, weed control and abandoned autos. Hirth said his fire prevention bureau has only two men working under him, one for inspections north of the railroad tracks and one for inspections south.

But the village has done nothing to penalize the race track for disregarding the five-year agreement.

CRIME IS ANOTHER problem on the backstretch. Deputy Police Chief Paul Buckholtz acknowledged the crime problem but he said increased patrols have cut crime "by 26 per cent" this year. He could not provide comparative figures for the two years, saying separate statistics are not kept on crime at the race track.

His comments came two days before a 26-year-old stable worker allegedly was murdered by two co-workers.

The hot potato of responsibility for backstretch conditions gets thrown from village to race track to the state racing board. The board, in turn, throws it back.

Racing board chairwoman Mrs. Reum said the responsibility for enforcing housing codes on the backstretch rests with the village and the track. "It's up to the two parties to enforce their own rules," she said.

She also defended Arlington Park as having made significant strides toward improving the backstretch, citing expenditures to install heat in dormitory rooms for the upcoming harness racing season starting in October and improvements being made to the grandstand area, track surface and lighting surrounding the track.

Oddly, it was Mrs. Reum who four years ago spearheaded efforts to reform backstretch conditions at Arlington Park.

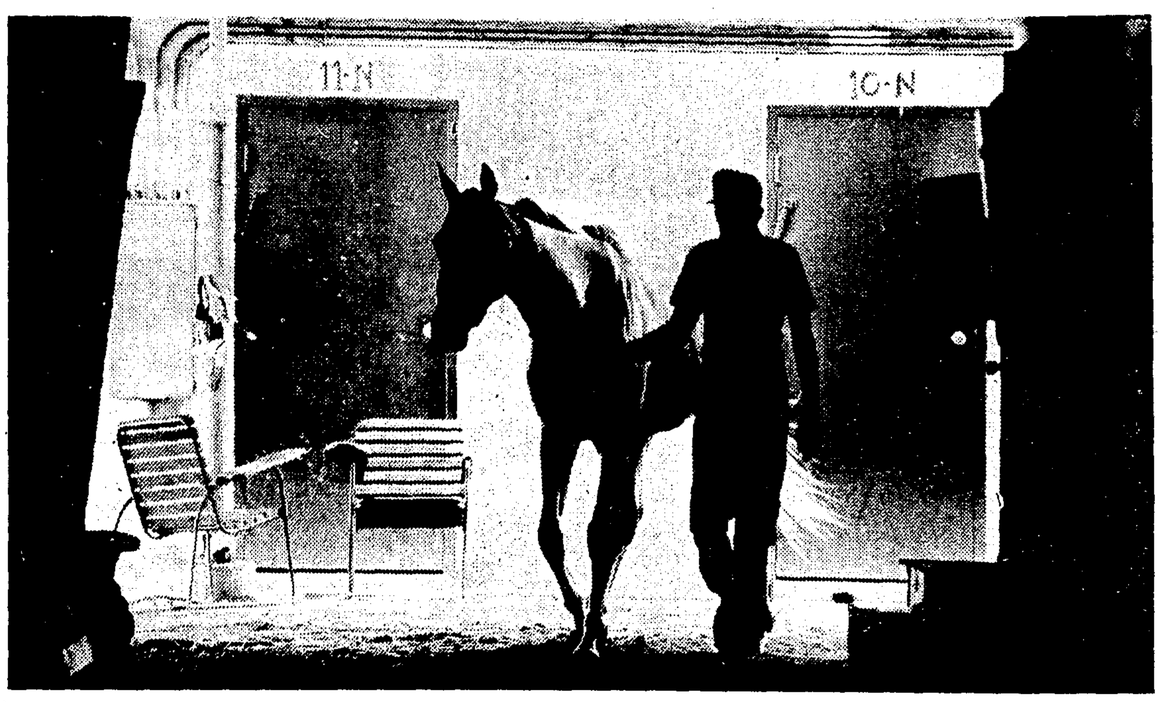

BUT IN COMMENTING on current conditions, Mrs. Reum tied the problems to the workers rather than to the track which provided the state with $15 million in revenue last year.

"I don't think it's any worse (on the backstretch) and maybe it's a little better than some parts of Chicago.

But Village Pres. James T. Ryan expressed concern with the backstretch conditions.

"I think it's important that we continue to monitor it closely," he said. "They have spent a great deal of money there and conditions have improved immensely, but the people who live there deserve our protection as much as anyone else in the village.

"We'll be watching it closely now that you have pointed this out."

Skeptics doubt new Harper era

Survey hits trouble spots

by RENA WISH COHEN

The three-month, $10,000 study of Harper College's administrative effectiveness conducted by Tadlock Associates Inc. was based on detailed questionnaires completed by more than 20 Harper administrators and seven days of interviews with 140 college administrators, board members, faculty, support staff, students and citizens involved in the early development of the college.

Here are some of the major findings contained in the consultant's 28-page report:

• Low morale. Two-thirds of the administrators questioned rated "organizational climate" from fair to poor. Consultant Max Tadlock said, "People who work at Harper don't feel all that good about it. Some feel paranoid, others feel put upon, and some are worn out or just too driven."

"As perceived by the staff," the report said, "the major motivation is fear — fear of being replaced, fear of being exposed in public."

• Rule by a few. Decision-making seems to the staff to be concentrated in the hands of College Pres. Robert E. Lahti and the vice presidents of business, student services and academic affairs. "Most (staff members) feel that their input is no longer sought, or if sought, that it has little impact," the report said, adding that neither deans nor other administrators consider themselves part of the "management team."

• Need for a "new management style." While centralized decision-making and "bold, aggressive leadership that could present the board with recommended solutions rather than alternatives" was appropriate in Harper's formative years, the time has come for more participation by staff and the board of trustees in policy-making, the report said.

At the nuts-and-bolts level, Harper's emphasis on a business-like system of management "by objectives" has resulted in the loss of the "human, personal quality" in staff relations and has "shifted the institution's focus from the educational program to how the program is managed." The report recommended a "more humanistic" approach.

Harper College Pres. Robert E. Lahti says he's willing to lead the school to which he has devoted the last 12 years into the more democratic style of management prescribed by a consultant this week as a necessary solution to the school's problems.

And most members of the Harper College Board of Trustees say they have their work cut out for them, but expect to cooperate with the administration in making needed changes at Harper.

But at least two persons burst the bubble of optimism Friday and said it was unrealistic to expect a new era at Harper.

ONE WAS BOARD member David Tomchek, who said he believes that "even if we keep the same cast of characters and change the management style, it won't be perceived that way" — and the perception, he said, could be criticial to the success of the endeavor.

Asked what the solution is, Tomchek said, "That's obvious. Go shopping."

The other was long-time faculty member Thomas McCabe: "Nobody over 40 is going to change management styles, and I'd say that if I were in there."

The reactions followed a Thursday night presentation by Max Tadlock detailing the results of a three-month, $10,000 study of Harper's administrative structure conducted by Tadlock's Los Altos, Calif., consulting firm.

NO ONE CONTACTED Friday — least of all Pres. Lahti — was surprised by Tadlock's discovery of a deep sense of alienation among administrators and other Harper staff members who say they are excluded from the college's decision-making processes.

"I've been trying to get at these problems for two years," said Lahti, who attributes the unrest at Harper to the communication difficulties among some 600 full-time employes and an obsolete staffing structure that he says he has been unable to correct because of opposition by the board of trustees.

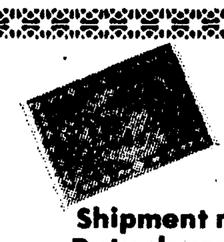

But he admitted that structure alone cannot change the management style that Tadlock said lacked a personal touch and provisions for participation in college affairs. "The style," he said, "is in the people."

And can those people change?

"NOW YOU'RE asking me to be prophetic. There's more than just me involved. There has to be an environment" where people are willing to change, Lahti said.

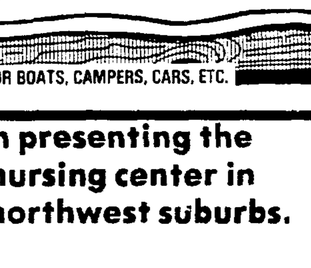

That environment, Tadlock said, seems to exist at Harper, because his interviews showed a "constructive attitude" toward the college's problems.

Suburbs get credit for man's profits

by DAVE IBATA

While Jack Pritzker plays down his billing as one of the richest men in Chicago, he attributes part of his family's $750 million to profitable business ventures in the Northwest suburbs.

"We've always thought the Northwest suburbs were where we've wanted to be," said Pritzker, 73.

But when pressed about these and other holdings, including the Hyatt hotel chain, Pritzker pleads ignorance.

"SURE WE HAVE a great deal of money," he said. "But we've no idea how much."

Many times, when someone asks you what you're worth, if you know, you're not worth much. We don't know what we're worth," Pritzker said.

As for his opinion of a magazine article that lists his family as the richest in metropolitan Chicago, Pritzker said, "I think it's a bunch of baloney."

Pritzker remained tight-lipped about the dollar value of his family's holdings in the Northwest suburbs.

However, he said, "We've always been very active with Elk Grove Village and Centex (Industrial Park), and in Schaumburg and a few other pieces here and there.

"Obviously, for the last 20 years we've been active in the Northwest suburbs," he said. "We think that's one of the best areas to be."

THE MAGAZINE article states after the Pritzkers, the richest persons in Chicago are:

- Ray Kroc, senior chairman of McDonald's Corp., $500 million.
- Henry Crown, formerly chairman of the executive committee of Generaly Dynamics Corp., $400 million.
- The Searle family, which controls the G.D. Searle & Co. pharmaceutical company, $250 million.
- Robert Galvin, chairman of Motorola Inc., $175 million.
- The Donnelley family, which controls the R.R. Donnelley Sons printing firm, $150 million.
- Marshall Field, publisher and department store heir, $125 million.
- William and David Grainger, who control W. W. Grainger Inc. of Niles, distributors of electric motors and accessories, $100 million.

Fortunes that dropped below the $100 million, according to the article, were those of insurance magnate W. Clement Stone, Hugh Hefner and the family of the late Philip K. Wrigley.

Dem Neal to run for state house

Don Neal, 39, Waukegan, will seek the Democratic nomination to be a candidate for the Illinois House in the 32nd District.

The district includes much of Lake County, including a portion of Buffalo Grove.

Neal's campaign goals include support for open primaries, limits on the power of lobbyists, a constitutional initiative for voters and elected insurance and commerce commissioners.

He is supervisor of disbursement adult. accounts payable, at Walgreen Co., Deerfield.

Partisans won't like new book on Rev. Billy Graham

David E. Anderson

World of religion

Billy Graham, just returned from a triumphant and, in his own view, eye-opening trip to Hungary, is probably the best known American religious figure in the world.

And he is one of the most popular. Polls consistently rank him in the top 10 of most admired men in the United States, often right behind the president.

In his 30-year career, Graham also has turned American evangelism around, destroying the image of the evangelist as a hypocritical, slick, country boy Elmer Gantry.

ALONG THE WAY, Graham has built a multimillion-dollar business empire and befriended and counseled nearly every president since Dwight Eisenhower.

This part of the Graham story is the subject of a new book, "The Gospel According to Billy" (Lyle Stuart), which takes a long and critical look at the evangelist.

Graham partisans will not like it, but those who dislike the evangelist's manner and substance will delight in author Chuck Ashman's breezy and irreverent style.

Ashman, a California newsman who also has written biography's of Henry Kissinger and was nominated for a Pulitizer Prize for his investigative reporting on the disappearance of Jimmy Hoffa, makes no bones about the fact that he sees hypocrisy in Graham's first class lifestyle while preaching the gospel of Jesus.

MUCH OF WHAT Ashman here reports — rally statistics, Graham's well-known political friendships and the methodology at the Billy Graham Evangelistic Assn. for a successful crusade — is already on the public record but he brings it together for the first time.

Among the most fascinating chapters — and the most speculative — is one dealing with Graham's involvement in politics and his alleged interest in becoming a presidential candidate in 1964.

According to Ashman, Graham was "constantly barraged by high-placed offers to give up the ministry in favor of a much more prestigious and powerful calling in Washington."

Ashman says the idea went far enough that "there was secret talk of converting the Graham crusade machinery into an orchestrated grass-roots campaign organization" and that "the nuts and bolts of a serious White House bid were assembled behind closed doors, and it was soon up to Billy alone to give the signal for go or no go."

GRAHAM, AS everyone knows, said no and while he has not involved himself overtly in partisan politics he has been a friend, sometimes a close friend, to presidents.

One of his oldest and closest associations has been with Richard Nixon and it has also been one that has brought the evangelist the most criticism.

That relationship was close enough that Graham was among the inner circle of Nixon associates and Republican Party leaders the night Nixon chose Spiro Agnew as his vice president.

Graham supported Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., for the spot because, the book quotes the evangelist as telling Nixon, "He's taken a more liberal stand on most issues than you and I think that the ticket needs that kind of balance."

The book also charges that by 1970, Graham "had become a conduit for administration propaganda and the Graham organization had been converted into far-reaching forum for the president to use whenever he saw fit."

A spokesman for the Graham organization said they had not yet seen the book.

While Ashman's biography is not the definitive story of the evangelist it is a fascinating glimpse at one of the nation's most controversial religious figures.

Mass for sick scheduled Sunday

A Mass for the Sacrament of the Annointing of the Sick will be celebrated at 1 p.m. Sunday in St. Colette's Church, 3900 Meadow Dr., Rolling Meadows.

A spokeswoman for St. Collette's said the Mass is available for the temporarily or chronically ill, including persons suffering from aging, heart disease, accidents, handicaps, or in anticipation of surgery.

Children who have sufficient awareness to receive comfort and consolation from the sacrament also may take part, the spokeswoman said.

Persons may register for the mass by calling St. Colette's rectory at 255-9222, and talking to Sister JoAnn or one of the priests. They also may arrive one-half-hour before the mass.

Transportation to the church also may be arranged by calling the rectory.

Evangelical meeting

The 36th convention of the National Assn. of Evangelicals will focus on social justice, world compassion and personal holiness, the group has announced.

The three-day convention, scheduled for Feb. 21 to 23 at the Ralison South Hotel in Bloomington, Minn., a suburb of Minneapolis, will meet under the theme, "God's Mandate — Our Mission."

Mission plan OKd

A meeting of the Lutheran Church — Missouri Synod Board of Missions has approved a five-year plan for missionary work among three groups of West Africans.

Mission work will be carried out in northwest Liberia and in Togo, with a goal of evangelizing 1,000 persons.

The board, meeting this week in St. Louis, also appointed August T. Mennicke, president of the LCMS Minnesota North District since 1970, to be its executive secretary.

Hebrew school urged

A new program to stimulate enrollment of beginning students in Hebrew and religious school of their choice is being launched by the Jewish Federation of Metropolitan Chicago.

The Federation Education Encouragement Fund has been established to aid needy families with children under the age of nine, who currently are enrolling for the first time in Hebrew and religious schools. Up to $200 per family will be provided by the Jewish Federation toward meeting the costs of the youngsters' education.

Applications are available at all temples, synagogues and religious schools and must be completed no later than Oct. 16. For further information contact your local synagogues or Sara Feinstein, director of education and culture 346-6700, ext. 578.

Crisis course

A crisis intervention course for clergymen and religious workers will be offered by the division of pastoral care at Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge.

The course will focus on common crises, including illness, death, bereavement, accident, divorce, suicide, marital problems, unemployment, alcoholism and adolescence, middle and old age.

The course will be lead seminar-style by the Rev. Larry Holst, director of the division, and Wes Brun, coordinator of parish services at the hospital's Pastoral Counseling Center.

Classes will meet from 1 to 3 p.m. Wednesdays beginning Oct. 5 Registration information may be obtained by calling 696-6395.

Woman ordained

Katherine McIntosh, a former resident of Inverness, recently was ordained as a minister at the First Presbyterian Church in Livermore, Calif.

Miss McIntosh, 28, will be responsible for youth programs at the church.

A graduate of Northwestern University, Evanston, and the San Francisco Theological Seminary, Miss McIntosh formerly lived with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert B. McIntosh II, of 173 Inverway, Inverness.

Miss McIntosh's sponsor was the First Presbyterian Church of Arlington Heights.

Fire truck veto the right move

Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland J. Meyer has vetoed the $85,000 purchase of a fire engine pumper, and the city's aldermen would be wise to heed his advice before considering an override.

Meyer did not question the fact the city may need the new pumper but justifiably said buying it without taking bids "sets a dangerous precedent."

Technically, the council is only required to advertise for bids on public improvements costing more than $1,500, not on purchases.

But, with taxes rising and taxpayers demanding more accountability from their elected officials we must agree with Meyer that spending $85,000 without first advertising for bids is an abdication of the council's responsibility.

Rolling Meadows officials have said they go out for bids when they have "the luxury of time" but that this case is an emergency.

Looking for ways to save tax dollars should not be dependent on "luxuries" of time. The emergency appears to be a case of poor planning by Rolling Meadows officials, and that should be discouraged.

City officials should never have allowed the fire department equipment to reach the point that finding a replacement pumper is an emergency. And even in an emergency, giving the acting fire chief $85,000 to spend if he finds something he likes at a convention in Denver, so he can drive it home, is bad public policy.

The city should make the repairs necessary to get its existing pumper in at least temporary working order and move as fast as possible to develop specifications and go out for bids on a new pumper.

The expenditure of $85,000 is no small matter and deserves more consideration than the officials and aldermen have given it.

Key question on airport

For months, Schaumburg officials have been trying to decide whether to purchase Schaumburg Airport and make it a municipal airfield.

The latest delay in a decision came Wednesday night when each member of a mass transportation committee was asked to prepare a statement backing his recommendation.

Although there are many factors to consider in the airport controversy, there is one simple question that is the crux of the matter: Is the purchase of Schaumburg Airport essential to further industrial and commercial development of Schaumburg and the Northwest suburbs? It is on that question that the Schaumburg Village Board ultimately must judge, based on hearing the views of two distinct sides.

The three-member team of financial experts has recommended that the airport not be purchased, saying it is a speculative investment.

At least one member of the village's mass transportation committee says Schaumburg Airport would be a good investment.

If the village does not purchase the 120-acre facility at Irving Park and Rodenburg roads, it is expected to become an industrial park — a use for the property which would bring hundreds of thousands of dollars' revenue to the village.

In the wake of the financial committee's report, and given the fact an industrial park is an attractive option, it should take an overwhelmingly strong argument based on necessity to convince the village board to make the purchase.

Schaumburg has no obligation to purchase an airport for the convenience of industrial officials. Its obligation is to ensure the future growth and prosperity of the area for the benefit of residents and business alike.

It isn't good enough to argue, as Bob Frantz of the Schaumburg Pilots' Assn. did recently, that an airport is a feature of a "complete community."

The Northwest suburbs would be a real mess if all the suburban communities decided to have airports to be "complete."

letters to the editor

Letters must be signed, and no letters will be published anonymously. Letters are subject to condensation, and a maximum length of 300 words is recommended. Direct your mail to the Fence post, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

It was with great dismay that I read the article in the Sept. 8 edition of The Daily Herald concerning former Mayor Robert Teichert's request, made at close to midnight at the Sept. 6 board meeting, that the present board reconsider their vote to reimburse the Woodview Association $700 for their legal fees incurred in their fight against mid-rise apartments in their area was an unrealistic request. It would appear to have been "out of order" since he wasn't listed on the agenda and he didn't come forth at the early part of the meeting when time was allotted for citizens who wish to be heard, nor did he present his view to a committee. In a friendly village, people should sit down and discuss their differences, instead of threatening litigation. The idea that the King can do no wrong is dead.

Mr. Teichert, wasn't our taxpayers' money used during sessions in which your former board drew up the consent decree agreement with Mr. Brickman without any notice to us? We citizens then had to pay over $5,000 in legal expenses for the court sessions leading up to the Appellate Court's ruling that your former village board erred by not properly informing the citizens of the agreement during a public hearing — a form of malpractice. Do you consider, Mr. Teichert, that by ignoring the damages done to the citizens and refusing to reimburse them their legal fees, this is a fine "precedent" to set by a village government elected to be responsive to the needs of the people?

This is a "unique" case in that the $700 legal fee reimbursement is due to the fact that the citizens went to court to correct an error made by their local government and it is unfortunate, Mr. Teichert, that you refuse to acknowledge this fact. Other citizens have been able to collect money from the local government for damages they have suffered. Why discriminate against this group?

We can thank those board members who last month voted to reimburse us in recognition of this error. They certainly have shown their interest and sincerity in serving the people that elected them.

'Cops failed kid'

As a resident of Wheeling I feel as a taxpayer a great injustice has been done to my son. On Saturday, Sept. 17 at approximately 3:30 p.m. my son was riding his bike in front of the Wheeling Police Station when he skidded on some loose gravel and was thrown off the bike. His injuries amounted to abrasions and cuts on his right shoulder, elbow, ribs and leg. Since he was in front of the police station he went in to the officer on duty and asked for some bandages. He was told that the Police Department didn't have any. My son then asked for the use of their water so he could wash the gravel and mud out of the cuts. He was told by the officer on duty that their water was locked up and told to go to the Marathon Gas Station and use their water. Needless to say I was furious. I have always taught my son if he was in trouble to go to the police. I have certainly lost faith.

My husband called the police officer and was told that they were very busy and that my son was not crying at the time so he didn't think he was hurt. My son is 13 so naturally he was holding back tears. And I was unaware that they ever locked up the water in the police station.

I just feel that if the children of Wheeling can't go to the police in time of need it's really a shame.

'OK Roosevelt'

I am writing on behalf of the Arlington Heights Area Branch of the American Association of University Women. Our organization would like to express its support for the development of a campus for Roosevelt University in the northwest suburbs. Many of our members are pursuing, or would like to pursue, further education through classes which cannot be obtained locally. We feel that our families could make extensive use of the educational facilities of a university.

However, for most of us, who work in the suburbs, who have young children, who have obligations to local civic groups, commuting to Chicago for classes is impossible. As an association which seeks to foster intellectual growth through education, we feel all residents would benefit from having an institute of higher learning in close proximity to our homes.

Plan board clarifies housing stand

This is in reference to the Sept. 15 article "Reject Housing Plan: Panel" in the Buffalo Grove Daily Herald.

It has to be difficult to completely and fairly condense a long statement, and the intent of several people, into one word for the purposes of headlining front-page articles — especially at 10 o'clock at night for the morning newspaper.

The Daily Herald would have more completely and more fairly informed our community of the Buffalo Grove Plan Commission's September 14th Lake County Housing Statement if the complete recommendation to the Buffalo Grove Village Board had been printed.

The position proposed by the plan commission to the village board as the village's statement to Lake County is this:

"The Village of Buffalo Grove supports the Lake County Housing Plan goal of insuring that 'all residents, present and future, have the opportunity to obtain housing at a reasonable price which is decent, safe, and sound.' The village also supports and would be willing to participate in a coordinated effort with Lake County and its communities in exploring planning and building concepts aimed at attaining this goal.

"The village of Buffalo Grove further supports the concept of a plan that minimizes government subsidies and intervention and maximizes the ability of private enterprise to provide housing for the broad segments of population. The village, therefore, encourages private developers and financial institutions to review their practices with the objective of helping Lake County communities attain the goal of providing affordable housing to the broad segment of the population.

"The village of Buffalo Grove, however, cannot support any housing plan which limits or eliminates local planning and zoning powers. Although Buffalo Grove has traditional zoning, it provides for a wide range of lot sizes and floor area to meet the needs of all segments of the population. The responsibility of any modifications of zoning must rest with the village. Further, the objective of the village planning process is to coordinate and efficiently administer all development. The village must protect the integrity of the local planning process and be responsible for implementing and updating the village comprehensive plan.

"The village of Buffalo Grove planning process recognizes that a low income housing problem exists. However, before low income housing can be scattered throughout Lake County, the critical questions of access fo employment opportunities, transportation, and services have to be more fully addressed. Low income housing dispersed into communities which do not have essential services readily available will only compound the existing problem. It will also be necessary to involve the total community in planning for low income housing to help integrate those residents into the community.

"The village of Buffalo Grove also reserves the right to establish and enforce building standards in the community. Village building standards are continuously reviewed by the village's professionally trained and licensed staff to ensure both quality and economical building standards. The present village building standards are based on national codes which are more efficient and effective than having the county develop its own standards.

"The plan in its present form does not clearly describe implementation of the objectives, but the village of Buffalo Grove is ready to participate in a cooperative venture with Lake County to plan for the housing needs of the broad segment of the population as a detailed plan is developed."

'Unified school district may help'

I hope the proposed new school district would benefit the people of Northgate V.

We live in Arlington Heights, but we are in Prospect Heights School Dist. 23. We live two and one-half miles from the elementary school (Eisenhower) our children attend. Prospect Heights Dist. 23 is a rural school district. Therefore, we have to pay $70 per child for bus service.

While our children are on the bus, they pass three elementary schools. (Ivy Hill, Betsy Ross and Sullivan). We can see Riley School from our back yard. On foggy or icy mornings, I live in fear of a bus accident. Schoenbeck Road can be such a slippery road.

I think a new school district would definitely benefit the people of our subdivision.

Does tennis really need this study?

PINE BLUFF, Ark. — One of Senator William Proxmire's "Fleece of the Month" awards has gone to the National Endowment for the Humanities, which awarded $2,500 of the taxpayers' money to a sociology professor for a study of why tennis players are ill-mannered.

Sooner or later, Senator Proxmire was bound to hit on the National Endowment for the Humanities for his uncoveted award. This scholarly treatise on the sociology of tennis is only the tip of the waste and pretension. Not long ago, the Arkansas division of this federally financed program dispatched, among others, a professor of Chinese history to discuss access to the press here in Pine Bluff. It was an enjoyable evening and all that, but the professor's knowledge of the press seemed about as deep as, well, our familiarity with Chinese. He seemed a nice fellow, and we'd have him back in a minute, but why should the taxpayer foot the bill for the visit?

Yet professors with time on their hands, or who just don't want to devote all of it to teaching their students, are virtually invited to participate in this nationwide ripoff by articles like this one in Volume 2, Number 4 of the Arkansas Humanities Program:

"WANTED, PROJECT proposals . . . Any non-profit group of organization may submit a proposal application to the Arkansas Humanities Program. To be eligible for consideration for a grant, the group must:

- Concentrate on the Humanities
- Focus on a public policy isue
- Involve humanities professors, as well as representatives from the community.
- Gear dialogue to out-of-school population
- Allow open discussion of issues

"For further information, guidelines, or application forms, please contact the Arkansas Humanities Program Office."

THIS PUBLICATION also contains a picture of "Humanist of the Month," an ad for an assistant director at $9,000 to $10,000 a year plus fringe benefits to initiate more such federally financed programs, an announcement of a $7,000 grant to finance four meetings in Phillips County to feature big-name speakers, a grant of $3,652 for four "symposiums" on sex education in Southeast Arkansas, and so on.

Which brings me back to the Endowment's interest in the sociology of the tennis court. My theory on the deteriorating of manners in tennis (offered here gratis) is that it began when they started letting players on the courts in colors other than white with at most a millimeter-wide contrasting stripe. Once that barrier fell, everything got out of hand. Now not only the players but the courts have burgeoned into sickly greens and blues.

ONCE UPON A time tennis manners could be perfectly vicious, but they did have to be perfect. Remember Terry-Thomas explaining how to insult and defraud your opponent with flawless courtesy in that British flick about one-upmanship? Now the manners are going and the viciousness is losing its style. Tennis has been reduced to Ilie Nastase. One might as well think of Don Rickles as the embodiment of wit.

There are certain stories that, by no longer being apropos, say a lot about changing mores. Like the one about a Durocher-type baseball manager. (It may have been Leo himself, whose most satisfying contribution to the game of baseball was to finish last and so prove that not only nice guys did.) The baseball manager was said to have been mystified when, as a spectator at Forest Hills in the old days, he saw one of the players deliberately slam a serve into the net twice. It was explained to him that the player was objecting to a linesman's call against his opponent and was simply evening up the score to be fair.

WHAT WOULD happen, the baseball man was asked, if the equivalent were to occur on the baseball diamond? Suppose, say, a runner sliding into second insisted that he was out despite the umpire's calling him safe?

"Well," he responded, "there would be three deaths on the field. The umpire would die of shock and the manager of the team at bat of apoplexy. But before he went, you can bet he'd get that runner."

The behavior that inspired Durocher's mystification is a thing of the past on the tennis circuit now. Players actually object out loud to the officials decisions — and decisions against them at that. Shocking. And that the government of the United States should be spending $2,500 to find out why only makes the trend sadder.

Fire truck veto the right move

Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland J. Meyer has vetoed the $85,000 purchase of a fire engine pumper, and the city's aldermen would be wise to heed his advice before considering an override.

Meyer did not question the fact the city may need the new pumper but justifiably said buying it without taking bids "sets a dangerous precedent."

Technically, the council is only required to advertise for bids on public improvements costing more than $1,500, not on purchases.

But, with taxes rising and taxpayers demanding more accountability from their elected officials we must agree with Meyer that spending $85,000 without first advertising for bids is an abdication of the council's responsibility.

Rolling Meadows officials have said they go out for bids when they have "the luxury of time" but that this case is an emergency.

Looking for ways to save tax dollars should not be dependent on "luxuries" of time. The emergency appears to be a case of poor planning by Rolling Meadows officials, and that should be discouraged.

City officials should never have allowed the fire department equipment to reach the point that finding a replacement pumper is an emergency. And even in an emergency, giving the acting fire chief $85,000 to spend if he finds something he likes at a convention in Denver, so he can drive it home, is bad public policy.

The city should make the repairs necessary to get its existing pumper in at least temporary working order and move as fast as possible to develop specifications and go out for bids on a new pumper.

The expenditure of $85,000 is no small matter and deserves more consideration than the officials and aldermen have given it.

Key question on airport

For months, Schaumburg officials have been trying to decide whether to purchase Schaumburg Airport and make it a municipal airfield.

The latest delay in a decision came Wednesday night when each member of a mass transportation committee was asked to prepare a statement backing his recommendation.

Although there are many factors to consider in the airport controversy, there is one simple question that is the crux of the matter: Is the purchase of Schaumburg Airport essential to further industrial and commercial development of Schaumburg and the Northwest suburbs? It is on that question that the Schaumburg Village Board ultimately must judge, based on hearing the views of two distinct sides.

The three-member team of financial experts has recommended that the airport not be purchased, saying it is a speculative investment.

At least one member of the village's mass transportation committee says Schaumburg Airport would be a good investment.

If the village does not purchase the 120-acre facility at Irving Park and Rodenburg roads, it is expected to become an industrial park — a use for the property which would bring hundreds of thousands of dollars' revenue to the village.

In the wake of the financial committee's report, and given the fact an industrial park is an attractive option, it should take an overwhelmingly strong argument based on necessity to convince the village board to make the purchase.

Schaumburg has no obligation to purchase an airport for the convenience of industrial officials. Its obligation is to ensure the future growth and prosperity of the area for the benefit of residents and business alike.

It isn't good enough to argue, as Bob Frantz of the Schaumburg Pilots' Assn. did recently, that an airport is a feature of a "complete community."

The Northwest suburbs would be a real mess if all the suburban communities decided to have airports to be "complete."

It was with great dismay that I read the article in the Sept. 8 edition of The Daily Herald concerning former Mayor Robert Teichert's request, made at close to midnight at the Sept. 6 board meeting, that the present board reconsider their vote to reimburse the Woodview Association $700 for their legal fees incurred in their fight against mid-rise apartments in their area was an unrealistic request. It would appear to have been "out of order" since he wasn't listed on the agenda and he didn't come forth at the early part of the meeting when time was allotted for citizens who wish to be heard, nor did he present his view to a committee. In a friendly village, people should sit down and discuss their differences, instead of threatening litigation. The idea that the King can do no wrong is dead.

Mr. Teichert, wasn't our taxpayers' money used during sessions in which your former board drew up the consent decree agreement with Mr. Brickman without any notice to us? We citizens then had to pay over $5,000 in legal expenses for the court sessions leading up to the Appellate Court's ruling that your former village board erred by not properly informing the citizens of the agreement during a public hearing — a form of malpractice. Do you consider, Mr. Teichert, that by ignoring the damages done to the citizens and refusing to reimburse them their legal fees, this is a fine "precedent" to set by a village government elected to be responsive to the needs of the people?

This is a "unique" case in that the $700 legal fee reimbursement is due to the fact that the citizens went to court to correct an error made by their local government and it is unfortunate, Mr. Teichert, that you refuse to acknowledge this fact. Insurance racket probe puts Kleindienst on stand

Clark Mollenhoff

Watch on Washington

Senate investigations of convicted California insurance racketeer Joseph Hauser will raise new questions of credibility for Richard Kleindienst, former attorney general.

Kleindienst, convicted of misleading a Senate committee with false and inaccurate testimony in one phase of the Watergate affair, will be a key witness before the Senate Permanent Investigations subcommittee in its exploration of the multimillion-dollar insurance fund frauds.

Hauser's insurance firms paid a $250,000 fee to the Kleindienst law firm for making a few telephone calls to International Teamsters Union Pres. Frank E. Fitzsimmons, a personal friend and golfing pal of the former attorney general.

KLEINDIENST WAS PAID that substantial fee for simply contacting Fitzsimmons and putting in a good word for the insurance firms through which Hauser was dealing in an effort to land the multimillion-dollar group policy covering 200,000 Teamsters in the Central States, Southeast and Southwest area.

The group insurance policy with premiums estimated at more than $20 million a year was awarded to Old Security Life Insurance Co. of Kansas City, Mo., with an arrangement for the major part of those premiums to pass through to the Hauser insurance group through a reinsurance arrangement.

The Teamsters have filed suit in federal courts in Chicago seeking return of the millions paid to the Hauser insurance group, and also have asked that Kleindienst return the $250,000 legal fee on grounds that misrepresentations caused them to enter into the insurance deal with Hauser. However, Kleindienst has denied knowledge of any of the deceptive money manipulations.

Investigations by the Senate permanent investigations subcommittee have developed evidence indicating sharp contradictions between the explanations that Kleindienst, Fitzsimmons and Hauser have given as to what was known about the reinsurance arrangements.

THE FORMER ATTORNEY general in the Nixon administration will be faced with choosing between admissions of an incredible lack of knowledge of the operation of the Hauser group that he represented, or with admissions of knowledge that could implicate him in the frauds by the Hauser group.

The investigation of Hauser's dealings with the Teamsters Union and the Laborer's International Union will be the first of a series dealing with insurance contracts awarded in Arizona, Florida, Indiana and Massachusetts.

The companies involved in the hearings will include Farmers National Life Insurance Company of Florida, the Family Provider Life Insurance Company of Arizona, and the Old Security Life Insurance Company of Kansas City.

In addition, the Senate Investigations subcommittee will focus on the continuing strong behind-the-scene role of Allen Dorfman, a convicted insurance racketeer and a friend of the late Jimmy Hoffa, in Teamsters insurance and pension matters.

ALSO, THE SUBCOMMITTEE has come across evidence of Labor Dept. obstruction and foot-dragging on organized crime strike force investigations of pension and insurance frauds involving officials of the Teamsters Union and the International Laborer's Union.

The hearings originally scheduled for late September have been postponed until after mid-October because of acting chairman San Nunn's, D-Ga., very active participation in the Bert Lance hearings.

Psychiatric group condemns abuse

The Soviet government may be wondering whether it should have allowed any of the dissidents who had been held in the country's notorious psychiatric prison-hospitals to emigrate to the West after all. It is the evidence of former inmates such as Vladimir Bukovsky and Leonid Plyushch that has persuaded the World Psychiatric Assn. to come off the fence on this issue.

At its recent congress in Honolulu the WPA adopted a resolution — albeit with the narrowest of majorities — condemning the abuse of psychiatry and calling on psychiatrists in the countries concerned to renounce such practices. Specifically, the resolution added that it should be implemented "in the first instance in reference to the extensive evidence of the systematic abuse of psychiatry for political purposes in the Soviet Union."

THE OFFICIAL Soviet delegation at the Honolulu congress fought hard to stop, or at the very least dilute, the resolution. Professor Snezhevsky of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, called the whole debate a "psychiatric variant of anti-Sovietism." The Soviet delegation left the congress hall while the issue was being debated.

Even before the congress had started, the KGB had inspired the publication, in both Russia and the West, of lists of dissidents who had formerly been locked up in Soviet psychiatric prison-hospitals and who allegedly had to receive psychiatric treatment again as soon as they reached the West.

BUT THE CONGRESS preferred to believe the evidence of the former dissidents. Some of this had appeared in a meticulously researched British study published on the eve of the Honolulu congress.

Of course, the Soviet practice of locking away perfectly sane people just because their opinions differ from the Soviet government's will not stop just because the reputable WPA has condemned it. But it will become more difficult. Above all, the Honolulu resolution may lend courage to those Soviet psychiatrists who have disapproved of what went on but have not dared to speak up.

If it is status you seek, just don't be de-stressed

Dorothy Meyer

From the day Adam lost a rib so that woman might be created, man has been heard to moan, "There's gotta be an easier way to make a living."

If Socrates didn't say it as he drank the cup of hemlock, I'll bet that Xanthippe was in the background muttering, "If I told him once, I told him a thousand times 'There's gotta be an easier way —."

When Michelangelo went to the doctor for the crink in his neck from painting ceilings, the doctor probably said, "Take two aspirins and get into some other line of work, there's gotta be . . ." and Mike said, "Right on, man."

CUSTER MUST have said it at Little Big Horn and if horses could talk Silver certainly said it every time the Lone Ranger dropped into the saddle from the roof of a two-story building.

Finally, scientists have come up with the answer to who has the most urgent right to go to a mental health clinic babbling, "There's gotta be an easier way to make a living." The findings were released last week. With the report went a "stress chart" grading each of 130 occupations and showing which occupation was Number One on the fit parade.

It's all very interesting, but already I can see that the chart is going to cause more stress than the job — one's position on the list is becoming a status symbol.

At work the switchboard operators (No. 17 on the list) are lording it over the secretaries who are number 26, and clerical workers (No. 39) are telling the editor (No. 46), "You think YOU got it tough, you should try being a 39 for a couple of weeks.

AND EVERYONE is getting pretty cheeky with administration because administrators are way down to 99th on the list. (I keep my mouth shut because the last I heard, good old 99 still had the clout to fire the whole bunch of us even if he is ten notches below my garbage man. I don't even argue with No. 89.)

No one seems to be immune. Early this week I saw my minister (No. 36) at a service station and when the garageman (No.35) gave him his bill. Number 36 said, "Oh, Lord (no rating)."

I also noticed the I'm-stressier-than-you-are syndrome at a wedding reception last Saturday. When the photographer muttered something about being under a lot of pressure lately, a dishwasher came out of the kitchen and said, "Oh yeah? You're only 16 on the list and I'm eighth, so there."

But nowhere on the list is "father of the bride" and he's the poor guy who had to pay for that whole stress mess.

WHICH BRINGS UP the subject of money and I must fault the scientists because their chart doesn't relate salary to stress.

I figure that the person earning fifty thou a year is more relaxed than I am as we look over the steaks at the meat counter. He buys a porterhouse without a twinge, but the last time I bought one I went through 59 stress points deciding whether I should eat it or have it bronzed.

Yesterday I was going to discuss the job-salary-stress thing with my boss, but I have such a goofy job I couldn't figure out what I was on the list.

Then the boss told me what I was on his list and now I got status — from AAA Number One stress.

I joined the United States Air Force in 1950 when I was 19, just after the Korean War started and by 1958 had worked my way up through the ranks and earned a regular commission. In 1965 at 34 with only five years to retirement and a promotion coming I resigned, because I could no longer accept our disastrous policies as being the result of ignorance or incompetence.

We had witnessed the betrayal of the Hungarian Freedom Fighters (mostly teen-agers), the deliberate push of a known Communist, Fidel Castro, into power in Cuba; and the sellout at the Bay of Pigs. Also, by this time we were clearly being set up for a Korean-type disaster, this time in Vietnam. This coupled with other events I witnessed while in the service convinced me that we were being betrayed at the highest levels.

That betrayal is continuing to this day and at an ever increasing rate. Only a fool could give away the Panama Canal with its military and economic significance, and only a traitor would deliberately turn it over to a Communist. Next on the list will be the three most anti-Communist governments remaining in the world today; Rhodesia, Chile and Taiwan. If we, in this country are content to allow such policies to continue we had better ask ourselves how much longer can WE have left.

Insurance racket probe puts Kleindienst on stand

Watch on Washington

Senate investigations of convicted California insurance racketeer Joseph Hauser will raise new questions of credibility for Richard Kleindienst, former attorney general.

Kleindienst, convicted of misleading a Senate committee with false and inaccurate testimony in one phase of the Watergate affair, will be a key witness before the Senate Permanent Investigations subcommittee in its exploration of the multimillion-dollar insurance fund frauds.

Hauser's insurance firms paid a $250,000 fee to the Kleindienst law firm for making a few telephone calls to International Teamsters Union Pres. Frank E. Fitzsimmons, a personal friend and golfing pal of the former attorney general.

KLEINDIENST WAS PAID that substantial fee for simply contacting Fitzsimmons and putting in a good word for the insurance firms through which Hauser was dealing in an effort to land the multimillion-dollar group policy covering 200,000 Teamsters in the Central States, Southeast and Southwest area.

The group insurance policy with premiums estimated at more than $20 million a year was awarded to Old Security Life Insurance Co. of Kansas City, Mo., with an arrangement for the major part of those premiums to pass through to the Hauser insurance group through a reinsurance arrangement.

The Teamsters have filed suit in federal courts in Chicago seeking return of the millions paid to the Hauser insurance group, and also have asked that Kleindienst return the $250,000 legal fee on grounds that misrepresentations caused them to enter into the insurance deal with Hauser. However, Kleindienst has denied knowledge of any of the deceptive money manipulations.

Investigations by the Senate permanent investigations subcommittee have developed evidence indicating sharp contradictions between the explanations that Kleindienst, Fitzsimmons and Hauser have given as to what was known about the reinsurance arrangements.

THE FORMER ATTORNEY general in the Nixon administration will be faced with choosing between admissions of an incredible lack of knowledge of the operation of the Hauser group that he represented, or with admissions of knowledge that could implicate him in the frauds by the Hauser group.

The investigation of Hauser's dealings with the Teamsters Union and the Laborer's International Union will be the first of a series dealing with insurance contracts awarded in Arizona, Florida, Indiana and Massachusetts.

The companies involved in the hearings will include Farmers National Life Insurance Company of Florida, the Family Provider Life Insurance Company of Arizona, and the Old Security Life Insurance Company of Kansas City.

In addition, the Senate Investigations subcommittee will focus on the continuing strong behind-the-scene role of Allen Dorfman, a convicted insurance racketeer and a friend of the late Jimmy Hoffa, in Teamsters insurance and pension matters.

ALSO, THE SUBCOMMITTEE has come across evidence of Labor Dept. obstruction and foot-dragging on organized crime strike force investigations of pension and insurance frauds involving officials of the Teamsters Union and the International Laborer's Union.

The hearings originally scheduled for late September have been postponed until after mid-October because of acting chairman San Nunn's, D-Ga., very active participation in the Bert Lance hearings.

Psychiatric group condemns abuse

The Soviet government may be wondering whether it should have allowed any of the dissidents who had been held in the country's notorious psychiatric prison-hospitals to emigrate to the West after all. It is the evidence of former inmates such as Vladimir Bukovsky and Leonid Plyushch that has persuaded the World Psychiatric Assn. to come off the fence on this issue.

At its recent congress in Honolulu the WPA adopted a resolution — albeit with the narrowest of majorities — condemning the abuse of psychiatry and calling on psychiatrists in the countries concerned to renounce such practices. Specifically, the resolution added that it should be implemented "in the first instance in reference to the extensive evidence of the systematic abuse of psychiatry for political purposes in the Soviet Union."

THE OFFICIAL Soviet delegation at the Honolulu congress fought hard to stop, or at the very least dilute, the resolution. Professor Snezhevsky of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, called the whole debate a "psychiatric variant of anti-Sovietism." The Soviet delegation left the congress hall while the issue was being debated.

Even before the congress had started, the KGB had inspired the publication, in both Russia and the West, of lists of dissidents who had formerly been locked up in Soviet psychiatric prison-hospitals and who allegedly had to receive psychiatric treatment again as soon as they reached the West.

BUT THE CONGRESS preferred to believe the evidence of the former dissidents. Some of this had appeared in a meticulously researched British study published on the eve of the Honolulu congress.

Of course, the Soviet practice of locking away perfectly sane people just because their opinions differ from the Soviet government's will not stop just because the reputable WPA has condemned it. But it will become more difficult. Above all, the Honolulu resolution may lend courage to those Soviet psychiatrists who have disapproved of what went on but have not dared to speak up.

If it is status you seek, just don't be de-stressed

Dorothy Meyer

From the day Adam lost a rib so that woman might be created, man has been heard to moan, "There's gotta be an easier way to make a living."

If Socrates didn't say it as he drank the cup of hemlock, I'll bet that Xanthippe was in the background muttering, "If I told him once, I told him a thousand times 'There's gotta be an easier way —."

When Michelangelo went to the doctor for the crink in his neck from painting ceilings, the doctor probably said, "Take two aspirins and get into some other line of work, there's gotta be . . ." and Mike said, "Right on, man."

CUSTER MUST have said it at Little Big Horn and if horses could talk Silver certainly said it every time the Lone Ranger dropped into the saddle from the roof of a two-story building.

Finally, scientists have come up with the answer to who has the most urgent right to go to a mental health clinic babbling, "There's gotta be an easier way to make a living." The findings were released last week. With the report went a "stress chart" grading each of 130 occupations and showing which occupation was Number One on the fit parade.

It's all very interesting, but already I can see that the chart is going to cause more stress than the job — one's position on the list is becoming a status symbol.

At work the switchboard operators (No. 17 on the list) are lording it over the secretaries who are number 26, and clerical workers (No. 39) are telling the editor (No. 46), "You think YOU got it tough, you should try being a 39 for a couple of weeks.

AND EVERYONE is getting pretty cheeky with administration because administrators are way down to 99th on the list. (I keep my mouth shut because the last I heard, good old 99 still had the clout to fire the whole bunch of us even if he is ten notches below my garbage man. I don't even argue with No. 89.)

No one seems to be immune. Early this week I saw my minister (No. 36) at a service station and when the garageman (No.35) gave him his bill. Number 36 said, "Oh, Lord (no rating)."

Russians study area road systems

by KURT BAER

An expressway without bottlenecks and tollbooths is the dream of many American motorists, but for drivers in the Soviet Union cheater gates and traffic james are unknown, says Ivan Mosolyako, Soviet First Deputy Minister for Road Building and Maintenance.

Mosolyako is part of a Russian delegation that visited the Illinois Dept. of Transportation's Schaumburg offices this week.

The Russians are on a U.S. tour sponsored by INTORG Corp., New York, and is studying American road and bridge maintenance and traffic controls.

There is an automobile explosion in the Soviet Union right now, Mosolyako told The Daily Herald through an interpreter. Car production has increased from 345,000 autos in 1972 to more than two million this year.

THERE ARE 65,000 kilometers (40,365 miles) of new highway to be built in the USSR by 1980, he said.

Mosolyako said rush hour expressway tie-ups between Soviet cities and suburbs do not beset the Russian driver.

Toll baskets and cheater gates are similarly foreign to the Soviets, he said.

But Russian drivers, like their American counterparts, risk arrest if they exceed a 55 mph speed limit.

Mosolyako and Igor Petukhov, chief engineer of the trust for road building and maintenance, USSR, were shown the Northwest Tollway, Ill. Rte. 53, the Illinois Dept. of Transportation's traffic monitoring systems and the Illinois Tollway authority's Oak Brook headquarters. They also inspected I-90 between Erie, Pa. and Buffalo, N.Y.

"All of the roads we have used and seen have made a very good impression," Mosolyako said.

Information gathered from the U.S. tour will be used to help complete the Soviet's current five-year highway building plan, he said.

Virtue doubted, bride sues mate for $1 million

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. (UPI) — Anna Buindo Ruffino is suing her husband of three months for $1 million for allegedly telling friends and relatives that she was not a virgin when he married her.

"Some people may find humor in this, but it is a very serious case," said Richard L. Wolk, Mrs. Ruffino's attorney.

Mrs. Ruffino and her husband, Salvatore, 30, are Sicilians whose families adhere strictly to the Old World concept of virtue. They separated five days after their wedding in a dispute over the bride's chastity.

"IN OUR SOCIETY, whether a woman is chaste when she is married doesn't mean that much," Wolk said. "But in the Sicilian community, it is a tradition and established custom that a woman geting married for the first time be a virgin."

The suit alleges that Ruffino made "scandalous, malicious statements" about his wife that spread as far as Santa Clara, Calif., where Mrs. Ruffino formerly lived, and even Terracini, Sicily, where she was born and lived until she was 12 years old.

THE COUPLE met in California and their wedding was arranged through their families in keeping with Sicilian custom.

On their weding night, Wolk said, Ruffino accused his bride "of falsely representing that she was chaste, expressed dissatisfaction because evidence was lacking of her chastity and told her he would not remain married to a woman who is not a virgin.

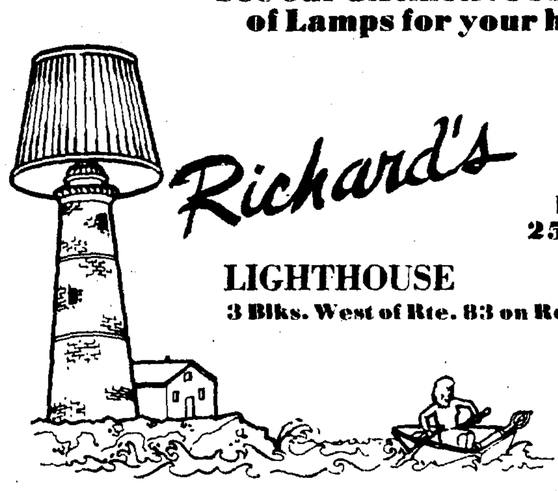

"After the first night, Salvatore didn't touch her," the attorney said. "He berated her and wouldn't have anything to do with her. She couldn't sleep or eat. We even have a letter from the physician stating that she was a virgin when she got married."

Ohio game's OK, but conferences count

The talk among college football fans this week has been mostly about today's matchup between third-ranked Ohio State and fourth-ranked Oklahoma at Columbus, Ohio, but there are two other games involving nationally ranked opponents on the weekend schedule that have far greater significance.

To be sure, the battle between Ohio State and Oklahoma may have a lot to do with the national championship before the season is finished, yet it is not a conference game for either club and thus a loss would not be critical.

The conference races are more important to most coaches, and that's why the games between sixth-ranked Texas Tech and seventh-ranked Texas A&M Saturday night and 10th-ranked Florida and 16th-ranked Mississippi State this afternoon are of vital importance.

TEXAS TECH and Texas A&M, both unbeaten in two starts, are expected to battle it out for the Southwest Conference championship and Saturday night's game at Lubbock, Tex., could be the one which decides it all.

"There's going to be a lot of big games in the conference this year and you can definitely rank this one in that category," says Texas Tech Coach Steve Sloan. "The fans who were lucky enough to get tickets for this one will probably have a great treat in store if they are looking for action.

If it is a game that must be decided by a field goal then Texas A&M would appear to have the edge. The Aggies' barefooted Tony Franklin, an All-America last year, is the best placekicker in the nation and successfully has converted field goals from more than 50 yards.

A matchup similar to the Texas Tech-Texas A&M encounter will take place at Jackson, Miss., where Mississippi State and Florida will fight it out for the leadership in the Southeastern Conference. Mississippi State, which has just come off NCAA probation, has won its first two games while Florida is 1-0.

THIS ONE figures to be a battle of offenses. Florida, which boasts an extraordinarily fast offensive backfield, rolled up 503 yards in total offense last Saturday in crushing Rice 48-3 while Mississippi State has averaged 389 yards per game in its two outings.

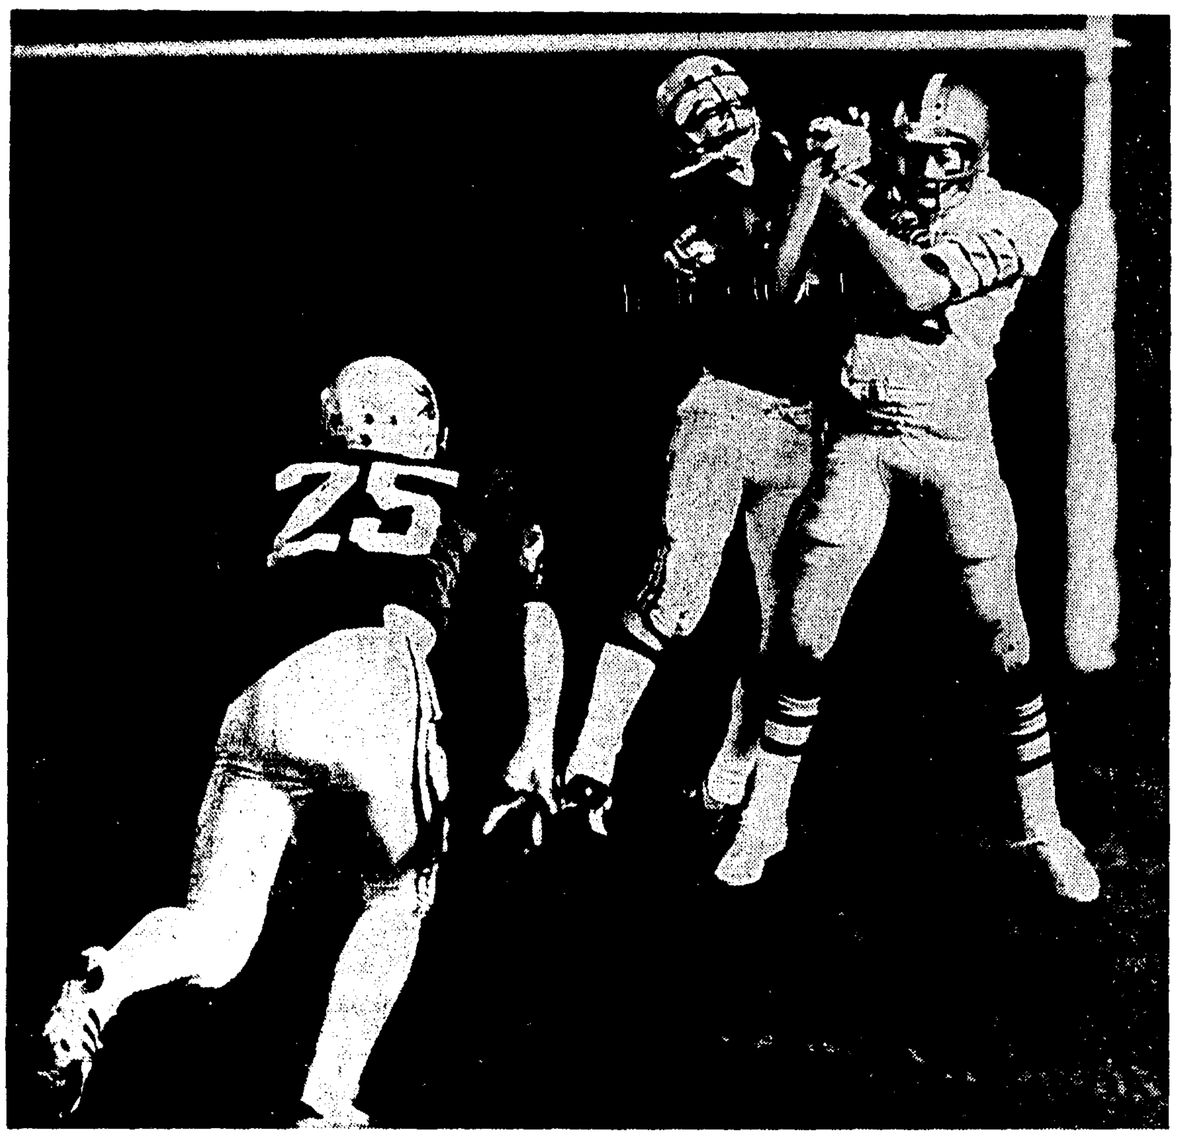

If Florida wins this game, the Gators would emerge as the favorite to win the SEC. The Gators don't have to play either Alabama or Mississippi this year while Mississippi State will meet both later this season.

Now, about that game that everyone is talking about. It will mark the first time ever that Ohio State and Oklahoma have met on the college football field and both coaches are anticipating a grueling battle.

"I like the Ohio State games better than the Vanderbilts," said Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer. "In the big games you do the little things better because it has your complete attention. You hope to play with more intensity."

OKLAHOMA SHOULD BE helped considerably by the return of quarterback Tom Lott to action. Lott, who operates the Sooners' wishbone offense masterfully, missed the Utah game last week with a bruised nerve in his knee.

Fremd found out that Wheeling was for real.

At the same time, Wheeling found out that Kevin Weaver is unreal. The hard-churning Fremd halfback did all the damage the Vikings really needed to do to tarnish the Wildcats' previously unbeaten slate Friday evening in leading his club to a 27-10 triumph on their home turf.

The 180-pound veteran countered Wheeling's opening score with a 51-yard paydirt dash to open the second period and then capped a 64-yard third-quarter drive with another TD. The rest was frosting on the cake as the Vikings chalked up their third straight win of the season and opened North Division MSL play on the triumphant side of the ledger.

"OUR KIDS SHOWED they have character," explained Fremd coach Joe Samojedny after the hard-hitting contest. "We haven't had to come from behind this season but they put it together tonight against a pretty rugged Wheeling team."

Samojedny admitted that his charges may have gone into the game expecting to breeze to an easy win. "We came out flat tonight and I think it surprised our kids when Wheeling went right in for a score. I tried to prepare them for a tough battle but they had to learn for themselves."

The Wildcast needed just 14 plays from scrimmage after the opening kickoff to break Fremd's string of eight scoreless quarters. A 16-yard pass from Steve Majkowski to Ed Joas set the ball up at the two and Jeff Starke plunged over left tackle from there.

After Weaver had tied the game with his 51-yard scoring sprint, the 'Cats appeared to be on the move again but Majkowski was hurt on a 13-yard gain and taken out of the game.

WHEELING WAS STILL able to contain Fremd and Ray Waymel later intercepted a Fremd pass just before halftime. A 29-yard pass from junior reserve quarterback Scott Stothoff to Joas moved the 'Cats down to the 10 and Tom Koeppen toed a 27-yard field goal to give his club a 10-7 midgame advantage.

In the second half it was Fremd's turn to march downfield after the kickoff. Weaver hit a couple of long gainers to pave the way and then scooted up the middle from 17 yards out to put the Vikes back in the lead.

A short time later it started to rain and that led to a broken play that all but broke the visitor's backs. Forced to punt deep in his own territory, Fremd kicker Paul Passaglia bobbled the ball and had to run with it.

And run with it, and run with it. By the time he stopped, Passaglia had spanned 85 yards to the Wheeling goal line and Fremd led 20-10.

THE VIKINGS tallied once more with just 14 seconds left in the game, Mike Gavigan flinging a seven-yard TD pass to Duane Amell, but for all intents, the game had already been sewn up tight.

"That broken punt play was a killer all right," sighed Wheeling coach Gerry Clinnin. "We nail him for a loss and we're five yards away from punching over a touchdown and regaining the lead."

Clinnin wouldn't fault his troops though as they went down to their first loss in three games. "Considering that we played nearly the entire game without our number one quarterback, I felt we did a darn good job of accounting for ourselves against a strong team. Our kids don't have to feel embarrassed tonight."

'Unknown' Walsh leads Elk Grove to 30-13 win

by LARRY WATTS

Until Friday night's appearance at Conant, sophomore Jack Walsh had been a virtual unknown in the Elk Grove offense. But by the end of the game, Grenadier coach John Schanke and Cougar mentor John Ayres both agreed that Walsh had been the difference in Elk Grove's 30-13 victory.

All the 203-pound Walsh did is his first full varsity game was carry the ball 23 times for 182 yards and score three touchdowns. He had touchdown runs of 10, 15 and 26 yards.

"Walsh gives us an extra dimension we didn't have in our offense," said Schnake. "Before tonight's game, I didn't even know what he could do."

Walsh only played one half before he injured his shoulder in the Grens' opener against Joliet West. In that game he had eight carries for 19 yards.

"WALSH WAS MUCH better than I expected," said Ayres after watching the Cougars suffer their first loss of the year. "Without having seen him play, it made a big difference in preparing for Elk Grove."

Walsh was not the only pleasant addition to the Elk Grove offense. Senior quarterback Ralph Souder, who also suffered a shoulder injury against Joliet West, returned to give the Cougars fits with his option runs and screen passes to fullback Jim Meyer.

Souder hit Meyer with three screen passes for 48 yards. Meyer's second reception was good for 28 yards and the Grens' second touchdown.

"Souder really moved his team," said Ayres. "After we failed to score in the first period, Elk Grove took the momentum from us and we could only regain it for spurts."

Ayres was referring to a crucial point late in the first period for the Cougars. Conant had the ball with a first down on the Grens' nine-yard line. Held at the three-yard line, Cougar placekicker Steve Herring missed a 21-yard field goal.

AS MEYER broke loose for a 31-yard run, Elk Grove took the ball back downfield to draw first blood. With two tacklers hanging on him for the final five yards, Walsh scored the first touchdown on a 10-yard run.

After Meyer increased the lead to 13-0 on his screen pass, Conant went to work. With quarterback Rocky Pugliese turning an unbelievable fake into a 37-yard run, the Cougars scored with 11 seconds left in the half. Pugliese avoided two tacklers on fourth down and scampered 13 yards to paydirt.

Conant was constantly fighting back from a two-touchdown deficit. Walsh's 15-yard run in the third period put the Grens ahead 20-6, but the Cougars came back with a seven-yard touchdown pass from Pugliese to Brad Goodman.

But it was Walsh's third touchdown of the night, which came early in the fourth period, and a 32-yard field goal by Dave Sargent which finally put the game out of reach.

Ayres had to have been happy with his running game. junior Tim Tyrrell had 102 yards in 11 carries and senior Al Barnhill picked up 100 yards in 14 carries.

Forest View team finds no match in Hoffman

by JEFF NORDLUND

For the last two years Hoffman Eslem for Forest View's gridders, but no more.

The visiting Hawks were no match for the Falcons Friday night, losing 46-0 in the teams' first Mid-Suburban League division match of the year.

From the first play from scrimmage, a 72-yard touchdown scamper by quarterback Jeff Nelson, to the final minutes, when Herb Kruse scored the Falcons' seventh TD, Forest View completely dominated play.

IT GAVE FALCON coach Fred Lussow reason to comment on the team's steady improvement, having now beaten Hoffman and Hersey after an opening overtime loss to Wheaton North.

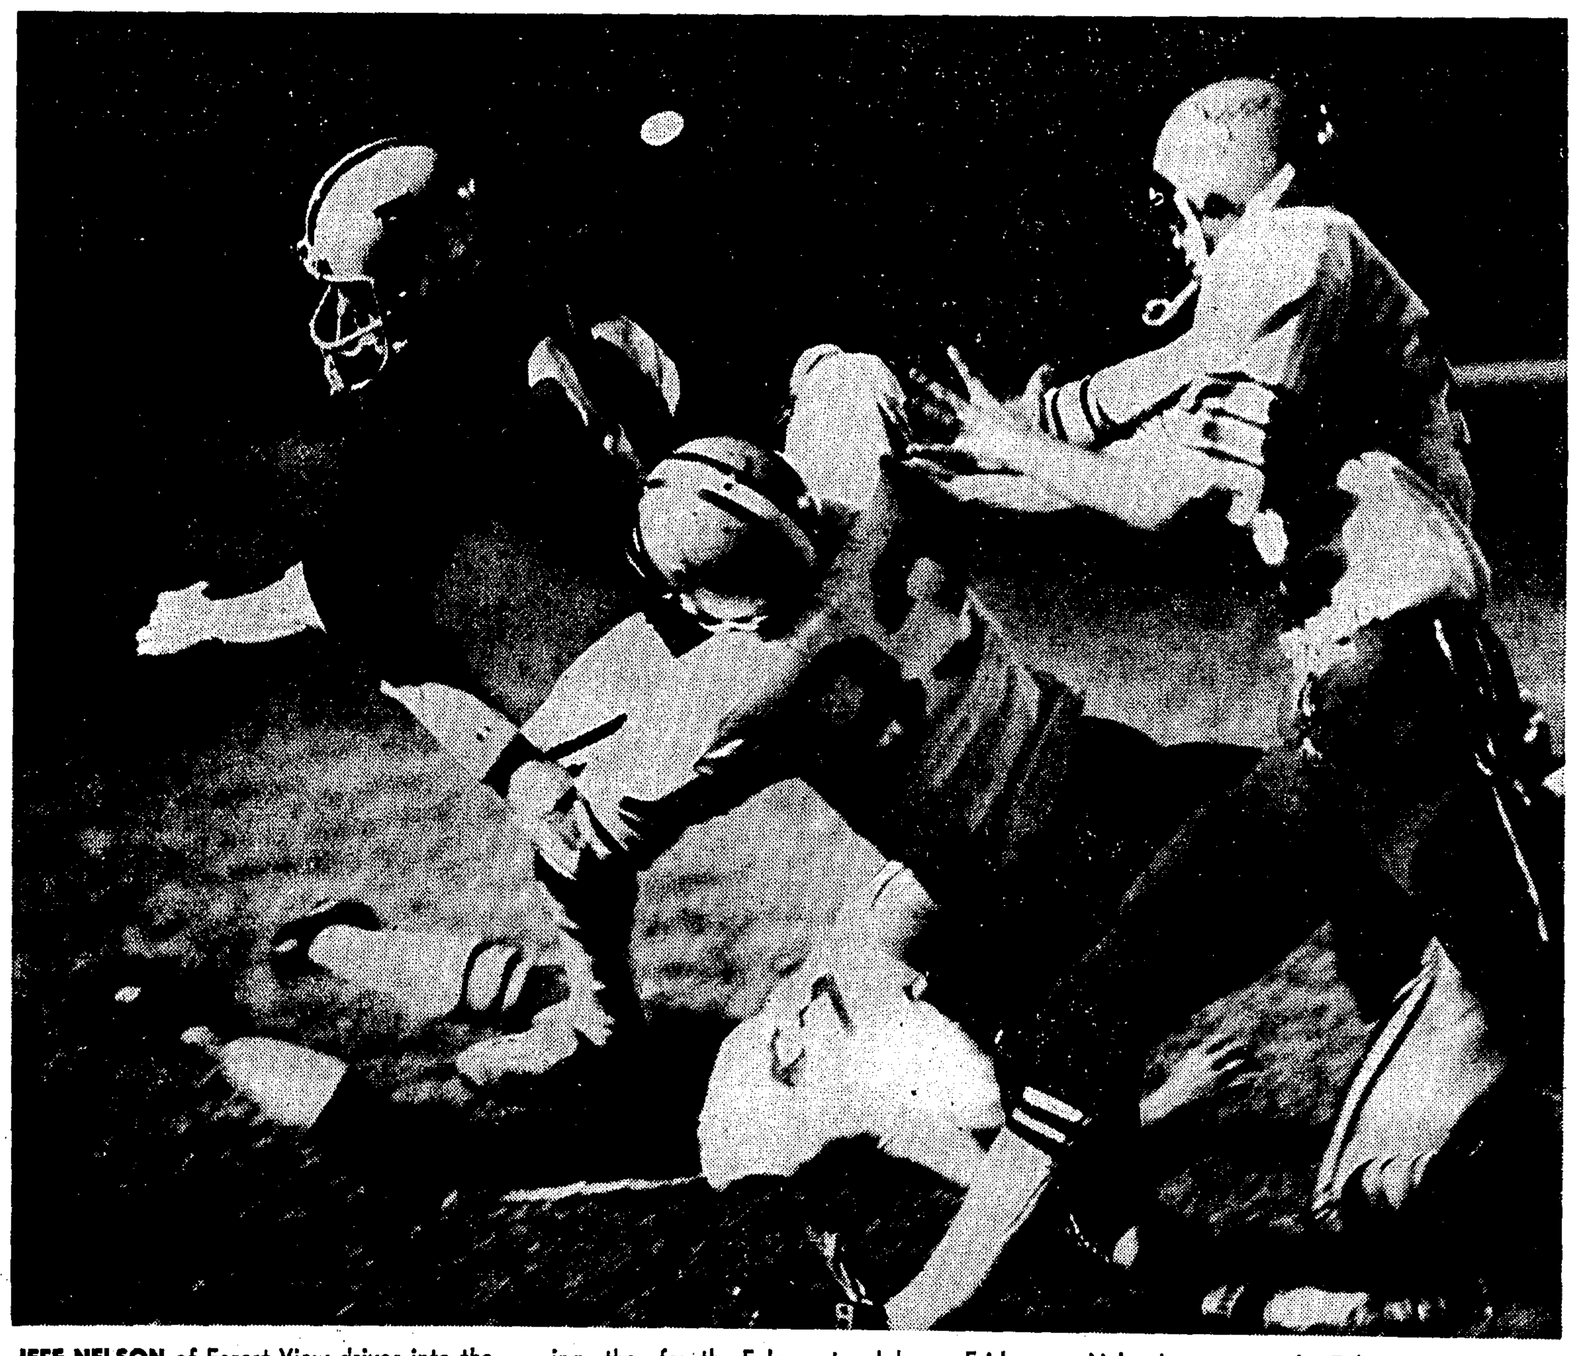

"We're progressing well," Lussow said. "We're finally getting set at positions. When we started this season, we had so many questions.

"Tonight, we had good execution, and it helped to score on the first play like that. That gave us momentum. Then we came back not long after and scored again."

After Nelson's touchdown run and John Fredericks' extra point kick made it 7-0, the Falcons scored late in the first quarter on a 37-yard screen pass from Nelson to Rick Gardner.

RON LARAMIE SWEPT left for 13 yards early in the second period to raise Forest View's lead to 19-0. And just before the end of the half, Gardner scored again on a two-yard

Ohio game's OK, but conferences count

College football

The talk among college football fans this week has been mostly about today's matchup between third-ranked Ohio State and fourth-ranked Oklahoma at Columbus, Ohio, but there are two other games involving nationally ranked opponents on the weekend schedule that have far greater significance.

To be sure, the battle between Ohio State and Oklahoma may have a lot to do with the national championship before the season is finished, yet it is not a conference game for either club and thus a loss would not be critical.

The conference races are more important to most coaches, and that's why the games between sixth-ranked Texas Tech and seventh-ranked Texas A&M Saturday night and 10th-ranked Florida and 16th-ranked Mississippi State this afternoon are of vital importance.

TEXAS TECH and Texas A&M, both unbeaten in two starts, are expected to battle it out for the Southwest Conference championship and Saturday night's game at Lubbock, Tex., could be the one which decides it all.

"There's going to be a lot of big games in the conference this year and you can definitely rank this one in that category," says Texas Tech Coach Steve Sloan. "The fans who were lucky enough to get tickets for this one will probably have a great treat in store if they are looking for action.

If it is a game that must be decided by a field goal then Texas A&M would appear to have the edge. The Aggies' barefooted Tony Franklin, an All-America last year, is the best placekicker in the nation and successfully has converted field goals from more than 50 yards.

A matchup similar to the Texas Tech-Texas A&M encounter will take place at Jackson, Miss., where Mississippi State and Florida will fight it out for the leadership in the Southeastern Conference. Mississippi State, which has just come off NCAA probation, has won its first two games while Florida is 1-0.

THIS ONE figures to be a battle of offenses. Florida, which boasts an extraordinarily fast offensive backfield, rolled up 503 yards in total offense last Saturday in crushing Rice 48-3 while Mississippi State has averaged 389 yards per game in its two outings.

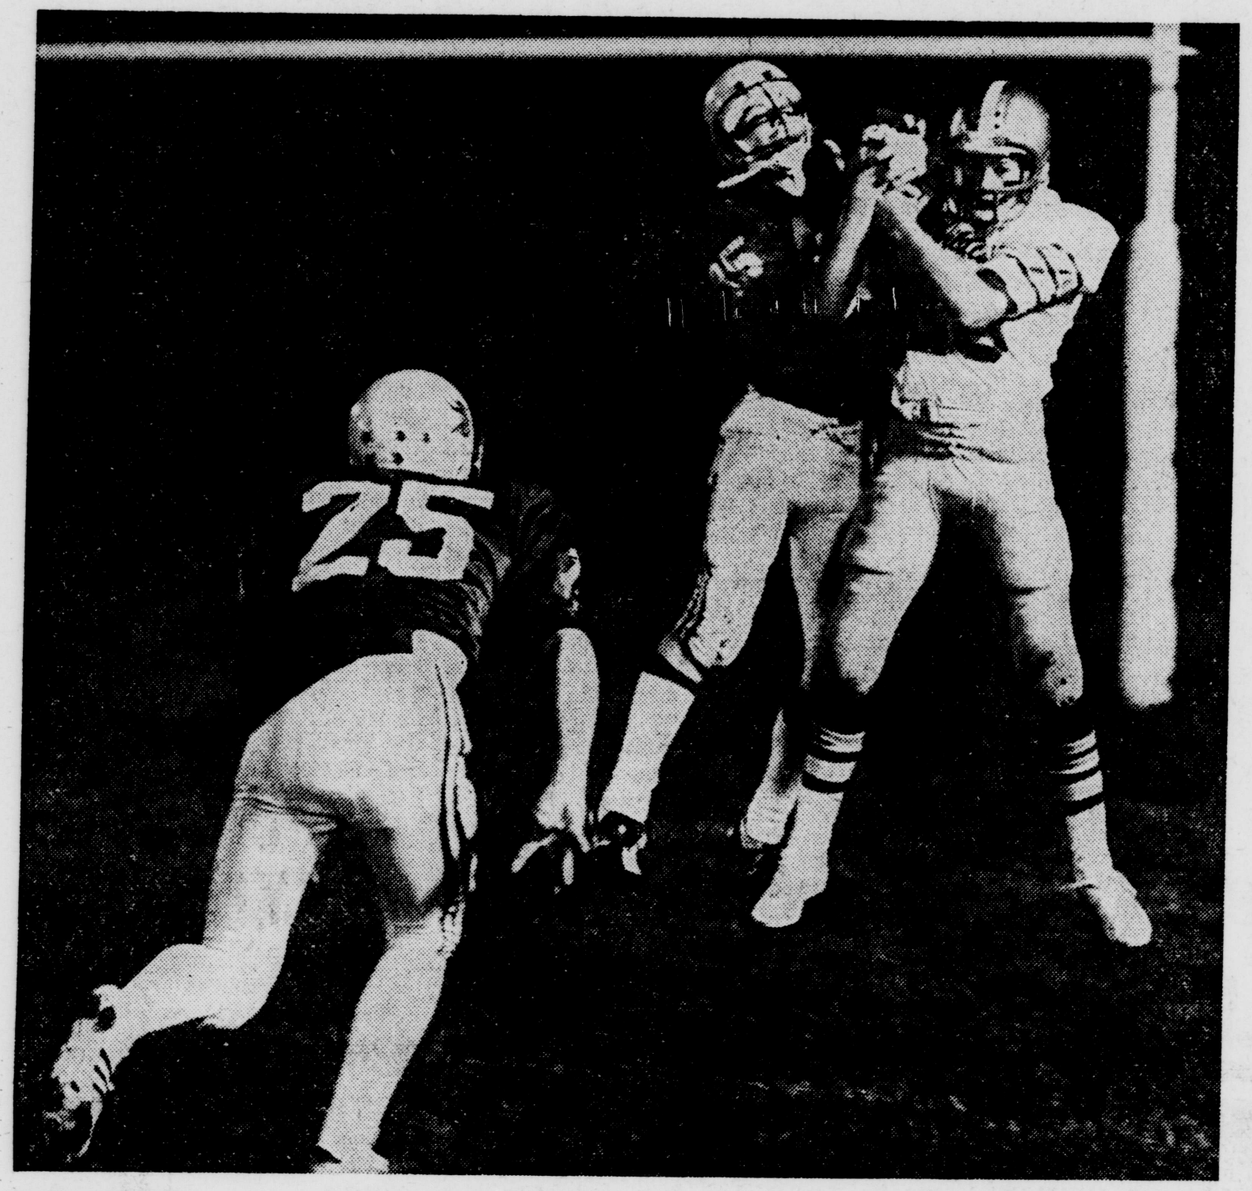

If Florida wins this game, the Gators would emerge as the favorite to win the SEC. The Gators don't have to play either Alabama or Mississippi this year while Mississippi State will meet both later this season.

Now, about that game that everyone is talking about. It will mark the first time ever that Ohio State and Oklahoma have met on the college football field and both coaches are anticipating a grueling battle.

"I like the Ohio State games better than the Vanderbilts," said Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer. "In the big games you do the little things better because it has your complete attention. You hope to play with more intensity."

OKLAHOMA SHOULD BE helped considerably by the return of quarterback Tom Lott to action. Lott, who operates the Sooners' wishbone offense masterfully, missed the Utah game last week with a bruised nerve in his knee.

plunge. Nelson ran the ball in for a two-point conversion to put the Falcons ahead 27-0 at half-time.

John Miscevich raised the Falcon lead to 33-0 with a one-yard run midway through the third quarter, prompting Lussow to begin substituting freely the remainder of the game. Tony Iannotti booted the conversion in place of Fredericks, who had injured his ankle.

The change in personnel for Forest didn't stop the point-attack, as Craig Chuipek quarterbacked the team to another TD on a 44-yard pass to Ted Petrik late in the third quarter to make it 40-0.

Finally, Kruse scored from two yards out in the fourth quarter to conclude the scoring.

BOTH NELSON and Chuipek were strong quarterbacking, a point that didn't escape Lussow.

"I said at the start of the season we would need two quarterbacks. Chuipek came in and did the job in the second half. If Nelson gets injured, Chuipek will have to be our quarterback, so he's got to be ready."

Forest View's defense allowed the Hawks 88 yards in total offense for the night, producing a couple key turnovers that led to touchdowns.

Joe Forssander blocked a Hoffman Estates' punt in the second quarter which led to a Falcon score two plays later, and minutes afterward Karl Kwiatkowski recovered a fumble which set up Forest View's final TD of the first half.

Hoffman Estates' offense was a study in futility, getting no closer to a score than the Falcon 20-yard line. Quarterback Ed Hockenberry never was able to get the Hoffman Estates' offense ignited, and the team fell to its second straight shutout.

The final score Friday at Wrigley Field was 2-0, thanks to Pirate catcher Ed Ott's two-run homer off Willie Hernandez in the eighth inning of the rain-delayed contest played in front of 5,452 Ladies Day diehards.

But it was the contribution of the 6-foot, 5-inch Parker that kept the second-place Pirates in the game long enough for Ott to get his chance. The Pittsburghers are still entertaining slim hopes of overhauling the division-leading Phillie, if only becaue of Parker' fantastic exploits, Friday's included.

The Cubs, meanwhile, were mathematically eliminated from the race for second place, falling nine games behind the Pirates with only eight to play. Mike Krukow made the start as a last-minute replacement for 20-game winner Rick Reuschel, whose blister on his pitching hand has yet to heal.

BOBBY MURCER tried to give Krukow a big first-inning lead when he dynamited a Jim Rooker curveball with two out and the bases full. Parker tracked it down, though, leaping at the last instant and crashing into the vines in right field, keeping three Cub runs off the scoreboard.

In the third inning, after Jose Cardinal drew a one-out walk and Bill Buckner doubled him to third, Parker snuffed out another Cub threat. This time, he grabbed Gene Clines' medium-deep fly ball to right field and shot a one-bounce strike to Ott, who was waiting at the plate for Cardenal to slide into the easy double play. Ott tagged Jose in the face, undoubtedly getting egg on his mitt.

OMAR MORENO of the Pirates dives for a ball hit by Cubs' Bill Buckner in the third inning of action Friday at Wrigley Field. The ball got by Moreno allowing Buckner to reach second. The Pirates won, 2-0.

Parker, who singled and tripled but was stranded both times, saved his final defensive contribution till the bottom of the ninth after Ott's homer had opened up the 2-0 Pirate lead. Steve Ontiveros had started the inning with a single off Pittsburgh reliever Rich Gossage, but Murcer and Steve Swisher were easy outs, leaving it up to pinch hitter Dave Rosello.

Rosello looped a short fly ball into right field, but Parker was playing perfectly. He got a good jump at contact and raced in to make a bellyf-looping catch off the top of the grass barely 30 feet beyond first base.

THE LOSS WAS A frustrating experience for the Cubs and Hernandez, who allowed the homer to Ott after a Buckner error opened the gates. The cubs just missed what would have been an inning-ending DP on the batter previous to Ott.

In Krukow's seven-inning stint he gave up just five hits and stranded six runners in scoring position. His arm tightened up after the 45-minute rain delay during the top of the seventh, although the rookie righthander came back to finish the inning.

The Cubs had an excellent chance to get back in the game in the eighth when Ivan DeJesus singled and pinch hitter Larry Biittner walked with one away. But Buckner lined deep to Parker in right, and Greg Gross, batting for Clines, forced Biittner at second on a very close play.

Reds' Foster hits 50th home run

From Daily Herald wire services

The tight race in the American League East has been the talk of the baseball world in the past few weeks, but Cincinnati slugger George Foster shoved the National League back into the headlines Friday night.

While the New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox were winning and Baltimore Orioles were losing in the AL East, Cincinnati's Foster cracked his 50th home run to become the first player since 1965 to reach that plateau.

Foster's blow came in the Reds' 5-1 victory over Atlanta, and he became the first since Willie Mays hit 52 in 1965 to hit 50 or more home runs and the first in Cincinnati history to perform the feat.

IN THE AMERICAN League features Friday night Graig Nettles broke a 3-3 tie in the ninth with his 36th homer of the season, a two-out, two-run blast to right field, to back the five-hit pitching of Don Gullett and lift the Yankees to a 5-3 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Gullett, 13-4, recorded a season-high 12 strikeouts and walked none.

Rico Carty scored one run and drove in the eventual winning run to help the Cleveland Indians snap Baltimore's three-game winning streak with a 3-2 victory over the Orioles.

Lefthander Bill Lee, backed by Butch Hobson's three-run homer in the third inning, pitched a four-hitter and faced just one batter over the minimum in keeping the Boston Red Sox in the American League East title chase with a 5-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

IN THE NATIONAL League Foster was the whole show in the Reds' victory. He has his homer, triple and two singles in the 5-1 conquest. Foster was 4-for-4 Thursday afternoon but struck out in the first Friday night.

Greg Luzinski drove in three runs with a double and single and Mike Schmidt drilled his 37th home run to guide the Philadelphia Phillies to a 6-1 victory over the Montreal Expos behind the pitching of Larry Christenson and Gene Garber.

Bob Forsch picked up his 19th victory of the season and Garry Templeton collected three hits to raise his season total to 190 in the St. Louis Cardinals' 10-6 victory over the New York Mets.

Jose Cruz' sacrifice fly in the bottom of the 12th scored Enos Cabell from third base to give the Houston Astros a 4-3 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Third-inning home runs defeat White Sox, 3-2

SEATTLE — Third-inning home runs by Dave Collins and Lee Stanton produced three runs and that was all the Mariners needed to defeat the White Sox 3-2 here Friday night.

Francisco Barrios started the game for the Sox in search of his 15th win against five losses but ended up taking his sixth loss because of the third inning mistakes.

COLLINS' HOME run, only his fifth of the season, was a solo shot with one out. Barrios got the next man up, Dan Meyer, to foul out to the first baseman and almost got out of the inning without further damage. But second baseman Jorge Orta couldn't handle a ground ball to his left that went for a hit and the next man up, Stanton, kissed one deep into the third deck in right field for his 26th homer as the Mariners took a 3-0 lead.

Tom House started for the Mariners and earned the victory, his fifth against five defeats, but lasted only five innings and was charged with both Sox runs. John Montague came on to start the sixth after the Sox had scored two in the fifth and pitched the final four innings.

House has earned victories in both of the games the Mariners have won from the Sox this year.

Oscar Gamble led off the Sox fifth with a walk and went to third on Chet Lemon's double. Wayne Nordhagen, who was 3-for-4 with three singles, drove Gamble in with a hit. House got Alan Bannister to pop up but then walked Jim Essian to load the bases. Bob Coluccio drove in the second run of the inning with a sacrifice fly but the Sox could score no more as they stranded two.

THE SOX HAD gone into the game on a hot streak, having won five of their last six. The loss was their first in Seattle after four wins.

Barrios lasted 6-2/3 innings, giving up three runs on seven hits, striking out three and walking one, before he was relieved by Dave Hamilton, who finished up for the Sox.

ANAHEIM (UPI) — Al Cowens drove in five runs with three doubles and Dennis Leonard fired a five-hitter for his 19th win to help the Kansas City Royals clinch their second straight American League West title with a 7-3 victory over the California Angels.

Third-inning home runs defeat White Sox, 3-2

SEATTLE — Third-inning home runs by Dave Collins and Lee Stanton produced three runs and that was all the Mariners needed to defeat the White Sox 3-2 here Friday night.

Francisco Barrios started the game for the Sox in search of his 15th win against five losses but ended up taking his sixth loss because of the third inning mistakes.

COLLINS' HOME run, only his fifth of the season, was a solo shot with one out. Barrios got the next man up, Dan Meyer, to foul out to the first baseman and almost got out of the inning without further damage. But second baseman Jorge Orta couldn't handle a ground ball to his left that went for a hit and the next man up, Stanton, kissed one deep into the third deck in right field for his 26th homer as the Mariners took a 3-0 lead.

Tom House started for the Mariners and earned the victory, his fifth against five defeats, but lasted only five innings and was charged with both Sox runs. John Montague came on to start the sixth after the Sox had scored two in the fifth and pitched the final four innings.

House has earned victories in both of the games the Mariners have won from the Sox this year.

Oscar Gamble led off the Sox fifth with a walk and went to third on Chet Lemon's double. Wayne Nordhagen, who was 3-for-4 with three singles, drove Gamble in with a hit. House got Alan Bannister to pop up but then walked Jim Essian to load the bases. Bob Coluccio drove in the second run of the inning with a sacrifice fly but the Sox could score no more as they stranded two.

THE SOX HAD gone into the game on a hot streak, having won five of their last six. The loss was their first in Seattle after four wins.

Barrios lasted 6-2/3 innings, giving up three runs on seven hits, striking out three and walking one, before he was relieved by Dave Hamilton, who finished up for the Sox.

St. Viator's Lyne gives team credit for 14-0 win

by DARREL KACHAN

Jim Lyne, the St. Viator football coach, won't take any of the credit for his team's 14-0 triumph over Notre Dame Friday night in a key East Suburban Catholic League showdown.

In fact, he blames himself for the narrow margin of victory.

"I could've called some better plays," he said. "Our offense was in control, but the penalties and some bad calls hurt us. The defense really came through and did a superlative job."

The Lion defense, spearheaded by down linemen Mike Zurawski, Ken Gillen and Tom Smid, limited the Dons to six first downs and forced two fumbles to set up both Viator touchdowns.

THE FIRST score came after a Notre Dame miscue on the opening kickoff. The Dons tried to surprise the Lions with a reverse, but the maneuver backfired when the handoff was muffed and Tony Falduto recovered on the Notre Dame 25.

A couple of procedure penalties temporarily stalled the drive, but Lion quarterback John Josten connected with Greg Harrison on a fourth-and-10 situation down to the 14. Three plays later halfback Dan Schwellenbach busted over left tackle from the seven, scooped up his own fumble and sauntered into the end zone.

Chris Selvig's extra-point gave the Lions a 7-0 lead with 8:55 remaining in the first quarter.

After the ensuing kickoff, the Dons put together their only drive of the evening. They moved 36 yards down to the St. Viator 27 on some outside running by quarterback Scott Stearney.

"We had him contained on most of those plays but missed some tackles," said Lyne.

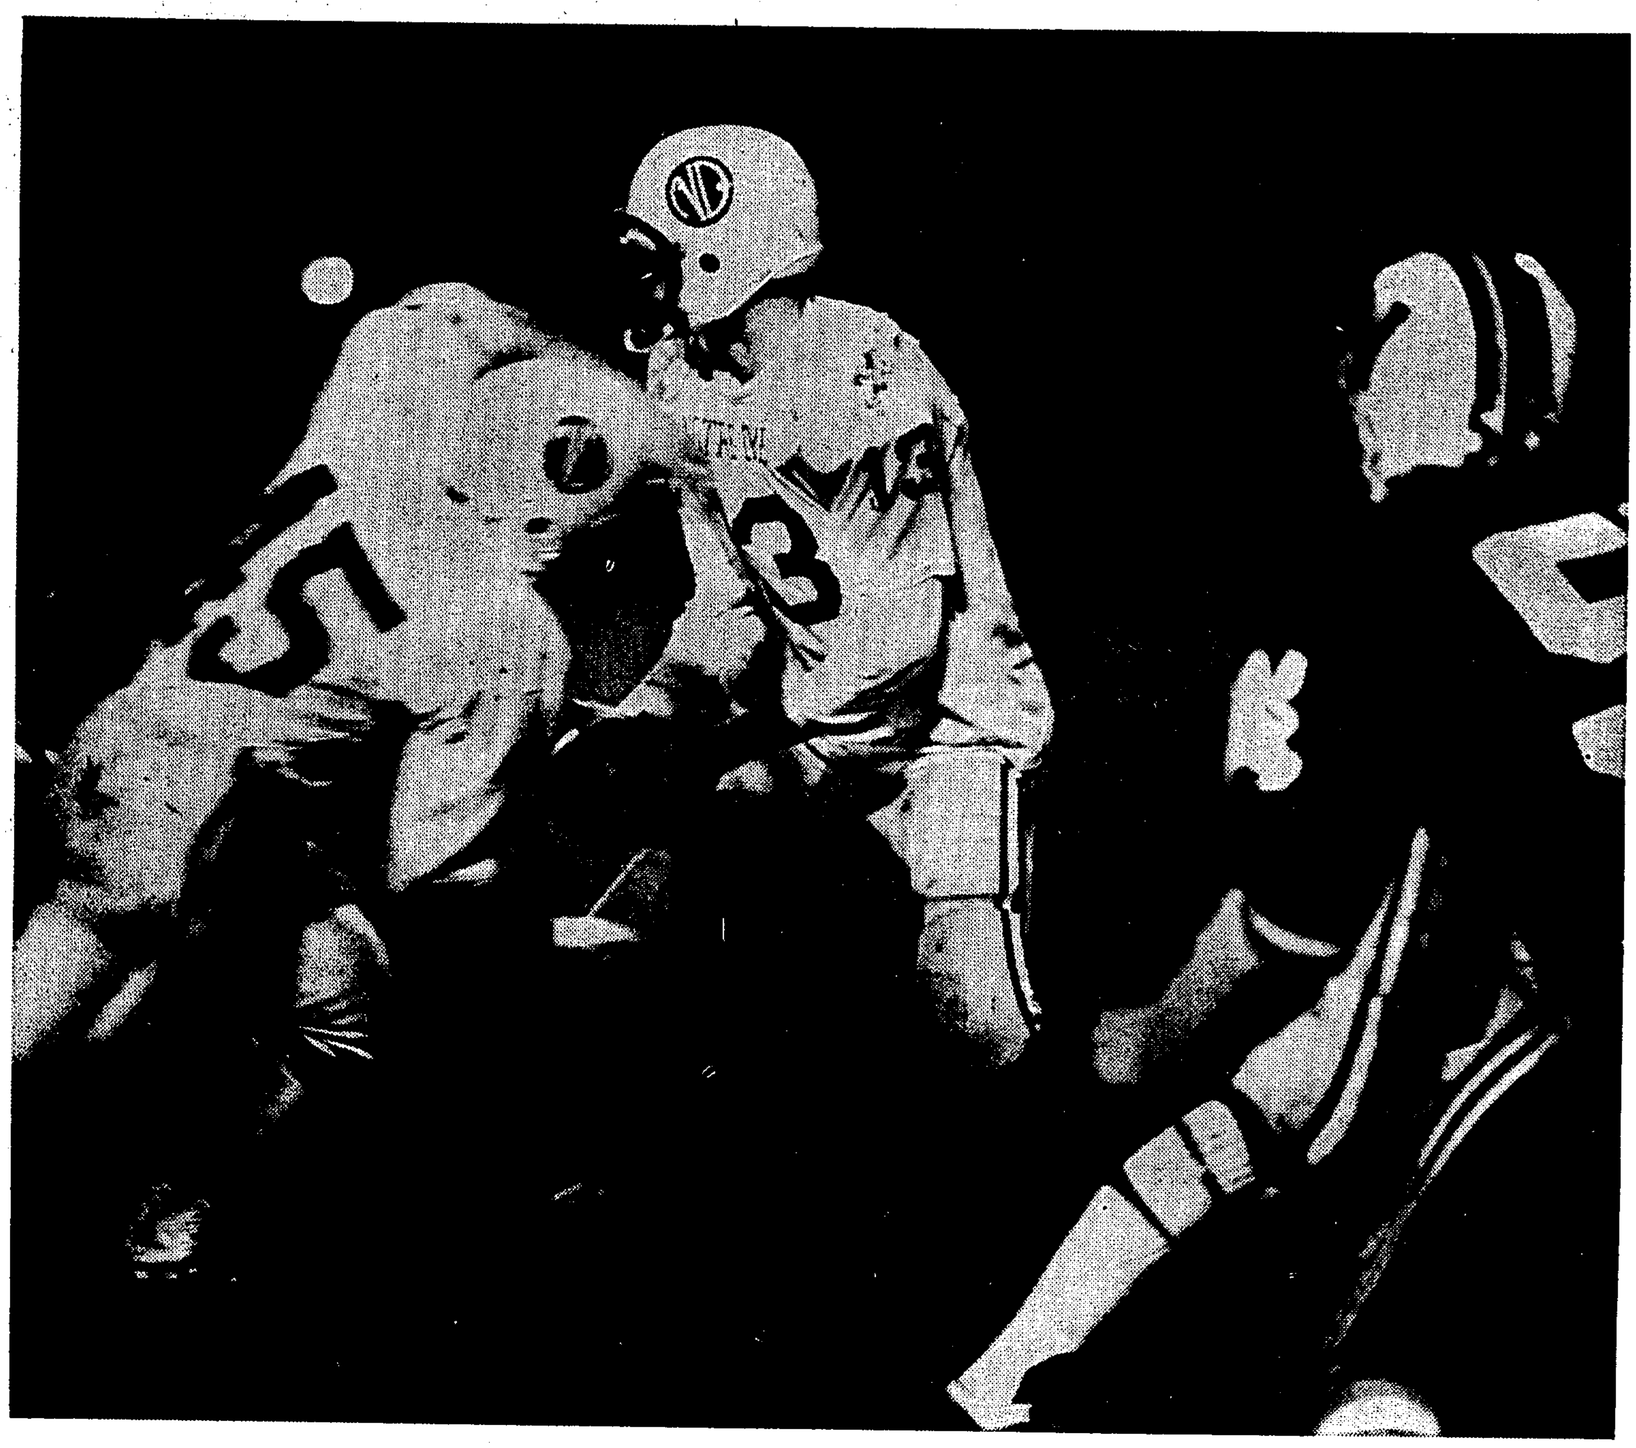

THE ST. VIATOR defense stiffened at that point and took over on downs. Notre Dame's punchless offense, which attempted only two passes the first three quarters, spent the rest of the contest futilely trying to crack the Lion line.

The St. Viator attack showed flashes of brilliance but sputtered often enough to prevent any scoring drives. Josten ran for 33 yards and passed for 59 more the first half but 50 yards in St. Viator penalties helped keep the rest of the half scoreless.

Both defenses played a strong third quarter. The Lions marched 52 yards on the strength of a 19-yard Josten-to-Dan Bucaro pass and a 24-yard quarterback draw down to the 39. A Josten fumble, however, ended that threat.

Late in the period, Falduto's punt which rolled out of bounds on the seven set up the final tally. On the next play Stearney slipped and his bobbled handoff was recovered by Jim Kellner on the two.

SCHWELLENBAC MOVED it down to the goal line, and Josten sneaked over for the insurance six-pointer on the first play of the fourth quarter. Selvig again added the extra-point.

HANDING OFF to the back trailing Hugh Williams (45) is Notre Dame High School quarterback Scott Stearney in action Friday night against St. Viator. Stearney faked to Williams and then gave the ball to Tony Jarfita. St. Viator blanked the visiting Dons, 14-0, on the Arlington field.

Forest View wins in soccer upset

The Forest View soccer team shocked a homecoming audience estimated at 2,000 at Maine East Friday night with a 3-2 upset of the highly-regarded Blue Demons.

In dominating fashion, Forest View outshot Maine East, 26-8 and made the score closer than it should have been by mistakingly kicking in one of the Blue Demons' goals.

Maine East opened the scoring in the first period when Forest View accidentally allowed the ball to trickle through the goal with no Blue Demons in sight. The fluke goal was awarded to Jim Unger unassisted.

The Falcons rebounded with 5:31 left in the first quarter on Nick Racz' first of two goals, assisted by Tom Sroka.

Neither team scored in the second period, but Maine East regained the edge on a goal by Alfonso Curiel while Forest View's Sroka knotted things again with a goal just five minutes later.

Racz drilled the clincher, assisted by Wally Hegel at the 14:50 mark of the game, giving goalie Matt Clark, who turnel aside seven shots, the welcomed verdict. Forest View is now 5-2 on the season.

Long runs fetch 28-14 win for Rolling Meadows

by DON FRISKE

Mark Rustemeyer saw something his Rolling Meadows' coaches missed Friday night — an open right sideline.

You see, when the Mustang runner picked up a bouncing punt in the third quarter against Arlington, his coaches were yelling, "Get out of the way." But they were looking toward their own end zone.

Meanwhile, Rustemeyer was staring sudden glory in the face.

SO HE TUCKED the football under his arm, romped 58 yards for a touchdown, and gave the Mustangs a 21-14 lead which eventually held up for a 28-14 voctory over the Cardinals.

"I was hollering, 'No, no no,' " said Art Klein, the Mustang coach. "But Rustemeyer is one of our best open-field runners, a good ballhandler."

That punt return was a key one. Rustemeyer surprised everyone with his gallant attempt, which came in the midst of mingling players from both teams. Most returners would have let the ball roll to a stop.

Rustemeyer, however, had become accustomed to the nice feeling that a touchdown celebration brings when he took the opening kickoff of the game and sprinted 83 yards after breaking a few mid-field tackles.

WITH JUST NINE seconds erased from the clock, Rolling Meadows had a 7-0 lead. That run, though, merely seemed to make the Cardinals mad.

Quarterback Chuck Klein led his team 67 yards on Arlington's first possession to tie the score. Then the Cards got the ball back when the Mustangs fumbled an on-side kick.

Six plays later, the Cards had a 14-7 lead when Klein ran the ball in from the four-yard line. Chris Birkett scored the first Arlington touchdown just two minutes earlier on a 10-yard pass from Klein, and it seemed like the momentum had taken a brutal turn for the Mustangs.

Another long run, however, allowed Rolling Meadows to go into the halftime break with a 14-14 tie. It came on an off-tackle run by fullback Bob Gill, who broke through the line and raced 55 yards for the score.

Unfortunately for the Cardinals, the Mustang defense was able to regroup before the second half started.

"IT TOOK US a long time to get organized, but we finally started to do things right on defense," Klein said. Arlington was unable to score after the intermission.

"But I'm very proud of them," coach Chuck Haines said of his Cardinals. "They could have gotten down after that first long return, but they came back. We just continue to make mistakes that hurt us."

Haines was referring to a few crucial penalties that allowed the Mustangs to hold onto the ball when time was running out. He was also disappointed with his specialty teams.

"They really killed us tonight," he said. "They stood around like 2,000-year-old mummified Egyptians."

IT WAS RUSTEMEYER who took advantage of that Arlington deficiency to provide the Mustangs with the bulk of their offensive punch. When it was over, the Cardinals had 14 first downs compared to only six for the Mustangs.

But Rolling Meadows was able to capitalize on Arlington's mistakes, the last of which allowed the Mustangs to lock up the decision. It came on a bad snap to the punter in the third quarter.

Rolling Meadows took over on the Card 27, and a seven-yard touchdown pass from Bill Collis to John Healy did the final damage to Arlington.

Ailing Blyleven reaches potential

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — Throughout Bert Blyleven's career, they've always talked more about his potential of becoming a superstar pitcher rather than his actual accomplishments.

All that may have ended Thursday night, though.

On a night an ailing Blyleven was out on the mound for the sole purpose of bettering his so-so 1977 record, the Dutch-born righthander recorded his first career no-hitter, a 6-0 victory over the California Angels.

"I didn't plan on anything like this," he said. "All I wanted to do was improve my record."

SIDELINED SINCE Sept. 6 because of a groin injury, Blyleven faced only 28 batters in pitching the second no-hitter in Ranger history and the third in the major leagues, all in the American League, this season.

"Blyleven has been capable of throwing a no-hitter for a long time," said Bobby Bonds, the Angels power man with 36 home runs and 111 RBI.

"He throws hard, he has a good curve and excellent control. I'm happy for him but I honestly feel he didn't have his best stuff tonight. It seemed like he threw 90 per cent curves. We had a lot of chances."

There was a reason for all those curveballs.

BLYLEVEN WASN'T 100 per cent because of his groin injury.

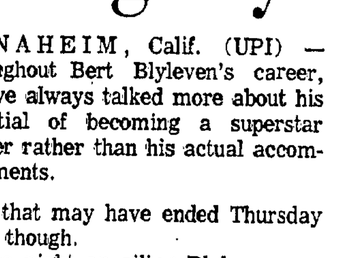

"I pulled it again in the first inning," he exlained, "and then I pulled it real good in the eighth. But I wasn't going to come out. Not with a no-hitter going. I was going to throw underhanded first.

"I had two cortisone shots after my last start and I don't know if I'll be able to pitch again this year. But this is a great way to end it, isn't it?"

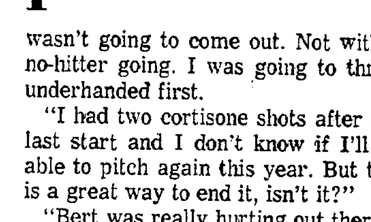

"Bert was really hurting out there," said Ranger Manager Billy Hunter, "but I told him I wasn't going to take him out until he gave up a hit. Then I was going to get him out of there real fast. I had two guys ready in the bullpen the last couple of innings."

The first two-no-hitters this season were recorded by Jim Colborn of the Kansas City Royals and Dennis Eckersley of the Cleveland Indians. Eckersley's no-hitter came against the Angels on Memorial Day at Cleveland when he beat Frank Tanana 1-0.

Nicklaus fails over course he designed

MASON, Ohio — Jack Nicklaus, despite playing on a course he designed and partly owns, missed a PGA tour cut for the first time in more than seven months Friday.

Nicklaus shot a five-over-par 73-72—145 and missed the cut by two strokes as the $150,000 Ohio Kings Island Open, being played over the Jack Nicklaus Golf Center course, reached the halfway point. Nicklaus had not missed the cut since the Hawaiian Open in February.

The tourney leader after 36 holes was Mike Hill at seven-under-par 133, followed by Ben Crenshaw one stroke back. Tom Kite and Bill Calfee, who shared the first round lead, both posted 66-69—135 scores to tie for third.

Nicklaus might have made the cut had he not stumbled to a double-bogey seven on the 18th hole Friday. Nicklaus flew to his Florida home right after his round.

"I played reasonably well, but I couldn't putt," he said. "That's why my score is disappointing."

Frazier wants Ali-Shavers winner

SOUTHERN PINES, N.C. (UPI) — Former world heavyweight champion Joe Frazier has committed himself to coming out of retirement — but only if the winner of next Thursday's Muhammad Ali-Ernie Shavers fight agrees to take him on.

A spokesman for Ringside Promotions, Ed McMarthy, said a telegram was sent to both Shavers and Ali in New York Friday night, telling them of Frazier's intentions.

Frazier, 33, said earlier this week a chief reason for wanting to return to the ring was his displeasure with "the way the guy who has the title (Ali) is living. He hurts the image of the championship."

Ringside Promotions president Joe Flynn said the location for any Frazier fight would be "open to discuussion based on openings in television negotiations."

Flynn indicated earlier this week he would like to schedule a fight at the Omni in Atlanta.

Foyt laughs at retirement rumors

TRENTON — Four-time Indianapolis 500 winner A. J. Foyt pulled into the Trenton International Speedway pits early Friday morning with his Coyote and crew, raring to go.

The 42-year-old Houston, Tex. native, whose appearances on the USAC Championship trail this season have been sporadic, had not previously entered today's Machinest Union 150 USAC Championship car race here.

"I'm here to test this car before we go to Indianapolis next Wednesday to do tire testing for Goodyear," said Foyt, considered by many as the greatest racing driver of all times.

"Besides, I've got two horses running at Keystone (race track in Pennsylvania) this afternoon," he said.

Foyt denied the presistent rumors of his impending retirement and laughed about the way the news media has built up those stories.

Gottfried, Orantes, Ramierz advance

LOS ANGELES — Brian Gottfried, Manuel Orantes of Spain and Raul Ramirez of Mexico, the three top-seeded players, won hard-earned third-round matches Friday in the $100,000 Southern California Open Tennis Championships.

But sixth-seeded Roscoe Tanner of Kiawaha Island, S.C., turned in a listless performance in bowing to Tom Leonard, a 29-year-old qualifier from Laguna Niquel Calif., 1-6, 6-3, 7-6, at the Los Angeles Tennis Club.

Top-seeded Gottfried, the world's third-ranking player from Bonaventure, Fla., rallied after a sluggish start to eliminate John Alexander of Australia, 3-6, 6-2, 6-2.

Orantes came from behind to banish Van Winitsky, an 18-year-old sophomore at UCLA, 5-7, 7-5, 6-1.

Ramirez ousted 14th-seeded Colin Dibley of Australia in straight sets, 6-4, 6-2.

Bowling

At Beverly Lanes

Glass House continues to hold 1st in the Red division of the Parkway league at Beverly Lanes. Phoneez leads the Blue division. Highs for the evening: Bob Quade 222, Mike Herr 225-580, Bob Paddock 217-540, Bob Burghard 210, John Guttwin 219 and Rick Wisniewski 201.

At Elk Grove Bowl

The Wholly Bowlers Mixed League opened their season at Elk Grove Bowl Sunday evening. While most bowlers showed the effects of the summer layoff, Carolyn Sadowski surprised everyone with a sparkling 495 series. Her opening game of 179 and followup of 185 also proved to be high games of the evening for the ladies. Teammate Marilyn Wolfard had the runnerup series of 431 for the girls. Mike Tansey had the high series for the men with a 509. He was followed by Steve Kazmerczak with a 504. Tansey's father-in-law and teammate Jim Lavan had the high game for all the bowlers with an opening round 191. Jim Butler was close behind with a 190. Brian Rieger of the McBreakfast Club and Martha Barker of the Coneheads won house awards for the low scratch games.

Nicklaus fails over course he designed

MASON, Ohio — Jack Nicklaus, despite playing on a course he designed and partly owns, missed a PGA tour cut for the first time in more than seven months Friday.

Nicklaus shot a five-over-par 73-72—145 and missed the cut by two strokes as the $150,000 Ohio Kings Island Open, being played over the Jack Nicklaus Golf Center course, reached the halfway point. Nicklaus had not missed the cut since the Hawaiian Open in February.

The tourney leader after 36 holes was Mike Hill at seven-under-par 133, followed by Ben Crenshaw one stroke back. Tom Kite and Bill Calfee, who shared the first round lead, both posted 66-69—135 scores to tie for third.

Nicklaus might have made the cut had he not stumbled to a double-bogey seven on the 18th hole Friday. Nicklaus flew to his Florida home right after his round.

"I played reasonably well, but I couldn't putt," he said. "That's why my score is disappointing."

Frazier wants Ali-Shavers winner

SOUTHERN PINES, N.C. (UPI) — Former world heavyweight champion Joe Frazier has committed himself to coming out of retirement — but only if the winner of next Thursday's Muhammad Ali-Ernie Shavers fight agrees to take him on.

A spokesman for Ringside Promotions, Ed McMarthy, said a telegram was sent to both Shavers and Ali in New York Friday night, telling them of Frazier's intentions.

Frazier, 33, said earlier this week a chief reason for wanting to return to the ring was his displeasure with "the way the guy who has the title (Ali) is living. He hurts the image of the championship."

Ringside Promotions president Joe Flynn said the location for any Frazier fight would be "open to discuussion based on openings in television negotiations."

Flynn indicated earlier this week he would like to schedule a fight at the Omni in Atlanta.

Foyt laughs at retirement rumors

TRENTON — Four-time Indianapolis 500 winner A. J. Foyt pulled into the Trenton International Speedway pits early Friday morning with his Coyote and crew, raring to go.

The 42-year-old Houston, Tex. native, whose appearances on the USAC Championship trail this season have been sporadic, had not previously entered today's Machinest Union 150 USAC Championship car race here.

"I'm here to test this car before we go to Indianapolis next Wednesday to do tire testing for Goodyear," said Foyt, considered by many as the greatest racing driver of all times.

"Besides, I've got two horses running at Keystone (race track in Pennsylvania) this afternoon," he said.

Foyt denied the presistent rumors of his impending retirement and laughed about the way the news media has built up those stories.

Gottfried, Orantes, Ramierz advance

LOS ANGELES — Brian Gottfried, Manuel Orantes of Spain and Raul Ramirez of Mexico, the three top-seeded players, won hard-earned third-round matches Friday in the $100,000 Southern California Open Tennis Championships.

But sixth-seeded Roscoe Tanner of Kiawaha Island, S.C., turned in a listless performance in bowing to Tom Leonard, a 29-year-old qualifier from Laguna Niquel Calif., 1-6, 6-3, 7-6, at the Los Angeles Tennis Club.

Top-seeded Gottfried, the world's third-ranking player from Bonaventure, Fla., rallied after a sluggish start to eliminate John Alexander of Australia, 3-6, 6-2, 6-2.

Orantes came from behind to banish Van Winitsky, an 18-year-old sophomore at UCLA, 5-7, 7-5, 6-1.

Ramirez ousted 14th-seeded Colin Dibley of Australia in straight sets, 6-4, 6-2.

At Beverly Lanes

Glass House continues to hold 1st in the Red division of the Parkway league at Beverly Lanes. Phoneez leads the Blue division. Highs for the evening: Bob Quade 222, Mike Herr 225-580, Bob Paddock 217-540, Bob Burghard 210, John Guttwin 219 and Rick Wisniewski 201.

At Elk Grove Bowl

The Wholly Bowlers Mixed League opened their season at Elk Grove Bowl Sunday evening. While most bowlers showed the effects of the summer layoff, Carolyn Sadowski surprised everyone with a sparkling 495 series. Her opening game of 179 and followup of 185 also proved to be high games of the evening for the ladies. Teammate Marilyn Wolfard had the runnerup series of 431 for the girls. Mike Tansey had the high series for the men with a 509. He was followed by Steve Kazmerczak with a 504. Tansey's father-in-law and teammate Jim Lavan had the high game for all the bowlers with an opening round 191. Jim Butler was close behind with a 190. Brian Rieger of the McBreakfast Club and Martha Barker of the Coneheads won house awards for the low scratch games.

Preseason win against Chicago

Bears may stop Cardinal passing game on Sunday

by BOB GALLAS

The Bears invade St. Louis Sunday to face the Cardinals for the second time in three weeks and awaiting them will be a team that has won only one game through six preseason and one regular season games.

Trouble is, that solo win was against the Bears.

But St. Louis coach Don Coryell isn't taking the Bears lightly, even though his team pretty much had their own way when they faced Chicago earlier, hammering out a 23-14 win.

"They (Bears) scored 30 points against a good Detroit defense," said Coryell, referring to the Bears' opening game win last Sunday. "Their defense is sound and very hard-hitting. Our offense must pull itself together and our defense has to have another great effort."

THE CARDS' defense gave up only one touchdown last week in their opener with Denver but St. Louis lost 7-0. Against the Bears three weeks ago, however, the offense had considerably better success.

"They beat us on third down plays," Pardee said Friday. A check of the statistics shows Pardee wasn't kidding.

St. Louis converted an amazing 11 of 14 third down attempts for 79 per cent success. Forty-five per cent is considered excellent.

"We stopped their running game but not their passing," Pardee continued. "That's where we have to improve. We have to stop their passing game."

TWO MAIN cogs in the Bears' defense will be missing this Sunday, defensive tackle Wally Chambers and free safety Doug Plank. Chambers underwent successful minor surgery Friday to flush loose particles from his ailing right knee and Plank is also recuperating from an injured knee.

The Cards, through the accurate arm of Jim Hart, completed nine of 13 passes in their win over the Bears earlier this season for 184 yards and one touchdown.

The Cards' offense has been explosive at times and operates behind one of the most experienced and efficient lines in the National Football League. And that offense will get a lift Sunday as running back Wayne Morris, hobbled by a foot injury, returns to the backfield. He averaged 4.6 yards per carry in the preseason.

Another mainstay of the Cards' backfield is in doubt, but probably will play. Terry Metcalf was used sparingly last week, mostly for short passes. But he was very effective.

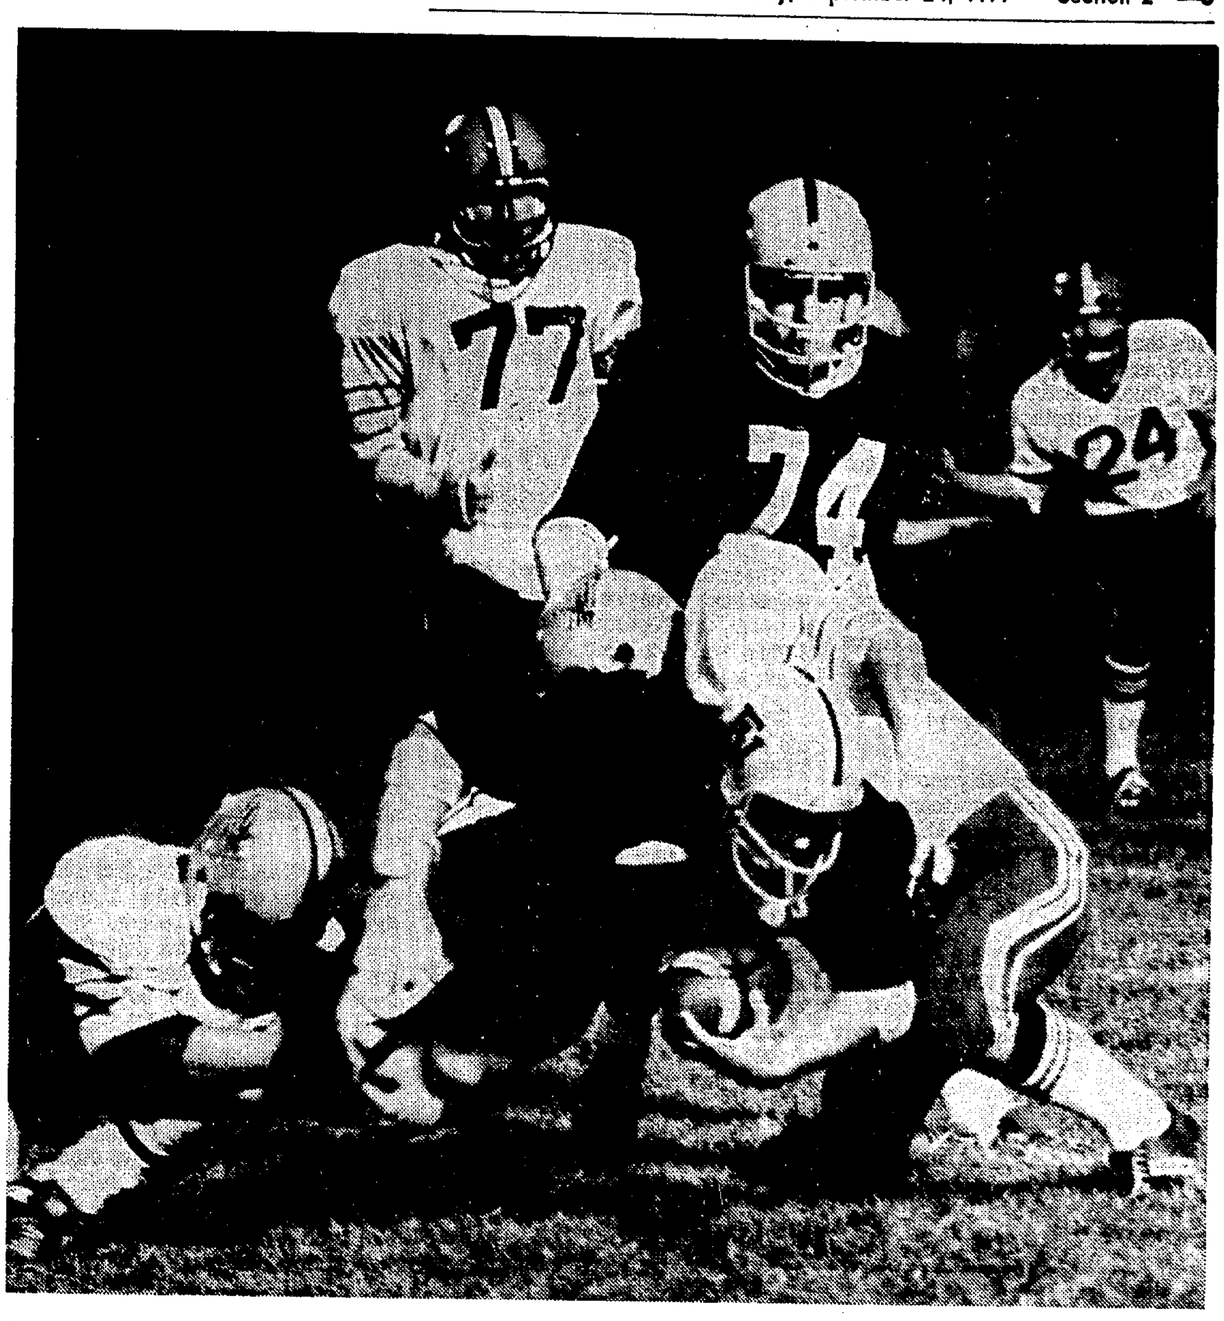

THIRTY-FIVE OF the Cards' 68 offensive plays were by passing. Hart completed 18 passes for 221 yards and six of those completions were to Metcalf.

"He was turning those short, five yard passes into 20 yard gains," said Pardee. "We have to control that."

Metcalf played with a cast to protect a broken hand but was not listed on the team's injury report. When gamblers found out about the injury the game was taken off the board and the Cardinals were called on the NFL carpet to explain.

"We'll see," said Coryell of Metcalf's status. "If he can catch (punts and kickoffs), we'll be using him."

The Cards are favored to win this week by four points.

DRIVING FOR short yardage is Forest View's John Miscevich in the Falcons' 46-0 victory Friday night over Hoffman Estates. Miscevich was a busy performer as Forest View knocked off its second straight Mid-Suburban League opponent.

Vikings face easy foe tonight

by GREG AIELLO

The Minnesota Vikings can count on beautiful weather and few problems from the opposition tonight when they visit the still-winless Tampa Bay Buccaneers in a game that will feature a trio of expensive running backs.

Both teams are coming off season-opening losses, the Vikings dropping a 16-10 overtime decision to Dallas and the Bucs falling 13-3 to Philadelphia. But the NFC champion Vikings should have little trouble handing Tampa Bay its 16th straight regular-season loss.

What could keep the first meeting of the two teams interesting, however, are the performances of Minnesota's Chuck Foreman plus Tampa Bay's Ricky Bell and Anthony Davis, three of the NFL's highest paid runners.

FOREMAN, who rushed for 66 yards on 22 atempts and caught five passes for 56 yards and a touchdown against the Cowboys, had his contract renegotiated to include a significant raise this year after charging he was underpaid and never would play again for Minnesota.

Bell, the million dollar back from Southern Cal, looked impressive gaining 53 yards in 15 carries against the Eagles in his regular season dubut. The bone chip in his right ankle that slowed him somewhat last week is not expected to keep him out.

Davis, perhaps the only three-time rookie in professional football history (WFL, CFL and NFL), is listed as Bell's backup. Ed Williams is the other back. Davis gained only 12 yards in five carries against the Eagles but added 62 yards on three kickoff returns.

TAMPA BAY'S defense was surprisingly strong against Philadelphia but coach John McKay blamed his offensive line for the meager number of points.

"They just refused to block," McKay said.

Rookie Randy Hedberg, an eighth-round draft choice from Minot State, gets his second start at quarterback with Gary Huff still recovering from a knee injury. Hedberg, with little protection, completed only 10-of-25 passes for 66 yards last week. He placed most of the blame on himself, however.

"The rookie in me came out," Hedberg said. "It will again. I just must learn to avoid making the same mistakes a second time."

Minnesota will be helped by the return of all-pro guard Ed White, who Tuesday agreed to terms for this season and returned to the team.

New England visits Cleveland on Monday night.

THE STEELERS and Raiders resume perhaps the most bitter rivalry in the NFL to highlight Sunday's action. Both teams, however, have avoided adding to the bad feeling between them. They're making it sound like just another game.

"When we play Oakland, it's always a good physical ball game," said Pittsburgh defensive tackle Joe Greene. "But Oakland is only one win or one loss — although I prefer a win."

"The only thing this game's going to prove is who's better on Sunday," Steelers' wide receiver Lynn Swann. "I really believe for us to go anywhere this season, we've got to be at least 5-1 in our division."

Byline report

Lately, Oscar Gamble has been talking more about the ones that get away rather than the ones that are gone.

Besides, few of the 31 home runs the White Sox slugger has hit this season are ever around long enough to talk about:

But in a weekend series with the California Angels, Gamble jawed, complained and sarcastically jeered the clubhouse writers in a postgame interview.

"Who was the official scorer, tonight," Gamble hollered. "How can he not give me a hit on that grounder when the inning before he calls a weaker shot a hit."

THE ONE THAT got away came in the third inning of Sunday's first game of the doubleheader against the Angels. With two out, Gamble lined a bad hop grounder off firstbaseman Willie Mays Aikens' glove.

The official scorer ruled an error as Gamble finished the game 1-4 and dropped slightly in his over-all batting average.

"Considering my situation, that I have not signed a contract, the final statistics mean a little more to me this season," Gamble explained.

"I haven't been trying strictly for myself but if I had a five-year contract which I would like, I wouldn't have to worry about numbers."

The way the numbers have been adding up for Gamble he could very well get that long extended contract from White Sox owner Bill Veeck, And in big figures.

THE SLIM lefthanded powerhitter has hit a home run every 12.2 times at bat (380), driven in 79 runs and is hovering around the .293 mark.

"The price goes up with every one," Gamble laughed, as his home run spree paves the way for a demand of $200,000 annually.

"I'll probably be here next season as I talked with Veeck the other day about my contract. Hopefully, I'll sign as soon as the season is over," Gamble added.

"I want to stay in Chicago, so it's just a matter of money now."

Gamble recently broke a 1951 White Sox record for the most home runs by a lefthander in one season. A three-run blast Saturday against the Angels supplanted Eddie Robinson's 26-year record.

HE NEEDS ONLY one more to tie Larry Doby, now a Sox coach, for the most home runs by a lefthanded batter in Comiskey Park, 15.

While only 27 years old, Gamble has finally come into his own after stints with the Chicago Cubs, Philadelphia, Cleveland and the New York Yankees.

He attests that his quick wrists and excessive bat speed have helped propel the majority of his blasts into the stands.

'I'm out in front of the ball much more now," Gamble said, "like I did in my sandlot days. When I first came up my coaches wanted me to go to left field with my swing."

"BUT I JUST wasn't as effective so I went back to my old form."

A little more than a week remains on the White Sox 1977 schedule as the Chicago fans have been delighted by the sounds of booming bats.

The Sox have slugged an all-time club record of 183 home runs while having three players over the 20-plateau mark. Eric Soderholm (23), Richie Zisk (27), and Gamble (31) have put the Sox second to the Boston Red Sox (190) in team home runs in the American League.

The only recore still in reach for Gamble is the club record for the most home runs in one season; set by Richie Allen (37) in 1972.

Preseason win against Chicago

Bears may stop Cardinal passing game on Sunday

by BOB GALLAS

The Bears invade St. Louis Sunday to face the Cardinals for the second time in three weeks and awaiting them will be a team that has won only one game through six preseason and one regular season games.

Trouble is, that solo win was against the Bears.

But St. Louis coach Don Coryell isn't taking the Bears lightly, even though his team pretty much had their own way when they faced Chicago earlier, hammering out a 23-14 win.

"They (Bears) scored 30 points against a good Detroit defense," said Coryell, referring to the Bears' opening game win last Sunday. "Their defense is sound and very hard-hitting. Our offense must pull itself together and our defense has to have another great effort."

THE CARDS' defense gave up only one touchdown last week in their opener with Denver but St. Louis lost 7-0. Against the Bears three weeks ago, however, the offense had considerably better success.

"They beat us on third down plays," Pardee said Friday. A check of the statistics shows Pardee wasn't kidding.

St. Louis converted an amazing 11 of 14 third down attempts for 79 per cent success. Forty-five per cent is considered excellent.

"We stopped their running game but not their passing," Pardee continued. "That's where we have to improve. We have to stop their passing game."

TWO MAIN cogs in the Bears' defense will be missing this Sunday, defensive tackle Wally Chambers and free safety Doug Plank. Chambers underwent successful minor surgery Friday to flush loose particles from his ailing right knee and Plank is also recuperating from an injured knee.

The Cards, through the accurate arm of Jim Hart, completed nine of 13 passes in their win over the Bears earlier this season for 184 yards and one touchdown.

The Cards' offense has been explosive at times and operates behind one of the most experienced and efficient lines in the National Football League. And that offense will get a lift Sunday as running back Wayne Morris, hobbled by a foot injury, returns to the backfield. He averaged 4.6 yards per carry in the preseason.

Another mainstay of the Cards' backfield is in doubt, but probably will play. Terry Metcalf was used sparingly last week, mostly for short passes. But he was very effective.

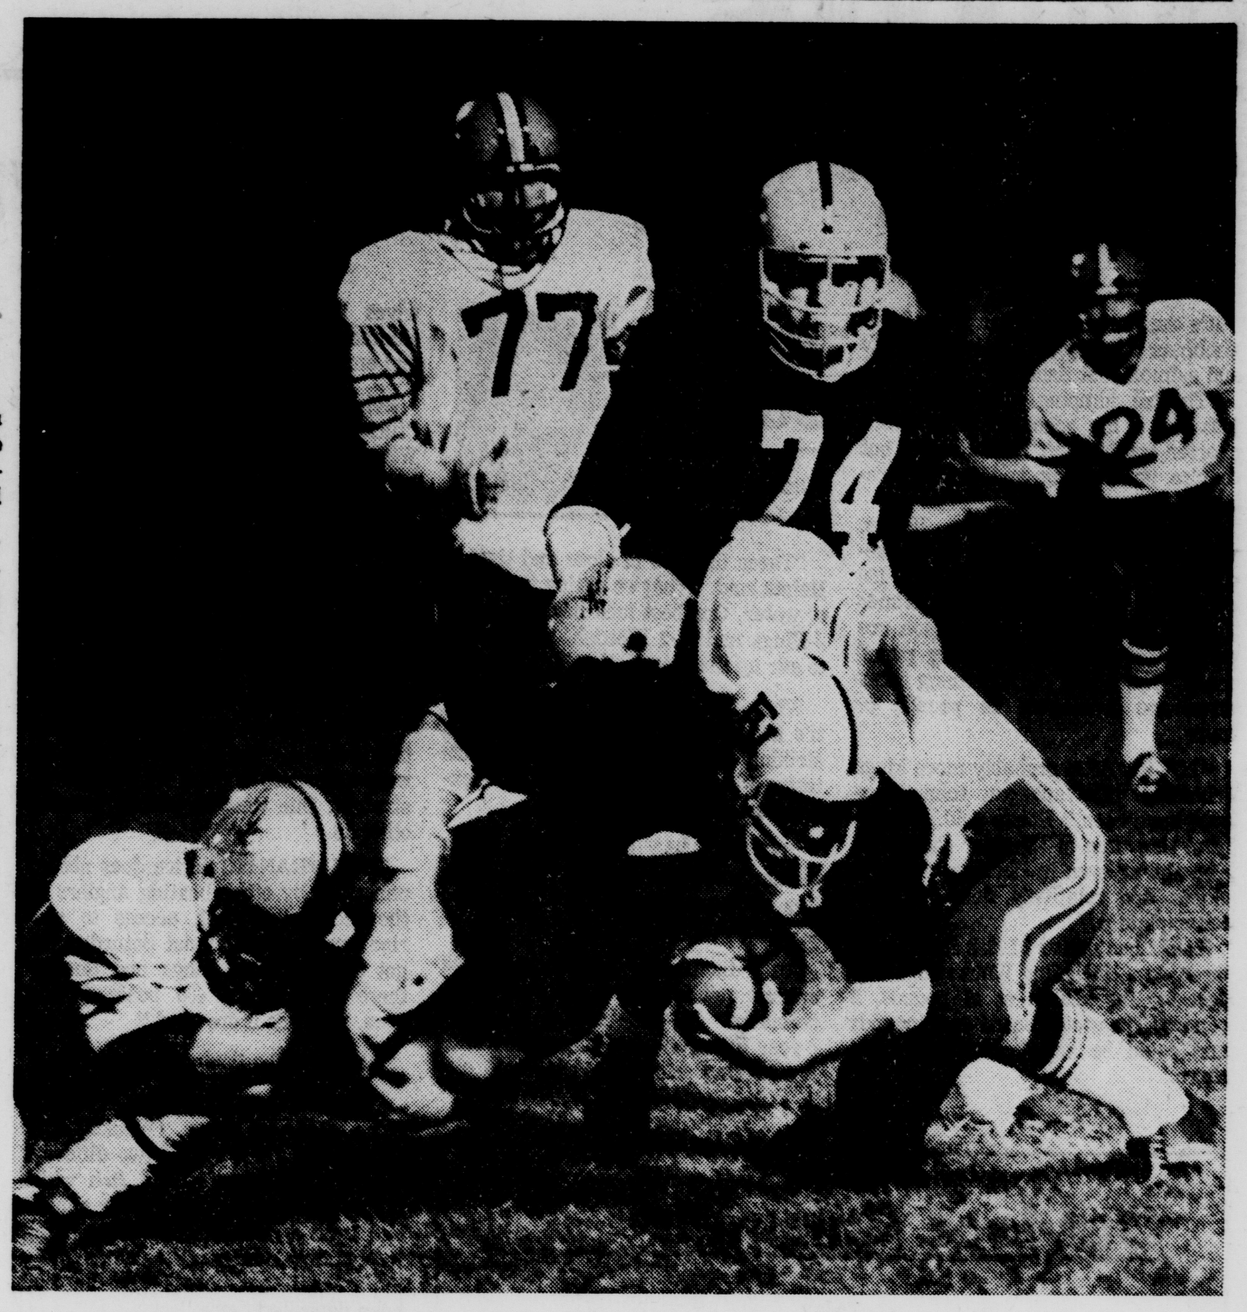

THIRTY-FIVE OF the Cards' 68 offensive plays were by passing. Hart completed 18 passes for 221 yards and six of those completions were to Metcalf.

"He was turning those short, five yard passes into 20 yard gains," said Pardee. "We have to control that."

Metcalf played with a cast to protect a broken hand but was not listed on the team's injury report. When gamblers found out about the injury the game was taken off the board and the Cardinals were called on the NFL carpet to explain.

"We'll see," said Coryell of Metcalf's status. "If he can catch (punts and kickoffs), we'll be using him."

The Cards are favored to win this week by four points.

DRIVING FOR short yardage is Forest View's John Miscevich in the Falcons' 46-0 victory Friday night over Hoffman Estates. Miscevich was a busy performer as Forest View knocked off its second straight Mid-Suburban League opponent.

Vikings face easy foe tonight

by GREG AIELLO

The Minnesota Vikings can count on beautiful weather and few problems from the opposition tonight when they visit the still-winless Tampa Bay Buccaneers in a game that will feature a trio of expensive running backs.

Both teams are coming off season-opening losses, the Vikings dropping a 16-10 overtime decision to Dallas and the Bucs falling 13-3 to Philadelphia. But the NFC champion Vikings should have little trouble handing Tampa Bay its 16th straight regular-season loss.

What could keep the first meeting of the two teams interesting, however, are the performances of Minnesota's Chuck Foreman plus Tampa Bay's Ricky Bell and Anthony Davis, three of the NFL's highest paid runners.

FOREMAN, who rushed for 66 yards on 22 atempts and caught five passes for 56 yards and a touchdown against the Cowboys, had his contract renegotiated to include a significant raise this year after charging he was underpaid and never would play again for Minnesota.

Bell, the million dollar back from Southern Cal, looked impressive gaining 53 yards in 15 carries against the Eagles in his regular season dubut. The bone chip in his right ankle that slowed him somewhat last week is not expected to keep him out.

Davis, perhaps the only three-time rookie in professional football history (WFL, CFL and NFL), is listed as Bell's backup. Ed Williams is the other back. Davis gained only 12 yards in five carries against the Eagles but added 62 yards on three kickoff returns.

TAMPA BAY'S defense was surprisingly strong against Philadelphia but coach John McKay blamed his offensive line for the meager number of points.

"They just refused to block," McKay said.

Rookie Randy Hedberg, an eighth-round draft choice from Minot State, gets his second start at quarterback with Gary Huff still recovering from a knee injury. Hedberg, with little protection, completed only 10-of-25 passes for 66 yards last week. He placed most of the blame on himself, however.

"The rookie in me came out," Hedberg said. "It will again. I just must learn to avoid making the same mistakes a second time."

Minnesota will be helped by the return of all-pro guard Ed White, who Tuesday agreed to terms for this season and returned to the team.

New England visits Cleveland on Monday night.

THE STEELERS and Raiders resume perhaps the most bitter rivalry in the NFL to highlight Sunday's action. Both teams, however, have avoided adding to the bad feeling between them. They're making it sound like just another game.

"When we play Oakland, it's always a good physical ball game," said Pittsburgh defensive tackle Joe Greene. "But Oakland is only one win or one loss — although I prefer a win."

"The only thing this game's going to prove is who's better on Sunday," Steelers' wide receiver Lynn Swann. "I really believe for us to go anywhere this season, we've got to be at least 5-1 in our division."

Numbers concern Gamble as contract talks continue

'Kings' for the taking at Waukegan

It's the time of the year when Lake Michigan turns into a porpoise show and salmon boat fishermen hate it.

"They're jumping all around you, just like a big school of porpoises," charter captain Jeff Heintz said. "but they're not feeding and it's frustrating."

Well almost not feeding. Heintz, who runs Jeff's Boat House in Waukegan still is averaging more than 100 pounds of salmon a day. Sometimes just four fall-run chinook salmon are enough to eclipse the century pound mark. The 4-year-old spawning monsters are averaging 20 pounds or more.

THERE ARE probably more kings (chinook) in Waukegan than there ever have been," Heintz said. "Usually at this time of the year they're in Kenosha or even in Chicago, but both places are relatively dead. Nobody can explain it."

Heintz has netted 31 fish in the past three days, including Waukegan's biggest for the season at 31 pounds, 2 ounces. The state record is 37 pounds and could be smashed 25 feet from shore.

Jim Cook

Outdoor editor

"These fish are in close and tight," Heintz said. "They're sitting in 15 feet of water. Our best luck has been with J-Plugs and M-2 Flatfish. They seem to stir up the most action."

When the salmon are off the feed, ti's necessary to intimidate them into striking. The diving J-Plug and fluttering Flatfish are ideal with their exaggerated motions.

"WE'RE ONLY fishing 2 feet below the surface," Heintz said, "but the action of the lures covers much more ground."

An indication of how the chonook salmon quit feeding is their shrunken stomachs. In the prime, of their 4-year life cycle, the kings sometimes are holding as many as 15 ot 16 alewives in their stomachs. Now, the stomach is a rag-like, 1½ inches long and empty.

Heintz was handcuffed by a rare "turkey" aboard his boat Thursday. With two lines already in the water, he was thumbing out a third when a vicious strike almost ripped the rod out of his hands.

He passed the live rod to a customer just in time to watch both of the other pole tips simultaneously lap the water under the weight of strikes. "We got lucky and boated two of them," Jeff said. "Usually three kings on at the same time will foul your tackle for a couple of hours, but we were fortunate enough to keep them straight. One went 18 pounds and the other 15.

SUCH FRANTIC action does not go unnoticed by other boating anglers in the vicinity or with access to marine band radios. "Last Saturday we got a dozen nice kings and Sunday there were about 400 boats in the area. Boy was it crowded."

When will the fishing peak?

"I don't see how they can get many more fish in here (Waukegan)," Heintz said. "I watched two different charter boat captains net fish while they were backing out of their slips!" and I got a rainbow that was fanning the bottom with its tail — either making a nest or protecting eggs that had been deposited there."

Even snaggers at the Great Lakes Harbor mouth consistently are taking fish. Shore anglers took 20 fish over 18 pounds at the beginning of last week, most of them casting Little Cleos.

THE DEEP is where this 24½-pound "Jaws" caught by Frank Paveza of Elk Grove was taken last week. Paveza was one of a quartet of anglers who caught 100 pounds of king salmon during a one-half day charter in Lake Michigan out of Waukegan.

Wisconsin hunting, fishing

Fall activities reaching peak

Wisconsin is bustling with activity this weekend with hunting, fishing and color viewing reaching its peak.

Bear hunters using dogs enjoyed favorable conditions last week in the Park Falls area and the harvest there is ahead of last year. There is still good fall color to be seen around Park Falls in the northwest section of the state.

The outlook for duck hunting in the Hayward area is good and a fair number of deer have been taken by bow and arrow. Musky action throughout the area is excellent.

MAPLES ARE turning color in the LaCrosse area with the peak expected about the first of October. Inland stream trout fishing remains good. Red, scarlet and gold fall colors dominate the Black River Falls area.

There is increased northern and walleye activity in Dunn and Barron county waters. The opening of the woodcock and bow and arrow deer seasons around Eau Claire was poor because of rainy weather.

Fall color is about 50 per cent around Wisconsin Rapids. Both the woodcock and archery deer season openers were mildly successful.

In the Marinette area, the opening weekend of snagging provided limited success and many ducks are returning to the area. Lake Michigan trout trollers enjoyed good fishing off Two Rivers and Manitowoc last week.

IN THE SOUTHEAST counties, inland fishing pressure was generally light and Lake Michigan fishing was unsettled because of changing weather conditions. Fall color should be about 50 per cent this weekend.

Brisk northerly winds have brought a surge of Canada geese into east-central Wisconsin and by midweek, upwards of 10,000 geese were located in the vicinity of the Horicon marsh. The largest concentration of birds was noted in the northwest portion of the marsh, so goose viewing opportunities are best near Waupum.

Perch fishing is still good on all Madison area lakes with Lau Waubesa the best lake for taking mixed bags. Fishing in the Wisconsin River in Sauk county is generally good and waterfowl are starting to arrive in Grant county. Musky action is reported as good to excellent on Coon Valley lake in Iowa County.

Team spinners, live bait for some great catches

Some purists call spinners "hardware" and discourage their use with live bait. But there are times when spinners team up with minnows, worms, and other bait for the best catches. Here are tips for presenting your live bait choices with spinners:

- When live bait fishing for walleyes, bass or panfish, select spinners mounted on leaders of monofilament line. For northern pike choose spinners which ride on cable or wire leaders.
- One of the all-time favorite spinners for walleyes is the Little Joe Red Devil, consisting of monofilament leader, No. 3 Indiana blade, and single Aberdeen hook. These are fished mainly with minnows. An effective method is to hook a minnow carefully through the mouth, out a gill, and lightly in the back so it swims upright behind the spinner.
- For panfish, or when using nightcrawlers or leeches for walleyes, try a spinner with a small blade and the smallest hook with which you can get by. Bluegill fishermen adorn their spinners with angleworms, pieces of nightcrawler, grub worms and small leeches.

Crappie anglers use 1 to 2-inch minnows hooked behind the lips or lightly in the back near the dorsal fin. For walleyes, hook leeches once in the sucker end, nightcrawlers once in the nose.

- An increasingly popular spinner for walleyes and bass is the "worm harness." This nightcrawler rig consists of two or three hooks behind a Colorado or propeller style spinner blade. Hook the crawler at the tip of its nose with the forward hook. Then impale it further back with the remaining hook(s) so that it pulls "strung out" through the water.
- With worm harnesses you can do oddball things that catch fish. Try hooking minnows or leeches on the harness hooks so they trail in tandem. Or experiment with combinations — like a piece of nightcrawler on one hook and a leech or minnow on another.
- Spinners are available in a variety of metallic and flourescent colors. Color preferences vary from one body of water to the next, depending in part on water clarity and sky cover. Take along a selection of colors and be willing to experiment. Color does make a difference.
- Spinner-live bait rigs can be trolled, drifted, or cast. Effective speeds vary. Walleyes, bass and crappies generally prefer slow speeds, just fast enough to make the spinner blade spin. Pike often respond to a faster approach.

Be flexible with your live bait presentations. Sometimes you'll catch more fish with "flash" ahead of your bait. Try Spinners.

Duck stamp aids building of waterfowl refuge area

Funds from the sale of the 1976 Illinois Migratory Waterfowl Hunting stamp are financing construction of a levee that will create a 100-acre 'rest stop' for ducks migrating into Des Plaines Conservation Area near Joliet in Will County.

Work already has started on the earthen dike, which will range between 6 and 12 feet high along its nearly 3 mile length. Completion is expected by the start of this year's waterfowl hunting season, but it is not known if the area can be flooded in time to serve this year's migrating flocks.

Intended as a refuge, the area will not be opened to hunting, but its existence is expected to attract a substantial number of additional waterfowl. As a result, hunting opportunities should be improved for hunters using other sections of the Des Plaines area.

THE NEW levee will enclose three sides of an area at the confluence of the Illinois, Kankee and Des Plaines rivers and Grant Creek, near Des Plaines River Mile 275 and Blodgett Road in the state park's northwest corner. Sloping land will serve as the water retention barrier on the fourth side of the nearly-square pond.

Land within the levee will remain dry during most of the year and crops suited to waterfowl will be grown there. It will be flooded just before the annual duck migration. Flooding will take approximately 20 days.

Creation of the refuge is necessary to help offset accelerated losses of waterfowl habitat occurring in the heavily industrialized area in which the Des Plaines Conservation Area is located.

ESTIMATED COST of the project is $155,000. Brown and Lambrecht Earthmovers, Inc. of Joliet has the $89,074 contract for construction of the levees. Contracts for installation of water level control pumps are to be awarded this month.

The remainder of the approximately $200,000 derived from duck stamp sales last year will be used for other Illinois waterfowl habitat improvement projects.

Cosman Lake derby planned for today

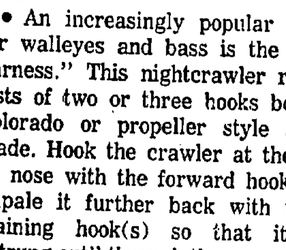

The Elk Grove Sportsmen's Club and park district will host the 2nd Annual Fishing Derby at Cosman Lake today. The derby, begun in 1976 as part of National Hunting and Fishing Day activities, will be open to residents of the Elk Grove Park District only.

Fishing began at 6:30 a.m. Prizes to youths 11 to 16 years and 10 years and younger will be awarded at 10 a.m. for the largest fish caught in a number of categories. A 27½ lb. Blue Catfish was the largest fish caught in 1976.

Assistance for the young fishermen will be provided by members of the Sportsmens Club. The Sportsmens Club also is providing awards and worms to be used as bait. Fishing with minnows will not be permitted during the contest.

For additional information call the Elk Grove Park District at 437-8780.

'Kings' for the taking at Waukegan

It's the time of the year when Lake Michigan turns into a porpoise show and salmon boat fishermen hate it.

"They're jumping all around you, just like a big school of porpoises," charter captain Jeff Heintz said. "but they're not feeding and it's frustrating."

Well almost not feeding. Heintz, who runs Jeff's Boat House in Waukegan still is averaging more than 100 pounds of salmon a day. Sometimes just four fall-run chinook salmon are enough to eclipse the century pound mark. The 4-year-old spawning monsters are averaging 20 pounds or more.

THERE ARE probably more kings (chinook) in Waukegan than there ever have been," Heintz said. "Usually at this time of the year they're in Kenosha or even in Chicago, but both places are relatively dead. Nobody can explain it."

Heintz has netted 31 fish in the past three days, including Waukegan's biggest for the season at 31 pounds, 2 ounces. The state record is 37 pounds and could be smashed 25 feet from shore.

"These fish are in close and tight," Heintz said. "They're sitting in 15 feet of water. Our best luck has been with J-Plugs and M-2 Flatfish. They seem to stir up the most action."

When the salmon are off the feed, ti's necessary to intimidate them into striking. The diving J-Plug and fluttering Flatfish are ideal with their exaggerated motions.

"WE'RE ONLY fishing 2 feet below the surface," Heintz said, "but the action of the lures covers much more ground."

An indication of how the chonook salmon quit feeding is their shrunken stomachs. In the prime, of their 4-year life cycle, the kings sometimes are holding as many as 15 ot 16 alewives in their stomachs. Now, the stomach is a rag-like, 1½ inches long and empty.

Heintz was handcuffed by a rare "turkey" aboard his boat Thursday. With two lines already in the water, he was thumbing out a third when a vicious strike almost ripped the rod out of his hands.

He passed the live rod to a customer just in time to watch both of the other pole tips simultaneously lap the water under the weight of strikes. "We got lucky and boated two of them," Jeff said. "Usually three kings on at the same time will foul your tackle for a couple of hours, but we were fortunate enough to keep them straight. One went 18 pounds and the other 15.

SUCH FRANTIC action does not go unnoticed by other boating anglers in the vicinity or with access to marine band radios. "Last Saturday we got a dozen nice kings and Sunday there were about 400 boats in the area. Boy was it crowded."

When will the fishing peak?

"I don't see how they can get many more fish in here (Waukegan)," Heintz said. "I watched two different charter boat captains net fish while they were backing out of their slips!" and I got a rainbow that was fanning the bottom with its tail — either making a nest or protecting eggs that had been deposited there."

Even snaggers at the Great Lakes Harbor mouth consistently are taking fish. Shore anglers took 20 fish over 18 pounds at the beginning of last week, most of them casting Little Cleos.

THE DEEP is where this 24½-pound "Jaws" caught by Frank Paveza of Elk Grove was taken last week. Paveza was one of a quartet of anglers who caught 100 pounds of king salmon during a one-half day charter in Lake Michigan out of Waukegan.

Wisconsin hunting, fishing

Fall activities reaching peak

Wisconsin is bustling with activity this weekend with hunting, fishing and color viewing reaching its peak.

Bear hunters using dogs enjoyed favorable conditions last week in the Park Falls area and the harvest there is ahead of last year. There is still good fall color to be seen around Park Falls in the northwest section of the state.

The outlook for duck hunting in the Hayward area is good and a fair number of deer have been taken by bow and arrow. Musky action throughout the area is excellent.

MAPLES ARE turning color in the LaCrosse area with the peak expected about the first of October. Inland stream trout fishing remains good. Red, scarlet and gold fall colors dominate the Black River Falls area.

There is increased northern and walleye activity in Dunn and Barron county waters. The opening of the woodcock and bow and arrow deer seasons around Eau Claire was poor because of rainy weather.

Fall color is about 50 per cent around Wisconsin Rapids. Both the woodcock and archery deer season openers were mildly successful.

In the Marinette area, the opening weekend of snagging provided limited success and many ducks are returning to the area. Lake Michigan trout trollers enjoyed good fishing off Two Rivers and Manitowoc last week.

IN THE SOUTHEAST counties, inland fishing pressure was generally light and Lake Michigan fishing was unsettled because of changing weather conditions. Fall color should be about 50 per cent this weekend.

Brisk northerly winds have brought a surge of Canada geese into east-central Wisconsin and by midweek, upwards of 10,000 geese were located in the vicinity of the Horicon marsh. The largest concentration of birds was noted in the northwest portion of the marsh, so goose viewing opportunities are best near Waupum.

Perch fishing is still good on all Madison area lakes with Lau Waubesa the best lake for taking mixed bags. Fishing in the Wisconsin River in Sauk county is generally good and waterfowl are starting to arrive in Grant county. Musky action is reported as good to excellent on Coon Valley lake in Iowa County.

Team spinners, live bait for some great catches

Some purists call spinners "hardware" and discourage their use with live bait. But there are times when spinners team up with minnows, worms, and other bait for the best catches. Here are tips for presenting your live bait choices with spinners:

- When live bait fishing for walleyes, bass or panfish, select spinners mounted on leaders of monofilament line. For northern pike choose spinners which ride on cable or wire leaders.
- One of the all-time favorite spinners for walleyes is the Little Joe Red Devil, consisting of monofilament leader, No. 3 Indiana blade, and single Aberdeen hook. These are fished mainly with minnows. An effective method is to hook a minnow carefully through the mouth, out a gill, and lightly in the back so it swims upright behind the spinner.
- For panfish, or when using nightcrawlers or leeches for walleyes, try a spinner with a small blade and the smallest hook with which you can get by. Bluegill fishermen adorn their spinners with angleworms, pieces of nightcrawler, grub worms and small leeches.

Crappie anglers use 1 to 2-inch minnows hooked behind the lips or lightly in the back near the dorsal fin. For walleyes, hook leeches once in the sucker end, nightcrawlers once in the nose.

- An increasingly popular spinner for walleyes and bass is the "worm harness." This nightcrawler rig consists of two or three hooks behind a Colorado or propeller style spinner blade. Hook the crawler at the tip of its nose with the forward hook. Then impale it further back with the remaining hook(s) so that it pulls "strung out" through the water.
- With worm harnesses you can do oddball things that catch fish. Try hooking minnows or leeches on the harness hooks so they trail in tandem. Or experiment with combinations — like a piece of nightcrawler on one hook and a leech or minnow on another.
- Spinners are available in a variety of metallic and flourescent colors. Color preferences vary from one body of water to the next, depending in part on water clarity and sky cover. Take along a selection of colors and be willing to experiment. Color does make a difference.
- Spinner-live bait rigs can be trolled, drifted, or cast. Effective speeds vary. Walleyes, bass and crappies generally prefer slow speeds, just fast enough to make the spinner blade spin. Pike often respond to a faster approach.

Be flexible with your live bait presentations. Sometimes you'll catch more fish with "flash" ahead of your bait. Try Spinners.

Cosman Lake derby planned for today

The Elk Grove Sportsmen's Club and park district will host the 2nd Annual Fishing Derby at Cosman Lake today. The derby, begun in 1976 as part of National Hunting and Fishing Day activities, will be open to residents of the Elk Grove Park District only.

Fishing began at 6:30 a.m. Prizes to youths 11 to 16 years and 10 years and younger will be awarded at 10 a.m. for the largest fish caught in a number of categories. A 27½ lb. Blue Catfish was the largest fish caught in 1976.

Assistance for the young fishermen will be provided by members of the Sportsmens Club. The Sportsmens Club also is providing awards and worms to be used as bait. Fishing with minnows will not be permitted during the contest.

For additional information call the Eik Grove Park District at 437-8780.

Duck stamp aids building of waterfowl refuge area

Funds from the sale of the 1976 Illinois Migratory Waterfowl Hunting stamp are financing construction of a levee that will create a 100-acre 'rest stop' for ducks migrating into Des Plaines Conservation Area near Joliet in Will County.

Work already has started on the earthen dike, which will range between 6 and 12 feet high along its nearly 3 mile length. Completion is expected by the start of this year's waterfowl hunting season, but it is not known if the area can be flooded in time to serve this year's migrating flocks.

Intended as a refuge, the area will not be opened to hunting, but its existence is expected to attract a substantial number of additional waterfowl. As a result, hunting opportunities should be improved for hunters using other sections of the Des Plaines area.

THE NEW levee will enclose three sides of an area at the confluence of the Illinois, Kankee and Des Plaines rivers and Grant Creek, near Des Plaines River Mile 275 and Blodgett Road in the state park's northwest corner. Sloping land will serve as the water retention barrier on the fourth side of the nearly-square pond.

Land within the levee will remain dry during most of the year and crops suited to waterfowl will be grown there. It will be flooded just before the annual duck migration. Flooding will take approximately 20 days.

Creation of the refuge is necessary to help offset accelerated losses of waterfowl habitat occurring in the heavily industrialized area in which the Des Plaines Conservation Area is located.

ESTIMATED COST of the project is $155,000. Brown and Lambrecht Earthmovers, Inc. of Joliet has the $89,074 contract for construction of the levees. Contracts for installation of water level control pumps are to be awarded this month.

The remainder of the approximately $200,000 derived from duck stamp sales last year will be used for other Illinois waterfowl habitat improvement projects.

Corn crop plentiful but prices take a dive

A record 1977 harvest is in the offing for corn belt farmers but slumping prices leave them little to cheer about.

Executive Director Dale Nelson of the Iowa Farm Bureau said farmers are being advised not to sell their crop because prices are the lowest in four years. Corn is selling for about $1.50 per bushel compared to $2.80 in July 1976.

Illinois agriculture director John Block said farmers will be very reluctant sellers and probably will decide to hold on to their corn in hope of better prices. However, he said, they may not be able to hold it for long.

"There is only so much storage for all this grain," Block said. "Once the storage is filled it goes on the ground and farmers may be forced to sell."

SOME STATE AND farm group officials feel the Carter administration is not pushing farm exports the way it should. There are even hints Carter is attempting to fight inflation by holding down farm prices.

"I don't sense an emphasis to sell our farm products overseas," said Iowa Gov. Robert D. Ray, a Republican. "I don't sense the same concern for farmers as when President Ford and Earl Butz were there."

Bob Wisner, extension economist at Iowa State University, said many foreign grain-producing areas, particularly Europe which has "recovered sharply" from drought conditions last year, will harvest big crops this year. As a result, Wisner expects a 12 to 14 per cent decline in corn exports in the year ahead.

From Nebraska to Ohio and Minnesota to Missouri, agricultural officials pronounce the crop in generally good shape with the exception of some drought pockets. Harvest is under way in many areas.

PERHAPS HARDEST hit by dry weather is Iowa, where many central area farmers will harvest no crop at all. The Hawkeye state, for years the silver buckle on the corn belt, once again will lose its no. 1 corn-producin g status to neighboring Illinois.

Nationwide, the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture is predicting a record 6.229-billion bushel crop. Illinois farmers are expected to harvest 1.2 billion bushels and Iowa 1.05 billion bushels.

"It appears that despite the drought, we will harvest another billion-bushel corn crop and are anticipating one of our largest soybean crops on record," said Iowa Agriculture Sec. Robert H. Lounsberry.

Normally this would be good news, but because of current markets, Iowa agriculture may experience a billion-dollar loss in corn income and a drop in soybean income at over $400 million."

LOUNSBERRY SAID the USDA estimates "put another nail in the free market coffin and will force farmers to look more and more to government help whether they like it or not."

Block said the mid-section of Illinois, which normally raises the best corn, was hit by hot, dry weather in the critical pollination stage, reducing yeilds to 30 bushels per acre. However, he said the corn is not nearly as bad as the crop in central Iowa.

In Wisconsin, farmers will have a 51 per cent increase over last year's crop. Wisconsin Sec. of Agriculture Gary Rhode said the corn crop looks "very good."

Overall, the USDA expects Illinois farmers will top the list with yields of 111 bushels per acre; Indiana, Colorado and Nebraska are close behind at 100 bushels; and Ohio and Wisconsin follow with 96 bushels. The dry weather brought Iowa's average yield down to 86 bushels per acre.

ONE CENTRAL IOWA farmer who lost his entire crop — Elmer Paul, 67 — described 1977 as the worst year in his 42 years of farming.

"We'll get by though and try again next year, but some of these young fellows will be driven out of business by the drought," said Paul, who planted 740 acres of corn last spring on his farm near Nevada in Story County.

In sharp contrast, Elvie Dreezen, who has farmed for 32 years in Ida County in Northwest Iowa, said he had never seen "as fine a crop as this year."

"The rains were very timely, there were times when we'd be outside watching for those clouds, but then the rain came within hours."

Dreezen said low corn prices won't hurt his farming operation as severely as some because he uses all of crop as feed for livestock.

"It's no disaster for me," he said, "but it's something I'm not smiling about."

FARMERS ARE FACING the possibility of lower prices as they harvest this year's corn crop in Illinois and neighboring states. A record crop size and decining exports have combined to cut demand.

High volume may mean end to slump

Louis Rukeyser

NEW YORK — Is there any sure way of knowing when the stock market's 1977 malaise is ending and when it is about to start surging upward again? No, alas, but there will be a darned good clue, and you won't need a chart, a graph or a graduate degree in finance to spot it.

The clue resides in one of the least understood of all market statistics: the volume of trading.

Most investors, when they pay any attention at all to this figure, tend to regard it as a curiosity primarily of interest to the brokers. After all, while a stockholder normally makes money only when prices rise, a broker feeds his family on the commissions he garners on purchases and sales, whether profitable or disastrous. A high volume of such transactions is thus the broker's personal route to prosperity, whatever is happening to the averages.

BUT IT TURNS out that the investor has a strong vested interest in the volume statistics, too, though his interest, as often is the case, may not be identical to his broker's. Excessively high volume is frequently a signal that a rally is coming to an end. Right now, however, both the stockholder and the order-taker have reason to vote for higher volume. This time it might well mean an end to the decline.

It's hard for many investors to grasp the notion that rising volume and falling prices is a combination that should delight them. Indeed, many market reporters share this confusion; they will talk of a decline being less severe than it might have been, because it occurred on low volume. The trouble with that kind of reasoning is that when prices are falling on low volume, they are likely to keep on falling. The selling usually doesn't stop until it has speeded up.

ROBERT H. STOVALL, the astute vice president and director of investment strategy for Reynolds Securities, Inc., has made a careful study of the historical relationship between volume and prices, concluding that "we should be encouraged, not depressed, when volume expands as prices decline, because that means that the buyers are almost as eager as the sellers, and that the liquidation will be accomplished sooner rather than later."

In a declining market, volume usually declines, too. That's not good: that's normal, and it can go on for an awfully long time. Average daily New York Stock Exchange volume in 1974, when prices hit bottom, was under 14

New is not necessarily better

NEW YORK (UPI) — Those who fear the sizeable family controlled company in America is doomed might take a look at Skil Corp. of Chicago.

When a company survives a crisis and has a turnaround, more often than not it is saved by the dramatic introduction of new products. But Skil was saved by one of its oldest products.

Skil's earnings plunged from $2.32 a share to 29 cents between 1972 and 1975. Its main products are professional grade power tools for carpenters and other craftsmen and the slump in building hit the firm hard. It also had become complacent about some of its production and other policies.

IN 1976 AND SO far this year, Skil has had a big turnaround. The improvement in building was a big factor as has been the case with many companies closely involved with the construction industry.

But Skil did not bring out any great number of new products and Chairman John E. Sullivan resisted the temptation to get into the lower price end of consumer power tools in competition with Black & Decker and Rockwell International, among others.

Sullivan gives much of the credit for the turnaround to the staying powers of one of Skil's oldest products, the Model 77 worm-drive power saw introduced in 1937. He said this tool has seldom been changed since its first introduction and everytime Skil engineers tried to modify it there were anguished complaints from customers.

"The advantages of any change had to be instantly obvious to the carpenters and other craftsmen who were going to use the saw," Sullivan said.

"That particular saw is very easy for a worker to hold and it is deadly accurate on angle cuts," he said.

"IT'S PROBABLY the most copied saw in the world," Sullivan said.

Of course Skil makes drills, routers, sanders, grinders, power wrenches and hammers and chain saws, too. It has 350 products in all.

But the company was founded in 1924 by Sullivan's grandfather and Edmon Michael to make a portable circular power saw, then a revolutionary idea that carpenters took a while to accept.

While the consumer market for small power tools is enormous in America, in the global market the demand for professional tools is much bigger. That's the market Sullivan is after. He drew 72 per cent of his profit from international sales last year.

"The advantages of any change had to be instantly obvious to the carpenters and other craftsmen who were going to use the saw," Sullivan said.

"That particular saw is very easy for a worker to hold and it is deadly accurate on angle cuts," he said.

"IT'S PROBABLY the most copied saw in the world," Sullivan said.

Of course Skil makes drills, routers, sanders, grinders, power wrenches and hammers and chain saws, too. It has 350 products in all.

But the company was founded in 1924 by Sullivan's grandfather and Edmon Michael to make a portable circular power saw, then a revolutionary idea that carpenters took a while to accept.

While the consumer market for small power tools is enormous in America, in the global market the demand for professional tools is much bigger. That's the market Sullivan is after. He drew 72 per cent of his profit from international sales last year.

'Friend' Lance can't be replaced

Hobart Rowen

WASHINGTON — No single person will succeed the embattled Bert Lance as he goes back to Atlanta. But a bigger burden is likely to fall on Vice President Walter F. Mondale, trade negotiator Robert Strauss and U.S. Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell.

It must be remembered that Lance has been wearing three hats, only one of which is that of director of the Office of Management and Budget.

The other two roles are closely related, but filled distinct functions. In one, Lance assumed the duties of main "ambassador" to the business community. In the other, he was the closest kind of persoul confidant and adviser to the president.

IT'S IN THOSE areas where the problem gets tough for Carter. As the major White House contact point for the business community, Lance was the topmost official that corporate leaders could talk to. Carter shied away from personal meetings with business executives, unless they happened to be among his Georgia friends.

There is no one person on the horizon now in the administration who can take on the role of communicator with business, although Special Trade Negotiator Strauss will be increasingly called on to act as a go-between with businessmen. U.S. Treasury Sec. W. Michael Blumenthal, who until now has deferred to Lance, will also actively try to bridge the gap.

Blumenthal will have to work at it, because some in the business community view him as outside of their "crowd." He's never been one of the business council blue bloods.

Blumenthal comes, after all, from Detroit, not New York where some of the financial types suspect that he is a mite too liberal. And a few look down their noses at him because of his interest in international economic affairs, rather than the nitty-gritty of domestic affairs, like tax cuts for business.

BUT THIS WILL be a new ball game, in which Carter himself will have to spend more of his own time than he might choose in developing support among opinion-makers in the business world.

Perhaps Lance's hardest-to-define role was that of intimate friend, counselor, tennis partner and general adviser. It was a very personal relationship — two Georgians who could relax together. If Carter had a problem to settle on the Hill, he could talk it over with Bert, and then dispatch him as a personal messenger.

My own view, after long talks with many officials, is that no one will fill this particular void. Strauss and Vice President Mondale, two of the most trusted newcomers to the Carter entourage, will be consulted more. And of the remaining Georgians, it is a reasonable bet that Atty. Gen. Bell, closer than the others in age to Carter, will spend more time at the White House.

As for OMB itself, Lance's stewardship has been of great importance because his closeness to the president gave added emphasis to the commitment to balance the budget and reorganize the government. In effect, Lance held a commission from Carter to ward off the "spenders," inside and outside the Cabinet. He was a naysayer to Democratic liberals.

CARTER, WHO has shown himself sensitive to the need to preserve "business confidence," is unlikely to name an OMB director who would do anything but carry forward that policy.

The easiest thing to do at the moment, because the budget process for fiscal 1979 is far along, would be to name one of the deputy directors, James T. McIntyre Jr. or Bowman Cutter, as acting director. They have been carrying the budget preparation load, anyway. Even before Lance's troubles accumulated, he showed little patience with OMB detail.

Carter could also name, now or later, acknowledged budget experts such as Charles L. Schultze, now chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, and a former budget director; or Alice M. Rivlin, director of the Congressional Budget Office.

But some White House advisers counsel Carter to scout around for a management expert (and nonbaker) closely identified with the business community and more conservative that Schultze or Rivlin.

Strauss' name has also been bandied about in Washington as a replacement for Lance at OMB. Strauss' strength, however, is not financial management, but political savvy. He's the kind of pragmatist who Carter had come to depend on, even before the Lance affair, for negotiating on Capitol Hill. That's where the former Democratic National Committee chairman shines.

When you add it all up, Lance's exit is a personal loss to Carter, and part of that loss will be permanent. "Carter can't replace Lance," says a Washington old-timer. "He can only replace the director of the Office of Management and Budget."

Stocks plunge to a 21-month low

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market plunged to a 21-month low this week as the Bert Lance affair severely eroded investor confidence in the Carter administration.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which slipped 0.26 point last week, dropped 17.67 points to 839.14, the lowest level since it closed at 838.63 Dec. 22, 1975.

The closely watched average has given up 163.69 points so far this year, wiping out all of 1976's gains, and left observers wondering what the market was trying to tell them. Most economists have said they do not think a recession is in the offing.

THE NEW YORK Stock Exchange common stock index dropped 0.72 to 52.07, the lowest level since it finished at 51.97 Jan. 22, 1976. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index dropped 1.44 to 95.04, the lowest level since it closed at 94.95 Jan. 9, 1976.

Declines routed advances, 1,288 to 533, among the 2,110 issues crossing the composite tape.

Big board volume totaled 93,544,630 shares, compared with 87,510,370 last week and 126,624,490 during the same week a year ago.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 110,038,870 shares, compared with 103,026,250 last week.

A SELLING stampede erupted Wednesday as Lance, President Carter's budget director, resigned, ending months of turmoil over the Georgian's banking policies.

While many were glad the Lance affair was over, Wall Street was nervous. Investors wanted to know who would replace Lance, a close Carter friend who Wall Street considered a conservative business force in the administration.

Carter acknowledged that the Lance affair had taken some of his time away from other matters. As a result, Congress, which plans to adjourn for the year by Oct. 15, has battered the Carter energy program.

Heavy selling also was sparked by news that the nation's basic money supply rose $2 billion in the latest reporting week. The Federal Reserve Board responded by tightening credit again.

AS A RESULT, banks have raised their prime lending rate a quarter point to 7¼ per cent. Yet, the August consumer price index rose only 0.3 per cent, the smallest increase since November 1976.

Wall Street is uncertain about the tax reform program Carter has promised to propose within the next couple of weeks. U.S. Treasury Sec. W. Michael Blumenthal said it would include several incentives for business. He did not elaborate.

Blumenthal, who said he doubted a recession was at hand, did acknowledge that the economy has slowed down and economic reports confirmed it. August industrial production dropped 0.5 per cent, the first decline since January.

Factories operated at 82.7 per cent of capacity in August, down from 83.2 per cent in July, and the first decline since January. Housing starts dipped 2.6 per cent.

Exxon takes rates ruling to high court

Exxon Pipeline Co. Friday announced it has asked the U.S. Supreme Court to review a lower court decision upholding Interstate Commerce Commission reduction of Alaska pipeline oil shipping rates.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last summer rejected a challenge by several oil companies to the ICC's suspension of company-recommended rates and the setting of lower interim rates pending hearings.

Exxon initially set the price of transporting north slope oil through the pipeline to the Gulf of Alaska port of Valdez at $6.27 per barrel. On June 28, the ICC suspended that rate and set an interim rate of $5.10 per barrel.

Maximum interest to stay at 9.5%

The maximum interest rate charged for residential real estate mortgage loans will be maintained at 9.5 per cent for October, Illinois Savings and Loan Comr. Timothy Griffin announced. The rate became 9.75 per cent in April but dropped to 9.5 per cent in August, Griffin said.

2 railroads announce merger

Officials of the Burlington Northern Inc. and the St. Louis-San Francisco Railway Co. announced Friday both boards of directors have approved in principle to merge the two railroads.

Menk and Grayson said an application for merger is expected to be filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission by the end of the year.

Burlington Northern serves 19 Western and Midwestern states and two Canadian provinces. The company was formed in 1970 by the merger of the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroads.

Frisco has 4,700 miles of rails serving nine central Southern states. Frisco also owns slightly more than half the stock of the New Mexico & Arizona Land Co.

Gould signs torpedo contract

Gould Inc., Rolling Meadows, has signed a $64.1 million MK 48 torpedo program. The new order is the sixth production built under the MK 48 program which began in July, 1971. Torpedo deliveries under the new award are scheduled to run through 1979. The MK 48 torpedo is designed to defend tactical and strategic submarine and surface forces at sea.

Grain antibiotics may be harmful

Antibiotics routinely added to cattle feed and poultry grain result in bacteria resistant to the drugs and pose a threat to human health, Food and Drug Commissioner Donald Kennedy says. Penicillin and certain tetracyclines used in humans to fight bacteria-caused diseases are put in feed to promote cattle and poultry growth and health. Kennedy's testimony was challenged by David Hendlin, a drug laboratory microbiologist. Evidence "accumulated to date does not support discontinuing the use of antibiotics in animal feeds," he said.

Payments deficit sets record

The U.S. balance of payments, an important barometer of the nation's international economic standing, set a record during the second quarter when it fell into deficit by $4.6 billion, the Commerce Dept. said. The red ink in the current account ledger during the April-June quarter compared with a $4.16 billion deficit in the first quarter, the previous high, the department said. The size of the second quarter deficit was not a surprise. Oil imports had increased rapidly in April and May before declining in June. As a result, the merchandise trade deficit for the first seven months of the year had swollen to $14.91 billion.

Oil prices predicted to skyrocket

The world's oil fields are running dry and prices are likely to "rocket uncontrollably" after 1985 if alternative sources of energy are not developed, a report to the 10th World Energy Conference said. Even full utiization of all known petroleum resources in the world will result in 100 per cent price increases for all oil products, such as gasoline and heating oil, the conference's conservation committee said. "Crude oil reserves are running out," the report said. "The years 1985 to 1995 seem critical. "If the demand for petroleum continues at that time, i.e., if there is not sufficient availability of coal and nuclear electricity, there will probably be a shortage and oil prices are likely to rocket uncontrollably."

High volume could mean upswing million shares, as compared with more than 21 million shares last year. When prices are falling, volume generally falls, too — and vice versa. Nor is the phenomenon surprising: most investors want prices to go up, and are more inclined to join the action when the arrows are pointing north.

Thus Stovall, among others, is convinced that "volume can be more helpful than many other tools in trying to forecast the market.

"THE BASIC PRINCIPLE involved in making such a forecast is simple. Over long periods of time, rising stock markets have been characterized by high levels of trading activity, while declining markets are usually accompanied by lower levels of trading activity. This rule applies most of the time, and when volume starts to move the opposite way, that is frequently a major turning point.

"This also means that you should take little comfort when a commentator tells you that 'analysts were reassured by the low level of volume during yesterday's decline' because low volume is what we should expect when the market is going down. The time to feel reassured is when volume picks up while prices are declining, for that will tell you that the sellers have found someone to sell to. The agony will be over sooner rather than later."

In other words, volume can be a highly useful leading indicator, leading prices up or down. The problem is, you have to resist that universal human instinct to panic just before the dawn.

When the market really seems to be crashing — when the combination of heavy losses and heavy trading becomes terrifying Page One news — that's often the signal for which the shrewdest buyers have been waiting.

It will replace copiers like the Xerox 660 and old fashioned electrofax copiers that use coated paper to produce copies that are tough to write on and read.

The Canon NP-50 is so reliable it greatly reduces your operating costs. And our suggested retail price of $2975 includes a handsome rollaway stand. Another savings.

Find out more about a whole new generation in copiers, call or write us today.

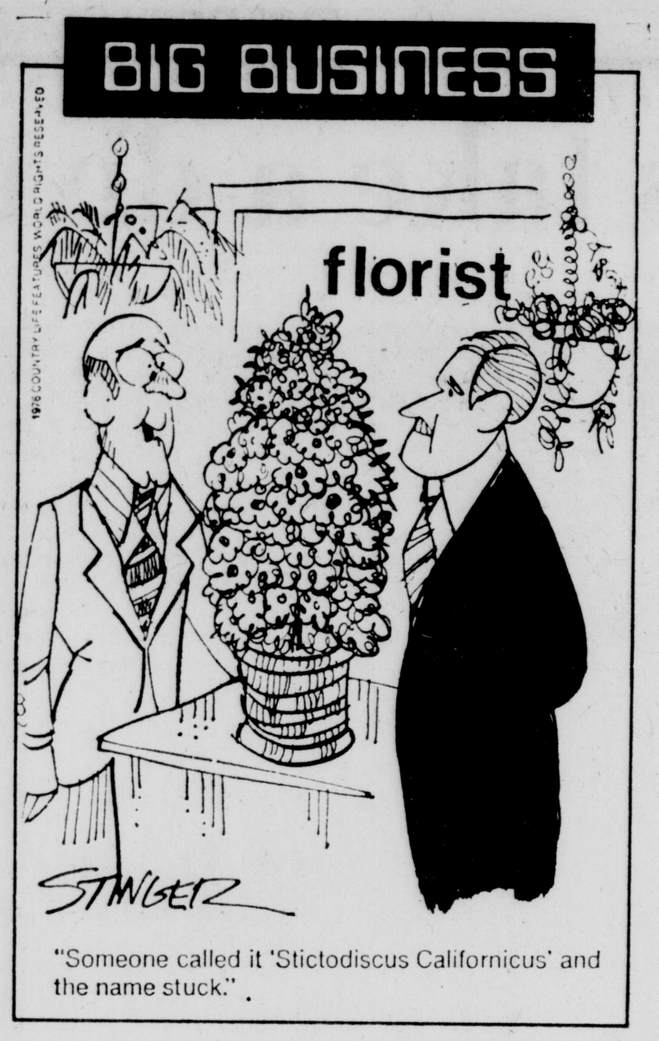

For $2,975,* it's the biggest bargain in plain paper copier history.

Inflation means spending principal

by ROBERT EDWARDS

Money Wise

Letters frequently ask for investment advice or ways to increase income from assets in coping with inflation after retirement. One way to provide more income is to spend part of the principal each year. Until recently the idea of "invading the corpus" of a savings or investment portfolio was considered reckless. Inflation has changed all that — for two reasons:

(1) The longer one holds onto dollars, the less they buy. (2) As prices continue upward, retirees need more dollars to maintain their life-style.

Any plan for spending part of your principal stands on three legs — your age, the amount of money in your savings pool, and how much your savings earn regularly. For example, suppose your savings pool (stocks, bonds, certificates of deposit (CDs), and other investments) amounts to $60,000. If your savings earn an average of 6 per cent, your income is $3,600 annually or $300/month. By withdrawing $3,600/year or less, your savings pool will last indefinitely. However, suppose you decide you need $450/month or $5,400/year. That amounts to a 9 per cent withdrawal each year. Each year you take out $1,800 more than is earned by spending part of your savings. How long will your savings pool last? According to the following table, your savings will last 18 years.

Percent of original principal withdrawn Per year	Avg. ret. on principal 3%4%5%6%7%8%9% Principal will last this many years
5	30 41*
6	23 28 36*
7	18 21 25 33*
8	15 17 20 23 30*
9	13 14 16 18 22 28*
10	12 13 14 15 17 20 26

*Indefinite-Income equals withdrawal rate

Suppose, however, that your savings earn an average of 8 per cent instead of 6. You could draw $450/month or $5,400/year for 28 years instead of 18, because more spendable dollars are income and fewer come from principal.

The third variable is your life expectancy. Overspending could leave you with no savings. But, hoarding by spending less restrains your life-style. One rule of thumb in planning a systematic withdrawal of principal is to double your life expectancy. If you are now 68, mortality tables indicate you can expect to live another 11.7 years if you are a man or 15.3 years if you are a woman. To allow a safety margin, you could double these numbers — to 24 years for a man or 31 years if you are a woman. Plan your withdrawal amounts on those years and you will not likely run out of money. The table of life expectancies below will help you plan withdrawal program.

Ages 65 to 75

Ages	male	female
65	13.4	17.5
66	12.8	16.7
67	12.2	16.0
68	11.7	15.3
69	11.2	14.6
70	10.7	13.9
71	10.2	13.2
73	9.2	12.0
74	8.8	11.4
75	8.4	10.8

All three pieces now are in place. You can judge whether you want to spend more during your younger, more active years and slow spending later. Or, you may decide to follow a straight line by withdrawing the same amount each year.

Don't accept the savings income you are now receiving as fixed. You could, for example, exchange growth stocks that may be paying 1½ to 3 per cent for income stocks paying over 8 per cent. Or, switch some funds from a passbook account into long-term CDs and gain 7¾ per cent interest. When you elect to spend part of your principal, some of your funds should remain liquid — in a passbook savings, account, for example. Plan your maturities of bonds and CDs to provide a reasonably even flow of funds.

Planning to spend part of your principal regularly requires attentive management action, but the payoff can be a relaxed outlook with fewer money worries and more affluent life-style.

Dow unchanged in moderate trade

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market, unable to maintain a bargain-hunting rally attempt closed out a losing "Bert Lance" week Friday with little change in moderate trading. Blue-chips remained at a 21-month low.

The Dow Jones industrial average, up nearly 3 points at one time, finished unchanged at 839.14, the lowest level since it closed at 838.63 Dec. 22, 1975. The blue-chip average, which lost 1.82 points Thursday, lost 17.67 points this week and has fallen 163.69 so far this year.

The New York Stock Exchange common stock index slipped 0.01 to 52.07, the same as Wednesday, which was the lowest level since it closed at 51.97 Jan. 22, 1976. The average price of a share dipped 1 cent.

Declines topped advances, 709 to 646, among the 1,851 issues crossing the composite tape at 4 p.m. EDT.

Big board volume totaled 18,760,000 shares, compared with 16,660,000 traded Thursday.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all exchanges and over the counter totaled 20,822,140 shares, compared with 19,221,940 Thursday.

Steel leaders ask U.S. action

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Municipal leaders and workers from the nation's steel-producing region met with administration officials Friday, demanding that President Carter act to protect the industry from foreign competition.

On Capitol Hill, several senators agreed to organize a "steel caucus" to put additional pressure on the administration.

Several hundred Ohio steelworkers met with presidential adviser Margaret Costanza at the gates of the White House to express their concern about a recent wave of layoffs in the steel industry. She told them the administration shared their concern.

Mayors Richard Caliguiri of Pittsburgh and Jack C. Hunter of Youngstown, Ohio, along with other steel-region political leaders, also met with Commerce Dept. officials.

Carter has acknowledged he is concerned about the layoffs but told a group of Republican senators earlier this week he sees no immediate need to change federal policies affecting the industry.

Circulation managers meeting set

The Chicago area is host to the annual fall meeting and marketing workshop of the Central States Circulation Managers' Assn.

The program, at the Oak Brook Hyatt House Friday through Sunday, features Steve Star, associate professor of marketing for the Harvard Graduate Business School, an expert of newspaper marketing techniques. Among those attending are four Daily Herald executives: John Karambelas, vice president/circulation; Mike Di Maria, assistant circulation director; Jerry Liddle, promotional director; and Art Diaz, vice president/general manager.

Inflation means spending principal

Money Wise

by ROBERT EDWARDS

Letters frequently ask for investment advice or ways to increase income from assets in coping with inflation after retirement. One way to provide more income is to spend part of the principal each year. Until recently the idea of "invading the corpus" of a savings or investment portfolio was considered reckless. Inflation has changed all that — for two reasons:

(1) The longer one holds onto dollars, the less they buy. (2) As prices continue upward, retirees need more dollars to maintain their life-style.

Any plan for spending part of your principal stands on three legs — your age, the amount of money in your savings pool, and how much your savings earn regularly. For example, suppose your savings pool (stocks, bonds, certificates of deposit (CDs), and other investments) amounts to $60,000. If your savings earn an average of 6 per cent, your income is $3,600 annually or $300/month. By withdrawing $3,600/year or less, your savings pool will last indefinitely. However, suppose you decide you need $450/month or $5,400/year. That amounts to a 9 per cent withdrawal each year. Each year you take out $1,800 more than is earned by spending part of your savings. How long will your savings pool last? According to the following table, your savings will last 18 years.

Dow unchanged in moderate trade

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market, unable to maintain a bargain-hunting rally attempt closed out a losing "Bert Lance" week Friday with little change in moderate trading. Blue-chips remained at a 21-month low.

The Dow Jones industrial average, up nearly 3 points at one time, finished unchanged at 839.14, the lowest level since it closed at 838.63 Dec. 22, 1975. The blue-chip average, which lost 1.82 points Thursday, lost 17.67 points this week and has fallen 163.69 so far this year.

The New York Stock Exchange common stock index slipped 0.01 to 52.07, the same as Wednesday, which was the lowest level since it closed at 51.97 Jan. 22, 1976. The average price of a share dipped 1 cent.

Declines topped advances, 709 to 646, among the 1,851 issues crossing the composite tape at 4 p.m. EDT.

Big board volume totaled 18,760,000 shares, compared with 16,660,000 traded Thursday.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all exchanges and over the counter totaled 20,822,140 shares, compared with 19,221,940 Thursday.

Steel leaders ask U.S. action

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Municipal leaders and workers from the nation's steel-producing region met with administration officials Friday, demanding that President Carter act to protect the industry from foreign competition.

On Capitol Hill, several senators agreed to organize a "steel caucus" to put additional pressure on the administration.

Several hundred Ohio steelworkers met with presidential adviser Margaret Costanza at the gates of the White House to express their concern about a recent wave of layoffs in the steel industry. She told them the administration shared their concern.

Mayors Richard Caliguiri of Pittsburgh and Jack C. Hunter of Youngstown, Ohio, along with other steel-region political leaders, also met with Commerce Dept. officials.

Carter has acknowledged he is concerned about the layoffs but told a group of Republican senators earlier this week he sees no immediate need to change federal policies affecting the industry.

Circulation managers meeting set

The Chicago area is host to the annual fall meeting and marketing workshop of the Central States Circulation Managers' Assn.

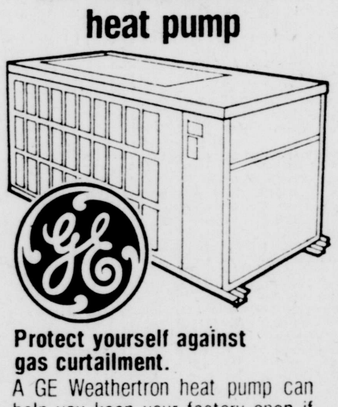

The program, at the Oak Brook Hyatt House Friday through Sunday, features Steve Star, associate professor of marketing for the Harvard Graduate Business School, an expert of newspaper marketing techniques. Among those attending are four Daily Herald executives: John Karambelas, vice president/circulation; Mike Di Maria, assistant circulation director; Jerry Liddle, promotional director; and Art Diaz, vice president/general manager.

Will an energy shortage disrupt your business?
If so, maybe it's time to look at a GE Weathertron® heat pump

Protect yourself against gas curtailment.
A GE Weathertron heat pump can help you keep your factory open if a gas shortage hits. Because it's all-electric. Gas curtailments don't directly affect the heat pump's use. So your allotment of valuable gas can be used for producing the products that pay the bills.
If you're looking for alternate ways of heating your building, look to the GE Weathertron heat pump.
A heat pump is the most efficient way to use electricity for heating. And with a GE Weathertron heat pump, you get the added advantage of over 40 years of research, design, testing and manufacturing experience.
Next time a natural gas shortage hits, be prepared. Call today and find out how a GE Weathertron® heat pump can help. It's America's #1 Selling Heat Pump!

Students learn— teachers eat well

by ANNA MADRZYK

Too many cooks may spoil the broth but they didn't spoil the beef stroganoff at the Clumsy Chef Restaurant in Elgin High School.

Using some deft footwork, the crew of high school cooks managed to prepare and serve a complete meal to a lunch hour rush crowd of 30 teachers, clear tables, wash dishes, make some of the following day's lunch and receive a "delicious" rating from nearly every customer who went out the door.

And they do it three days a week as part of a unique advanced foods class at Elgin, which involves students in all phases of running a restaurant, from grocery shopping for bargains to baking bread. Students invest $10 each in the restaurant — and possible profits are another incentive for running it well.

THE TEACHER customers pay $1.35 for one meal, $1 for the salad bar or $5 for a book of four tickets.

The atmosphere of the Clumsy Chef is strictly informal. Tables with placemats are set up at one end of the foods lab kitchen — and all the cooking is done a few feet away and in full view of the patrons.

At one stove, the head chef is mixing stroganoff sauce and browning meat and onions, while dodging the server who's putting the main course on plates. And a member of the clean-up crew pinch hits by dashing back to the refrigerator for cold iced tea glasses.

The only crisis is the whipped topping, which someone forgot to thaw out, and one of the male chefs is busy trying to get it in shape by hand.

"Just slop it on top," pleads a waitress in an urgent whisper as she holds out two butterscotch puddings.

"I can't slop it. It don't want to slop," he replies.

AND JUST like in a real restaurant, when all the work is done, they still don't get to eat the profits.

But they do learn how to cook almost everything, from spaghetti to quiche lorraine.

"I love the class. It's great," said Bob Dahl, a senior from Streamwood. "I like foods and I like to cook."

The Clumsy Chef class, held at Elgin for the about ten years except for last year, is taught this year by Marge Armstrong, who said students "get a feeling it's all theirs. They're all an equal part of the corporation and they enjoy that."

And the teachers, who enthusiastically scraped their plates clean, seemed to enjoy the Clumsy Chef every bit as much as the students do.

Reaching over, under and around is sometimes necessary to hurry the broccoli and cheese sauce.

Beef stragonoff, homemade biscuits and coffee are on the menu as the Clumsy Chef Restaurant waitress serves an Elgin High School teacher.

The vegetable chef checks the broccoli, hoping it will get done on time to feed the lunch hour crowd.

We're getting around more. So you'll get around better.

You'll be seeing a lot more of RTA's 234 bus.

RTA's route 234 used to be a "shuttle" bus connecting Wheeling with Mt. Prospect and Des Plaines C & NW railway stations during commuting hours.

Now it can do a lot more. Because now the 234 runs all day and on Saturdays.

That makes it very handy for getting to Wheeling High School, Randhurst Shopping Center, Holy Family Hospital and many other points of interest from Wheeling to Des Plaines.

So get around the easy way. For just 30 cents on the RTA's 234. And for another 30 cents you can get an RTA Universal Transfer and board any other RTA bus—including CTA services in Chicago—without paying an additional full fare.

For a free schedule write RTA, P.O. Box 2938, Chicago, IL 60690. Or call RTA Travel Information toll-free 800/972-7000.

"I love the class. It's great," said Bob Dahl, a senior from Streamwood. "I like foods and I like to cook."

The Clumsy Chef class, held at Elgin for the about ten years except for last year, is taught this year by Marge Armstrong, who said students "get a feeling it's all theirs. They're all an equal part of the corporation and they enjoy that."

And the teachers, who enthusiastically scraped their plates clean, seemed to enjoy the Clumsy Chef every bit as much as the students do.

Beef stragonoff, homemade biscuits and coffee are on the menu as the Clumsy Chef Restaurant waitress serves an Elgin High School teacher.

The vegetable chef checks the broccoli, hoping it will get done on time to feed the lunch hour crowd.

We're getting around more. So you'll get around better.

You'll be seeing a lot more of RTA's 234 bus.

RTA's route 234 used to be a "shuttle" bus connecting Wheeling with Mt. Prospect and Des Plaines C & NW railway stations during commuting hours.

Now it can do a lot more. Because now the 234 runs all day and on Saturdays.

That makes it very handy for getting to Wheeling High School, Randhurst Shopping Center, Holy Family Hospital and many other points of interest from Wheeling to Des Plaines.

So get around the easy way. For just 30 cents on the RTA's 234. And for another 30 cents you can get an RTA Universal Transfer and board any other RTA bus—including CTA services in Chicago—without paying an additional full fare.

Solar water heater costly but saves cash

A Tennessee manufacturer has introduced in the Chicago area a solar water heater the firm says will cut costs for heating water by up to 65 per cent.

But the Solarcraft water heater, made by State Industries of Ashland City, Tenn., initially will be costly: the Solarcraft will cost up to 10 times more than conventional water heaters.

To perform efficiently, the Solarcraft also must have a water capactiy three times greater than conventional gas-fired or electric water heaters.

BUT, THE manufacturers say, the Solarcraft will pay for itself in decreased utility bills within 10 years.

The Solarcraft system consists of solar collector panels installed on the southward-facing roof of a single-family home, and a hot water storage tank.

The manufacturer recommends that a family of four in the Chicago area install three 38-by-98-inch solar collectors, and a family of five or six, four solar collectors. A 120-gallon hot water tank is used in both examples, though in conventional systems, a 40- to 50 gallon tank is adequate for such families.

Distilled water circulating through collector panels picks up heat from the sun. The heated water then is pumped through a closed piping system to the tank, where tap water is heated to 140 degrees.

THE COOLED distilled water returns to the collectors.

A built-in electric heating element kicks in when a sensor detects a drop in the collector water's temperature below that of the water tank. The auxiliary heater would operate on cloudy days and at night.

Mike Warren, sales manager for Added Sales Co., distributor of the Solarcraft, said an average family would cut its water heating bill by 55 per cent after installing the Solarcraft.

By taking maximum advantage of sunlight, drawing hot water for bathing, laundry and dish washing only in the mornings, a family could cut its water heating bills by 65 per cent, Warren said.

ADDITIONALLY, Warren said, "We have designed the unit so the world's worst plumber could install it. You don't need to be a heating engineer to install it."

State Industries reportedy sold 5,000 Solarcraft units nationally in 1976, including 250 units in Illinois. In the Chicago area, where most of the 250 were sold, approximately 85 per cent of the installations were in new homes, said James Purnell, executive director of the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, Chicago.

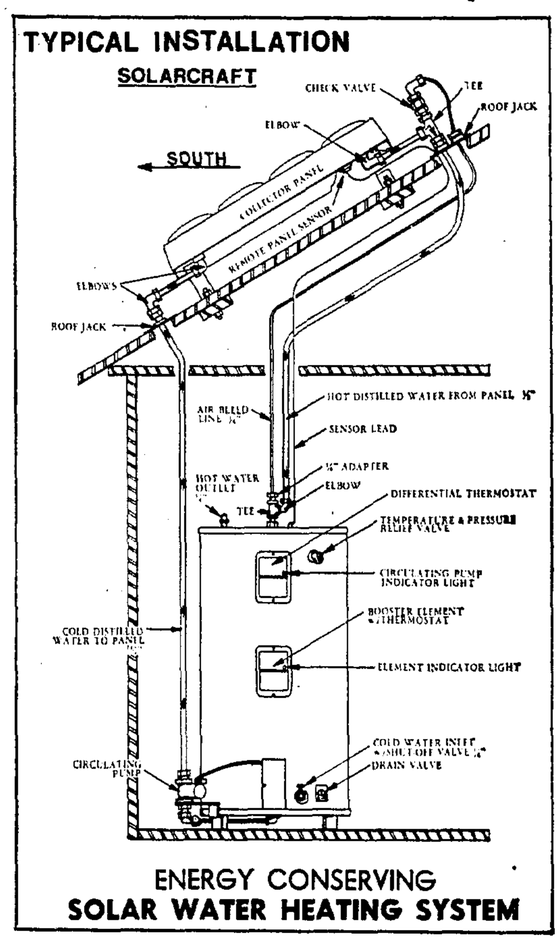

State Industries projects 8,000 sales of Solarcraft units in 1977, and — with great optimism — 100,000 sales in 1978 on a national level.

The manufactuere says 250,000 Solarcraft units will be sold in 1981, while by 1991, 65 per cent of all new residential construction will contain solar water heaters, and 30 per cent of water heater replacements will take advantage of the sun.

PRICE OF A Solarcraft system consising of a 120-gallon water heater with electric boost element, pump, piping and three solar collectors will be approximately $1,900, $300 installation included.

A conventional 40-gallon water heater, in comparison, would cost $135 for a five-year unit; and $165 for a 10-year unit, Purnell said. Installation fees would be about $35, he said.

However, Purnell said, annual utility costs to operate a Solarcraft would be $110, compared to $253 for a conventional unit.

Getting firewood like picking wine

If your fireplace is a new addition to your family, you'll need to know where you can get good firewood, what to buy and what safety measures you should follow.

A 35-cent booklet, "Firewood for Your Fireplace," published by the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, offers helpful suggestions:

You can get firewood from dumps and landfills. Sometimes as much as 30 per cent of the debris in some town and city dumps consists of reusable wood fibers, including the logs, limbs and tops of trees toppled by storms.

FIREWOOD ALSO is available at places such as sawmills and lumber companies.

If you have to buy logs for your fireplace, you'll find they're sold in different lengths and thicknesses. What you buy depends, of course, on the size of your fireplace and how long you want to take to get your fire going. Most wood won't burn if it's freshly cut, so purchase wood that is reasonably dry, or "seasoned." The surest way of having dry wood is to purchase it several months before you'll use it.

Choosing the kind of wood for your fireplace can be as individualistic as choosing a wine or cheese. Each kind of wood can give you something different in aroma or heat value.

Softwoods like pine, spruce and fir, will catch fire easily and will burn rapidly with a hot flame. Since a fire made entirely of softwoods will burn out quickly, it requires frequent attention and replenishment. This is the kind of wood to use if you want a quick warming fire or a short fire that will burn out before you go to bed or before you step out for the evening.

FOR A LONG-LASTING fire it's best to use the hardwoods such as ash, beech, birch, maple and oak. These burn less vigorously than softwoods and with a shorter flame. Oak gives the most uniform and shortest flames and will give you steady, glowing coals.

If it's aroma you're looking for, you'll want the woods of fruit trees, such as apple and cherry, and nut trees such as beech, hickory and pecan.

By mixing softwoods with hardwoods, you can achieve an easily-lit and long-lasting fire. Later, for fragrance, add some fruit or nut woods.

Before you light the fire, make sure the room is well ventilated, the damper open, and the flue unobstructed. Poor ventilation will cause the fire to smoke. Avoid burning wet or green wood. And always place screen in front of your grate to catch any sparks that fly.

"FIREWOOD for Your Fireplace" is available by sending 35 cents to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 130E, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

The booklet is one of more than 200 federal consumer publications listed in the autumn edition of the Consumer Information Catalog, published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the General Services Administration.

Free copies are available by writing the center.

5 new models open at Brook Hill

The developers of Brook Hill, a single-family residential community in the Lancer Park subdivision, Schaumburg, are offering five new models ranging in base price from $66,200 to $81,900.

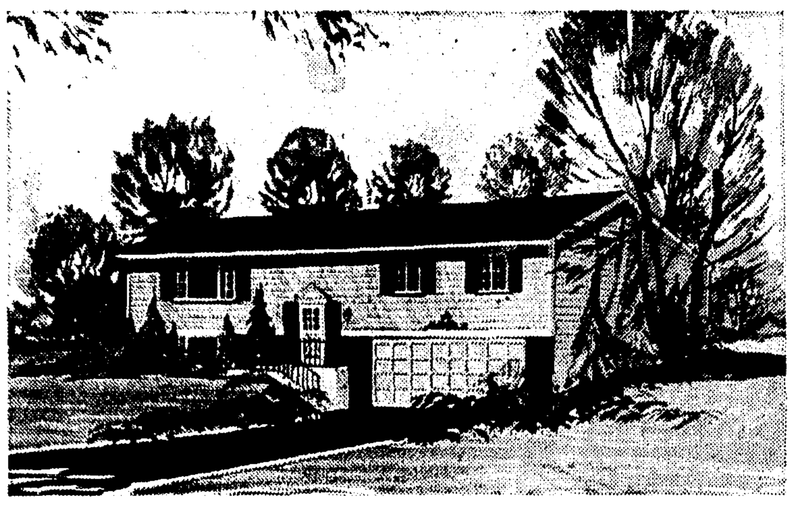

The Brookhill development, a Lancer Corp. community, is located on Roselle Road three miles south of Higgins Road.

Homes being offered are the "Crestwood," a 3-bedroom split-level house with a base price of $66,200; the "Barrett," a 3-bedroom all-brick ranch, $65,500; the "Brookehill," a 3-bedroom split level with attached two-car garage, $74,700; the "Williamsburg," a two-story or 4-bedroom colonial with attached garage, priced from $79,400; and the "Hampshire," a two-story early colonial with three or four bedrooms and attached 2-car garage, priced from $81,900.

Prices are subject to change.

All models include a kitchen range with continuous cleaning oven and vented exhaust hood; wood kitchen cabinets and vanities; a choice of shag, plush or sculptured carpeting; aluminum storm windows and screens; aluminum gutters and downspouts; and graded and seeded lots.

Models are open seven days a week from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. The model office telephone number is 894-6079.

Silverwoods development offers $2,000 savings

Silverwoods, a new single-family home development near Crystal Lake, is offering a preview savings of $2,000 on its homesites.

Andrew Building Corp., developers, are building Silverwoods, a community to contain between 50 and 100 homes, on Ill. Rte. 31 one-half mile north of Northwest Highway.

Initial construction will include three homes:

Poplar II will be a 2,500-square-foot raised ranch with three bedrooms, two full baths, a dining room, country kitchen, living room, family room and a 2½-car attached garage. It is priced from $59,900.

THE SYCAMORE III will be a three-bedroom tri-level with a large master suite, two baths, living room, dining room, family room, basement and 2½-car attached garage. Prices begin at $59,900.

The Luarel I will be a three-bedroom ranch with a single bath, combination living/dining room and a California kitchen. Prices begin at $47,900.

The developers eventually will build Poplar I, similar to the Poplar II but with 50 fewer square feet and one bath, priced from $57,900; and the Sycamore II, a 1,460-square-foot tri-level with three bedrooms, a kitchen, combination living/dining room and one bath, priced from $47,900.

All prices are subject to change.

Options include central air conditioning, wood-burning fireplaces, extra baths and smoke detectors.

Telephone for the models office is (815).455-3740.

Flower favorites steady

Tastes may change in other areas, but the types of flowers Americans like to grow has remained the same since 1946, says landscape horticulturist William C. Welch of the Texas Agricultural Extention Service. Welch said seed packet sales indicate that petunias, zinnias and marigolds are the three most popular varieties. However, their ranking within the top three has fluctuated during those 29 years.

Living retrenches in that old favorite—the kitchen

DESIGN NO. 1034. House type: Three bedroom, 1½ bath, full basement, attached garage, one-story colonial.

This typical Colonial Farm Type home of modest proportions devotes a large amount of its interior space to the kitchen area, similar to its old predecessors. The kitchen again is becoming important to family living, and more space is being devoted to it.

For a good many years now, the shrunken and so-called "efficiency kitchen" excluded everyone but the woman of the house. No one liked it, but put up with the situation. Now, with increased affluence, this room, more than any other, has come into its own again.

The difference in today's kitchens over older types is one of step-saving efficiency. The advent of the "one piece" kitchen has done away with the haphazard location of sinks, pieces of cabinets, stoves and so on. Today, there is a food preparation center and a family area for eating and get-togethers.

Jean-Paul Saint-Michel

Home of your own

Connected to the kitchen is a 19-foot porch with double doors for access. Because of its privacy and size, this porch is a wonderful spot for summer family living, eating and guest entertaining.

The service entrance at the rear has a well-located lavatory, a direct stair to the basement, a laundry area and a space to sort out the wash and do ironing.

There are three bedrooms serviced by a large bathroom designed for dual use — it can be a hall bath, or a master private bathroom by securing one of two doors. The lavatory also can be used from the bedrooms.

It will be noted that particular attention has been given to closet space in all three rooms, and a coat closet has been conveniently located in the entrance foyer. A good deal of attention has been given to traffic circulation, which is first class throughout.

The front porch is 30 feet long, another feature adapted from homes of the past. It provides good weather protection for the front entrance and is only a few steps from the two-car garage.

Exterior materials are: fire-retardent wood roof shingles, narrow horizontal siding with vertical corner boards, flush boards on the garage face and wood double hung windows.

Elm tree owners advised to branch out, get 2nd tree

If you have an American elm on your property you seriously should consider planting another tree nearby against the possibility that you may lose your existing tree.

Since the Dutch Elm disease was discovered in the United States in 1930 it has ravaged native elms in large areas in the eastern part of this country. Despite extensive research during the last 47 years there is still no effective means of controlling this disease. From time to time treatments are devised that seem to hold some promise but ultimately prove to be of no value.

George Creed

It's your landscape

Though the fungus of an infected elm may be transferred to a nearby healthy elm by natural root grafts the greatest distribution of the disease is by way of bark beetles, the European and the larger native Elm Bark beetle.

Formerly these were controlled to some extent by DDT sprays. Since the use of this chemical is no longer permitted the only effective means of preventing the spread of the disease lies in the removal and burning of infected trees.

The hope is that before the magnificent American elm is wiped out by disease, as were the American chestnut trees, a positive cure for the Dutch Elm disease will be discovered.

As a hedge against the chances that this will not happen in the near future, a tree planted near your elm will insure that should it fall prey to disease your elm will have a well established tree to take its place.

The upper sketch shows a large American elm with a smaller tree near it. The lower plan illustrates the relationship between the two trees.

In locating a spot for a substitute tree (not another elm) try to keep it as close to your elm as is reasonable. Even so, bear in mind that your new tree should be allowed enough space in which to grow into a well-formed and healthy specimen.

Can you use sawdust as a mulch?

Yes, particularly if it is coarse in texture. Before spreading it fertilize well with a high nitrogen content fertilizer.

Will Kentucky bluegrass grow in a shady spot?

Not too well. The fescue grasses will do much better.

Well done stain adds to any room

You can add beauty to your home with staining, without straining your back or budget. A wide range of new earth-inspired stain colors is now available for exterior and interior wood surfaces, and applying them is almost as easy as applying a coat of paint.

Before you begin staining, it is wise to gather the tools needed to do the right job. These include paint brushes, tack rags, drop cloth or staining cloths for use in wiping interior semi-transparent stains.

If you are using an oil-base stain, it should be applied with a natural bristle brush. For latex stains, use a synthetic or polyester bristle brush.

THE MOST important decision a homeowner has to make is in choosing the proper color and stain effect desired — one that brings out the grain character of wood and enhances its color or one that disguises unappealing grain pattern and plays up the texture of wood.

Once you have chosen the color and type of finish, it is always a good idea to test the stain on the individual wood type to which it will be applied. All woods take stain differently and pretesting provides an added guarantee. If possible, take a sample of the wood to your local paint dealer so he can pretest the effect of the color and finish you have chosen before making a final decision.

Obviously, exterior stains are formulated to provide color retention for wood surfaces and long-wearing protection from the harmful effects of sunlight and weather. Interior stains are primarily decorative. So, if wear is indicated, such as with foot traffic on interior wood plank flooring or with greasy marks that come with children's fingerprints on paneling, then a final coat of a clear satin varnish is recommended.

Whether you choose a solid, semi-transparent or an interior wiping stain, today there is tremendous color latitude in wood stains to use in creating durable and decorative effects for siding, paneling, plank floors, exposed beams, sundecks and furniture.

Maybe folks were a little skeptical about taking stock in America 200 years ago.

We were young. At war. With no experience.

And who knew if we'd ever pay back the money?

Well, 200 years have passed. And the U.S. government has always paid in full. To the penny.

Now that's not a bad record.

In fact, you might say we're now a pretty well-established outfit to do business with.

So join the Payroll Savings Plan and save with today's Bicentennial issue of Series E Savings Bonds. It's easy. It's automatic.

And it's safe. After 200 years, you know we're here to stay.

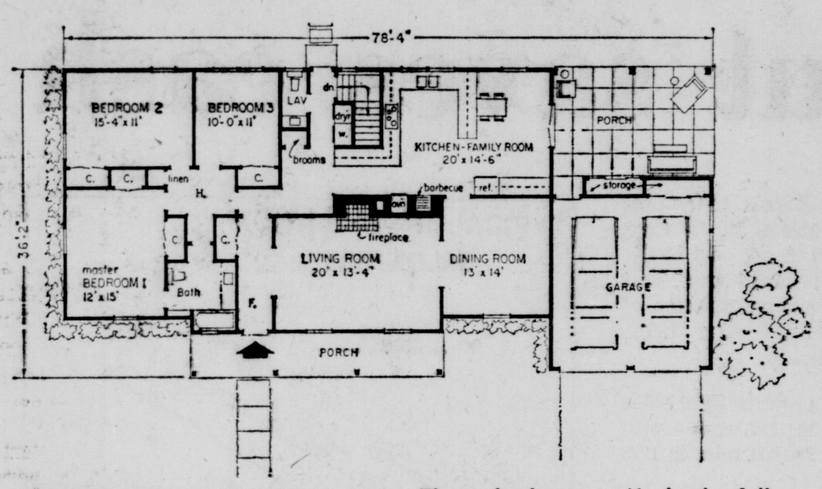

Now E Bonds pay 6% interest when held to maturity of 5 years (4% the first year). Lost, stolen or destroyed Bonds can be replaced if records are provided. When needed, Bonds can be cashed at your bank. Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.

Home of your own

This typical Colonial Farm Type home of modest proportions devotes a large amount of its interior space to the kitchen area, similar to its old predecessors. The kitchen again is becoming important to family living, and more space is being devoted to it.

For a good many years now, the shrunken and so-called "efficiency kitchen" excluded everyone but the woman of the house. No one liked it, but put up with the situation. Now, with increased affluence, this room, more than any other, has come into its own again.

The difference in today's kitchens over older types is one of step-saving efficiency. The advent of the "one piece" kitchen has done away with the haphazard location of sinks, pieces of cabinets, stoves and so on. Today, there is a food preparation center and a family area for eating and get-togethers.

Connected to the kitchen is a 19-foot porch with double doors for access. Because of its privacy and size, this porch is a wonderful spot for summer family living, eating and guest entertaining.

The service entrance at the rear has a well-located lavatory, a direct stair to the basement, a laundry area and a space to sort out the wash and do ironing.

There are three bedrooms serviced by a large bathroom designed for dual use — it can be a hall bath, or a master private bathroom by securing one of two doors. The lavatory also can be used from the bedrooms.

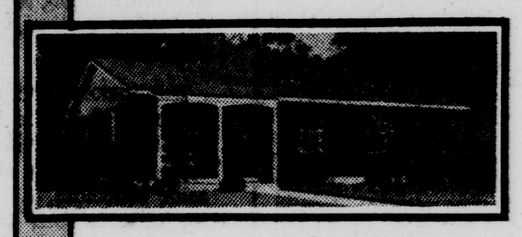

It will be noted that particular attention has been given to closet space in all three rooms, and a coat closet has been conveniently located in the entrance foyer. A good deal of attention has been given to traffic circulation, which is first class throughout.

The front porch is 30 feet long, another feature adapted from homes of the past. It provides good weather protection for the front entrance and is only a few steps from the two-car garage.

Exterior materials are: fire-retardent wood roof shingles, narrow horizontal siding with vertical corner boards, flush boards on the garage face and wood double hung windows.

Elm tree owners advised to branch out, get 2nd tree

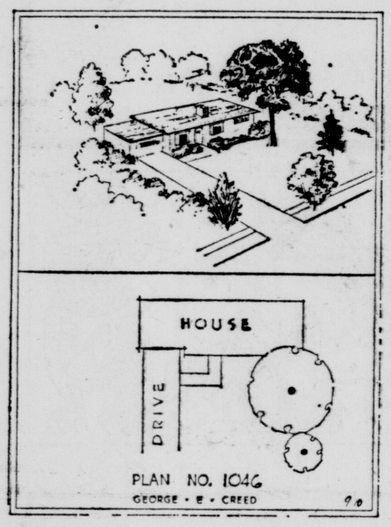

George Creed

It's your landscape

If you have an American elm on your property you seriously should consider planting another tree nearby against the possibliity that you may lose your existing tree.

Since the Dutch Elm disease was discovered in the United States in 1930 it has ravaged native elms in large areas in the eastern part of this country. Despite extensive research during the last 47 years there is still no effective means of controlling this disease. From time to time treatments are devised that seem to hold some promise but ultimately prove to be of no value.

Though the fungus of an infected elm may be transferred to a nearby healthy elm by natural root grafts the greatest distribution of the disease is by way of bark beetles, the European and the larger native Elm Bark beetle.

Formerly these were controlled to some extent by DDT sprays. Since the use of this chemical is no longer permitted the only effective means of preventing the spread of the disease lies in the removal and burning of infected trees.

The hope is that before the magnificent American elm is wiped out by disease, as were the American chestnut trees, a positive cure for the Dutch Elm disease will be discovered.

As a hedge against the chances that this will not happen in the near future, a tree planted near your elm will insure that should it fall prey to disease your elm will have a well established tree to take its place.

The upper sketch shows a large American elm with a smaller tree near it. The lower plan illustrates the relationship between the two trees.

In locating a spot for a substitute tree (not another elm) try to keep it as close to your elm as is reasonable. Even so, bear in mind that your new tree should be allowed enough space in which to grow into a well-formed and healthy specimen.

Can you use sawdust as a mulch?

Yes, particularly if it is coarse in texture. Before spreading it fertilize well with a high nitrogen content fertilizer.

Will Kentucky bluegrass grow in a shady spot?

Not too well. The fescue grasses will do much better.

Booklets available at cost: To receive any one of the following, write me in care of The Daily Herald, P.O. box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope and requested amount of money. The prices are: "Ornamental Shrubs," 20 cents in coin: "Deciduous Trees For the Small Home," 20 cents in coin; "Making a Lawn," 20 cents in coin; "Coniferous Evergreens," 10 cents in coin; "Pruning Trees, Shrubs and Evergreens," 10 cents in coin.

To receive all five, enclose a long, self-addressed envelope with 24 cents in stamps and 80 cents in coin.

Well done stain adds to any room

You can add beauty to your home with staining, without straining your back or budget. A wide range of new earth-inspired stain colors is now available for exterior and interior wood surfaces, and applying them is almost as easy as applying a coat of paint.

Before you begin staining, it is wise to gather the tools needed to do the right job. These include paint brushes, tack rags, drop cloth or staining cloths for use in wiping interior semi-transparent stains.

If you are using an oil-base stain, it should be applied with a natural bristle brush. For latex stains, use a synthetic or polyester bristle brush.

THE MOST important decision a homeowner has to make is in choosing the proper color and stain effect desired — one that brings out the grain character of wood and enhances its color or one that disguises unappealing grain pattern and plays up the texture of wood.

Once you have chosen the color and type of finish, it is always a good idea to test the stain on the individual wood type to which it will be applied. All woods take stain differently and pretesting provides an added guarantee. If possible, take a sample of the wood to your local paint dealer so he can pretest the effect of the color and finish you have chosen before making a final decision.

Obviously, exterior stains are formulated to provide color retention for wood surfaces and long-wearing protection from the harmful effects of sunlight and weather. Interior stains are primarily decorative. So, if wear is indicated, such as with foot traffic on interior wood plank flooring or with greasy marks that come with children's fingerprints on paneling, then a final coat of a clear satin varnish is recommended.

Whether you choose a solid, semi-transparent or an interior wiping stain, today there is tremendous color latitude in wood stains to use in creating durable and decorative effects for siding, paneling, plank floors, exposed beams, sundecks and furniture.

Wildflowers are delightful, de-loverly plant ideas

Mary B. Good

Potting shed

Why be like everybody else and plant tulips and daffodils this fall?

Would't you rather see woodland orchids, the rare and protected giant white trillium and other woodland gems (that you respectably have purchased, not filched) coming up next year.

I got the impetus to plant wildflowers in a quirk of events this spring.

The job of obtaining a judge for our local art show unceremoniously was dumped on me. "Why not try to get a real superstar artist to do the job of judging?" was my suggestion.

Our group couldn't underwrite the cost of the judge's trip to northern Wisconsin and we would offer only an honorarium to keep a judge in camel's hair brushes for a few weeks. Everybody laughed at me. "Why don't you try to get Salvadore Dali? We're sure he'd jump at the officer," they snickered.

NOT TO BE PUT down, I began writing letters to biggies — all they could say was "no."

Soon after, I received a long distance call from one of my hot prospects. She is a celebrated wildflower artist who is working on a long-range, half-million dollar wildflower art project.

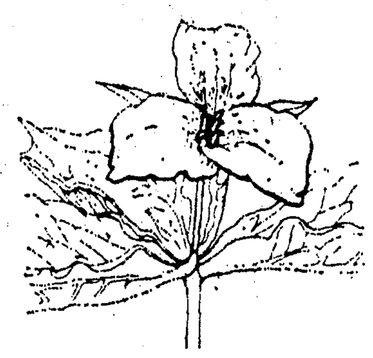

She said she was scouting for the habitat of the white ladyslipper orchid (Cypripedium reginae), which she could paint in setu, and if we had the flower in bloom in northern Wisconsin she'd come and judge the art show.

I told her orchids were so plentiful, we had to kick them out of the driveway just to park our cars — a slight exaggeration.

Sixteen tick-infested swampy bogs, 10 amateur, prowling naturalists, a dedicated botanist and a mosquito-bitten woodland orchid specialist later, I had to tell Mrs. famous artist we had 28 kinds of woodland orchids, but not the one she was searching. She'd have to go to Minnesota, where the white ladyslipper is the state flower.

But being a good sport, she came to judge our show anyway — which was a smash hit. We had some good stuff, even from an artist from California — the wife of former movie star Dennis Morgan, who has a summer place in the Northwoods.

I decided after my boo-boo to plant a bunch of white, yellow and pink ladyslippers, and other gems, so that if our judge ever returns, these goodies will indeed grow in my backyard, in a setting as close to natural habitat as I can create.

Sources: Ferndale Nursery, Box 218, Askow, Minn., 55704, and Wayside Gardens, Hodges, S.C. 29695, carry the white ladyslipper orchid. Island Gardens 28542 Chatham, Grosse Ile, Mich. 48138, carries several varieties of ladyslippers and six of trillium (purple, snow, painted, red toad, rose and yellow).

Van Bourgondien Brothers, Box A, Babylon, N.Y. 11702, carries giant white, yellow, purple and painted trillium, as well as the yellow and pink ladyslipper orchids. Besides white trillium, New England Rootstock Assn., Christian Hill, Great Barrington, Mass. 01230, has jack-in-the-pulpit, dutchmen's breeches, wild calla, bloodroot, spring beauty.

Orchid Gardens (The Clair Phillips) Splithand Lake, Route, Grand Rapids, Minn. 55744, has many uncommon and hard-to-find varieties of wildflowers such as twinflower, white baneberry, creeping snowberry, blazing star, purple cinquefoil,woodland ferns and orchids, and its catalog gives complete culture for ladyslippers.

MARIE SPERKA, a Midwest authority on wildflowers, of Woodland Acres Nursery, Rte. 2, Crivitz, Wis., is another good source. Her book, "Growing Wildflowers," deserves to be in the library of any gardener of wildflowers.

Wildflower bulbs should be planted in the fall to allow for a proper period of dormancy. They need a peaty, leafmoldy medium in which to grow — a woodsy area — moist and shady, under the protection of trees. If you have such a woodsy spot on your land, you're in business.

Think about wildflowers for fall planting. Their breathtaking splendor will bring nature's rare beauty into the garden setting for you to enjoy for years to come.

Brick tiling gives fabulous fake look

Fakery may be a "no, no" in the art world, but in home furnishing, as in fashion, it's O.K. to use a great pretender.

Wonderful new materials often initiate with fakery as their reason for existence. Formica is one case in point.

In its early stages of use, Formica imitated marble, wood and sometimes fabric. While the wood-look patterns are still popular, Formica seems at its best when it is specified in pure, saturated colors. After all, the thing we like about the plastic laminates is their ability to take a beating and still come out smiling and unscarred!

FAKE BRICKS certainly have their place, although working masonry craftsmen may prefer us to use the real thing. In the kitchen illustrated today, a new GAF product has been utilized in partnership with real wood cabinets and honest to goodness wood beams.

For budget reasons, the designers chose Gafstar brick pattern wall ties. They have a stain-resistant surface that's a bonus around food and splashing water. With their self-adhesive backing and a supply of special latex grout, a reasonably adept person should be able to press-on toward a bright new kitchen.

The grout is used between tiles and keeps the rhythm going of those traditional white dividing lines. A quick wipe-off picks up any excess grout that might slop over in the first run-through.

THE TILES come in white as well as red, which seems a special feature. The white tile often looks less hokey, sort of like painted brick, whereas the red coloring of clay is hard to duplicate in a fake. Both colorings are certainly acceptable in these easy-care offerings.

One important tip in this kind of self-help project: Develop a system for keeping the horizontal lines level. Carpenters sometimes use white string as their leveling device, tacking the ends at a certain distance from the floor about a yard apart. Floors and cabinets are often slightly out of alignment, so it's important to measure and plan a straight line.

Note, in today's photograph, how the doorway has been completely wrapped with the tiles instead of ending on the kitchen side. Then a short run of wood, similar to a split beam, has been added to cap the door opening. The finished space with white counter and wood-grain flooring, has a nice "together" look.

(c) 1977, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

A BIT OF FOOLERY: Gafstar brick-patterned wall tiles, joined by latex grout, give the impression of the real thing. Designed for do-it-yourselfing, they could embellish a living room wall to wall as well as a splashy kitchen.

Women can learn self-defense

The National Organization for Women will sponsor a free women's self-defense demonstration Monday at 8 p.m. in the Glenview Public Library.

The demonstration will be given by Chimera, a women's organization dedicated to teaching effective self-defense procedures anyone can learn and use.

The demonstration is open to the public.

K of C annual dinner dance Oct. 8

Bishop Raymond Hillinger General Assembly, Knights of Columbus, will sponsor a dinner dance Oct. 8 at the Arlington Park Hilton Hotel, Arlington Heights. Knights of Columbus from the Northwest suburbs and their friends are welcome.

A top sirloin of beef dinner, plus cocktails and dancing to the music of Al Marterie and his band make up the annual event.

Reservations can be made, at $17.50 per person, with John Busch of Palatine, 359-1717, or Forrest Hinchliffe, Park Ridge, 823-0176.

The grout is used between tiles and keeps the rhythm going of those traditional white dividing lines. A quick wipe-off picks up any excess grout that might slop over in the first run-through.

THE TILES come in white as well as red, which seems a special feature. The white tile often looks less hokey, sort of like painted brick, whereas the red coloring of clay is hard to duplicate in a fake. Both colorings are certainly acceptable in these easy-care offerings.

One important tip in this kind of self-help project: Develop a system for keeping the horizontal lines level. Carpenters sometimes use white string as their leveling device, tacking the ends at a certain distance from the floor about a yard apart. Floors and cabinets are often slightly out of alignment, so it's important to measure and plan a straight line.

Note, in today's photograph, how the doorway has been completely wrapped with the tiles instead of ending on the kitchen side. Then a short run of wood, similar to a split beam, has been added to cap the door opening. The finished space with white counter and wood-grain flooring, has a nice "together" look.

A BIT OF FOOLERY: Gafstar brick-patterned wall tiles, joined by latex grout, give the impression of the real thing. Designed for do-it-yourselfing, they could embellish a living room wall to wall as well as a splashy kitchen.

Women can learn self-defense

The National Organization for Women will sponsor a free women's self-defense demonstration Monday at 8 p.m. in the Glenview Public Library.

The demonstration will be given by Chimera, a women's organization dedicated to teaching effective self-defense procedures anyone can learn and use.

The demonstration is open to the public.

K of C annual dinner dance Oct. 8

Bishop Raymond Hillinger General Assembly, Knights of Columbus, will sponsor a dinner dance Oct. 8 at the Arlington Park Hilton Hotel, Arlington Heights. Knights of Columbus from the Northwest suburbs and their friends are welcome.

A top sirloin of beef dinner, plus cocktails and dancing to the music of Al Marterie and his band make up the annual event.

Reservations can be made, at $17.50 per person, with John Busch of Palatine, 359-1717, or Forrest Hinchliffe, Park Ridge, 823-0176.

The doctor says

Salve helps to treat serious skin ailment

I would be thankful if you could write something about the salve, 5-Fluorouracil. I was told by a dermatologist that I have actinic keratosis and she prescribed this salve to heal it. I heard that this is a very powerful drug and am uneasy and worried about using it. I would have to put it all over my face. Could you give me your opinion?

It is a well recognized and effective treatment for actinic keratosis, those little gray or brownish scaly spots that develop on the skin. These changes in the skin are the result of damage from solar radiation. Some people are more susceptible to the sun's damaging rays than others.

It is important to treat these spots as some of them can become skin cancer and require more drastic treatment. I might add that skin cancer, other than malignant melanoma, can usually be completely cured. If you don't treat it early though the treatment may increase any disfigurement that might be caused by removing the malignant area.

The salve you mention is a prescription item so readers needn't expect to go to the drug store and buy it for home use. It is a powerful salve and one must be instructed in its use. It is important to not get it in the eyes.

It will cause areas of the skin that have already undergone changes that you can't see with the naked eye to turn red, and eventually scale off. Completely normal skin tissue will not be affected by the salve. In this way it literally identifies areas that have been damaged or undergone changes compared to healthy skin.

Because the face is exposed so much more to the sun than the body it is frequently the main location for solar keratosis. The backs of the hands are also often involved.

You can help prevent these changes in the skin by protecting the skin properly from the sun. People who do not care for their skin properly are more apt to have an "old skin" earlier in life. The suntan ritual is a frequent factor as is cigaret smoking.

The effects of skin damage may not show up for years afterward. Young people want a nice tan but when age 40 rolls around they want to look 25. The two are not compatible.

It is important to realize that the sun affects the skin all year round. People with exceptionally fair skin should use protection all year, in winter as well as summer. You can use one of the chemical screening agents as a simple lotion each morning before being exposed to the sun.

Because of the volume of mail Dr. Lamb cannot answer your letters personally, but he will answer representative letters of general interest in his column. Write him in care of The Daily Herald, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Old refrigerators now costly antiques

Collector's Item: People who still have an old-fashioned refrigerator, one of those with latched doors and compartments, may own a little treasure without knowing it. They're quite a fad among antique buffs now, who are scouring rural areas where they're still often in use. Some passersby offered a large sum to a family I know for theirs, which they had placed on a porch to have hauled away! I saw one recently at the home of some friends. It had been totally refinished and is now a showpiece as a cabinet in their dining room.

Dear Roberta: Because a close friend had good luck at using that fizzy denture cleaner to clean various items, I bought some and put tablets in stained plastic coffee mugs. I let it work overnight. Sheer magic! They're like new, and they taste fresh, too. — Mary P. Hascall.

I've no stained mugs, but I thank you for the idea. I've a lot of plant cuttings rooting in clear glasses and jars. They'd all become covered with green slime. I transferred the plants and dropped one of those blue tablets into each grubby glass. How simple and painless to get jars gleaming again. They were ready for use within a half hour. I'm grateful to you!

Tips For Young Mothers: If I had it to do over again, I would've chosen a low platform bed — a mattress over a wool block — when it was time to switch my youngest from a crib to a regular bed. Since he always was a restless sleeper, I should've expected lots of middle-of-the-night falls. Falling from a lower bed would've produced fewer bruises. Some of these platforms have storage drawers. As pieces of furniture, they're also handsome.

Safety Tip: Sit down periodically with the whole family and calmly discuss what everyone should do in the event of fire. Fire extinguishers, wall-mounted near the top of each staircase, can put out small fires, provided everyone knows how to use them. Do have smoke sensors installed at recommended places. These are alerts — and fantastic sound-makers. But as the fire department advises, everyone should know what to do and what alternative routes for escape are possible, should a major home fire ever occur. They strongly advise rehearsals of such departures. I firmly agree. Such preparation would give you the time to explain coolly, discussing what each must do. It would reduce the possibility of panic in an emergency, which itself often leads to dire results.

Mr. and Mrs. James L. Rateike

Catherine Ann Liotta— James L. Rateike

Mint green, apricot and blue were accent colors for the wedding of Catherine Ann Liotta of Rolling Meadows and James L. Rateike of Arlington Heights.

The Aug. 21 ceremony took place at 5 p.m. in St. Peter Lutheran Church, Arlington Heights, with the maid of honor, Kathleen Reynolds of Schaumburg, in mint green and bridesmaids Sandra Nawrot, the groom's cousin from Friendship, Wis., in blue and Audrey Kowall, his sister from Elk Grove Village in apricot.

Catherine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Liotta, wore white knit jersey with a lace and pearl motif at the neckline and a shoulder-length veil held by a pearl-encrusted cap.

Her attendants' gowns were of knit jersey and their bouquets of tinted daisies to match their ensembles.

The bridegroom is the son of the Leonard Rateikes. His brother Donald served him as best man and James Liotta, the bride's brother, and Robert Kowall, the groom's brother-in-law, were his groomsmen.

A buffet reception followed at Old Orchard Country Club. After a two-week camping trip in Wisconsin, the newlyweds are living in Elk Grove Village. Catherine works at Americana Health Care Center, Arlington Heights, and her husband for Institutional Equipment and Interiors in Elmhurst. She graudated from Fremd High School and attended Trinity College, Deerfield. He graduated from Arlington High and Allied Tech, Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald L. Graf

Tammy Caple—Donald Graf

Now at home in Mount Prospect are recent newlyweds, Tammy Marie Caple and Donald Leon Graf. Their wedding took place Aug. 20 in St. Hubert Church, Hoffman Estates, with a reception following at Arlington Heights Legion Hall.

Tammy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Caple of Hoffman Estates. Since graduating from Hoffman High, she works locally at Franks Nursery. Donald is the son of Mrs. Betty Grisham of Mount Prospect and is with Central City Tuckpointing, Melrose Park.

Michele Caple, the bride's sister, served as maid of honor for the 2:30 p.m. ceremony and Bill Furth of Chicago as best man. Bridesmaids included another sister of the bride, Barbara, along with Sue McCarthy and Gina Cassale, Hoffman Estates, and Nance Wagner, Arlington Heights.

All the bridal attendants wore beige, peach and brown striped polyester gowns, with peach roses and wheat bouquets and matching flowers in their hair.

Tammy's gown was of white nylon organza with Alencon lace appliques and her headpiece a lace cap, holding an elbow-length veil in place. White and peach mums and baby's breath were in her bouquet.

Larry's other attendants were Larry Youngs, Schaumburg, James Clark, Elgin; Steven See, Hoffman Estates, Mark Goheen, the groom's cousin from St. Paul, Minn.; and the bride's brothers, Dave and Mark Caple.

Weddings

Beverly Gliege— Larry Cleair

Reciting marriage vows they had written themselves, Beverly Gliege and Larry Cleair became man and wife Aug. 6 at 4:30 p.m. in Faith Lutheran Church, Arlington Heights. A dinner in the church hall followed.

Beverly is the daughter of the Edward Glieges of Palatine, and Larry's parents are the Lloyd Cleairs of Atkinson, Ill.

Patti Erwin, Morton, Ill., served as matron of honor and Beverly's sisters, Evelyn and Shirley, as bridesmaids. Larry's twin brother Jerry was his best man, with Bob Doetsch, Minneapolis, and Denny Christian, Lombard, as groomsmen.

After a two-week honeymoon out West, the bridal pair are making their home in Chicago. The bride, a graduate of Prospect High and Illinois State University, is completing her final year at Illinois College of Optometry. Larry graduated from Northern Illinois University and is a math teacher and cross country coach at Fenwick High in Oak Park.

Alda stars in gripping death row drama

"Kill Me If You Can" is a powerful and gripping dramatization of the true story of what goes on inside a man's heart and head when he's on death row. It is also a story of how the judicial system doesn't always work.

"Kill Me If You Can" is about Caryl Chessman, a convicted kidnaper and infamous "red light bandit" who fought valiantly for 12 years to avoid the gas chamber and whose eventual execution was bathed in conflicting support and controversy from all parts of the world.

"M*A*S*H" star Alan Alda plays the lead role in the original two-hour NBC movie that airs at 8 p.m. Sunday on Channel 5. It is Alda's first dramatic role since "The Glass House" of five years ago, one of the peaks in the actor's distinguished career on stage and in films.

SENSITIVE TO THE delicate issue of capital punishment, Alda masters the complex dimensions of both the Chessman case and character.

The truth of the matter, which Alda and the show's writers and producers strained to preserve, will shock and dismay viewers no matter what side of the fence they're on in the question of capital punishment.

"We tried simply to be factual in this movie," said Alda, who said he read books authored by Chessman while he was in prison, newspaper and magazine accounts of his trial and struggle on death row, and comments from those who were closest to him in an attempt to accurately portray Chessman.

"We tried not to take a position on whether or not capital punishment is right," he said. "The facts are dramatic and shocking enough to make a case, but we leave it up to the viewers."

ONE OF THE PERSONS to whom Alda talked when preparing for the role was the executioner at California State Prison in San Quentin. Chessman was the last man executed in the state before capital punishment was repealed nationally.

"I was fascinated. I had never talked with a person before who had killed 100 persons. He seemed like a decent person and was very casual about it. When I asked him how he felt about having executed so many people, he asked me how I felt about having him do it for me and everyone else in this country," Alda said. "He felt he was just doing his job and carrying out the public will."

That kind of spine-chilling irony runs throughout the special drama. Chessman is one of the few men ever given the death sentence despite the fact that no murder was involved in his conviction.

Uncertainties persist about the handling of his trial, about the fairness expressed by the judge toward Chessman representing himself in court, about the judge's bias in the case and about the mishandling of the trial record and transcript.

CAROL BURNETT AND DICK VAN DYKE

In addition, a maverick woman attorney, played by Talia Shire, joins forces with Chessman in a battle with the judicial system for appeal, for review and for reconsideration of the facts.

AFTER ENDLESS appeals, eight stays of execution and several premature walks to the gas chamber, Chessman finally is executed. The real-life drama's excitement peaks each time Chessman prepares for death.

It isn't often that television viewers witness a staged execution, and it's a blessing commercial television hasn't stopped to covering the real thing.

"I had to go on written and verbal descriptions that came from the 12 live witnesses, required by law, who actually saw Chessman executed," Alda said. "I wanted to be accurate about it without overdramatizing it. But, an execution is one of those powerful things that it doesn't need to be overdone."

The warden and the executioner each patted Chessman on the back as they strap him into the gas chamber chair and wish him good luck.

One tells Chessman in the film to take deep breaths when he begins to hear the gas pellets drop into the acid because "it will go easier that way."

The executioner, before sealing the door to the chamber, asks Chessman if he is alright and if he can get him anything.

"I WAS STUNNED TO discover that these were the actual words said to Chessman before he was executed. They just seem to be the kind of expressions of concern that people say when they don't know what to say, as absurd as they sound," Alda said.

With the recent reinstitution of the death penalty in Illinois and other states, "Kill Me If You Can" couldn't be more timely.

The wry wit of Chessman captured so artistically by Alda, drives every point home.

TV NOTES:

• NBC plans to produce at least eight hours of drama tracing the history of the Navajo Indians from the 1860s to the present through several fictional families in "The Yazzies." The "Roots" styled ancestral drama was researched for five years by producer David Sondag and will be filmed on location in Window Rock, Arizona.

• Mary Tyler Moore has signed to do another series for CBS that will start next fall. No storyline or characters have been decided on yet. Ms. Moore currently is working with choreographer Gower Champion on a forthcoming CBS musical special.

• NBC censors simply goofed when they allowed a particular segment of the "Gong Show" to air Tuesday. In the context of the amateur talent show, which probably represents television at its very worst, two women in skimpy dress presented a 60-second performance consisting of licking and nibbling popsicles. WMAQ, Channel 5, was one of the many stations across the country barraged with telephone calls from angry viewers who found the scene "suggestive" and "obscene." "It was a mistake in judgment and we regret having aired it," said one NBC official. "We are normally careful about the show's content, but this incident will demand that we hold a very tight rein on the 'Gong Show' from now on."

Quinlan ordeal dramatized

TV tells Karen's story

Karen Ann Quinlan slid into a coma on April 15, 1975, in a matter of weeks sank into a "persistent vegetative state" and in her unconscious agony passed into the legal history of the United States.

Karen's doctors after many months finally convinced her family that her case was hopeless — that even if the 21 year old girl were to wake from coma, which was highly improbable, brain damage was so severe that she could never function as a human being.

The Quinlans, devout Roman Catholics who had the backing of their church, asked that she be taken off the respirator that apparently was keeping her alive and returned to a "natural state" to live or die by God's will.

When the doctors — who apparently had encouraged the Quinlans in their request — and the hospital administration, which claimed legal difficulties, refused to honor the Quinlan's request, the family went to court.

That is the story that NBC's "In The Matter of Karen Ann Quinlan" tells Monday at 8 p.m. on Channel 5 with Brian Keith turning in a moving performance as the girl's father, Joe Quinlan, and Piper Laurie at times absolutely stunning in her impact as quiet, controlled Julie, Karen's mother.

DAVID HUFFMAN plays the Quinlan's young attorney, Paul Armstrong, and actually resembles the reql Armstrong. Biff McQuire plays the family's supportive priest, Father Tom; David Spielberg returns to the medical profession, switching from the comedy of "The Practice" in which he played Danny Thomas' son to the tragedy of one of Karen's doctors. It is an enigmatic part, as far as motivation is concerned, and he handles it with sensitivity.

The names of both Karen's doctors have been changed in the drama, although almost all the other names were taken from life.

The camera often visits Karen's bedside at St. Clare's Hospital, but never does it show the girl, although her shrunken, tortured body is described. The Quinlan family all along has refused to allow any pictures of Karen.

In the book the Quinlans have written with newspaper columnist Phyllis Battelle ("Karen Ann: The Quinlans Tell Their Story," Doubleday), they make the point that they never corrected the "sleeping beauty" fairy tale sketches and descriptions that were printed about Karen in the more imaginative accounts. They were afraid they might then be asked to describe what Karen really did look like.

And Karen would have hated that.

THE SHOW gives the audience a feeling of what this family went through — and still is going through as Karen continues in her vegetative state. And it makes you wonder if you could bear as nobly.

Paul Armstrong, the young lawyer who quit his job with the Legal Aid Society in New Jersey to devote himself without pay to the Quinlan case and cause, said in an interview, "We all see ourselves in the Quinlans. Rarely are we challenged in our own lives in terms like that. They refurbish our faith in our fellow humans. We all have it in us when confronted with terrible problems."

The Quinlans, he explained, have set up a Karen Ann Quinlan Foundation, administered by the Catholic Diocese of Paterson, N.J., to use — in Karen's name — any money forthcoming from the book and television film for the aid of the sick and dying.

Armstrong himself has returned to the graduate studies he dropped for the Quinlan case, only now they are fulltime instead of part-time, to give himself a breather to think out what direction his law career should follow.

WHAT DOES HE — and the Quinlans — think about the television movie? While he has no criticism of the film, and only praise for those who worked on it, Armstrong finds the film hard to evaluate.

"It is difficult for us to tell how good it is," Armstrong said. "We have been living with this problem and are too deeply involved. We must look to others for that ultimate judgment.

"For the Quinlans, the movie and the book were an act of sharing. I hope it shows what the family went through because that was their major purpose. The foundation to memorialize Karen was secondary, because none of us wanted to profit from all this."

Dolly Parton encourages jokes about hair, figure

by DICK KLEINER

The public seems to be almost as fascinated with Dolly Parton's hair and her figure as they are with her voice. And, even though Dolly is primarily a singer, that's all right with her.

That's because, to Dolly, the idea of being a star — a big and famous and bright and shiny star — is the important thing. And everything else, like her wigs and her bosomy silhouette, helps contribute to that image.

So she goes along with the gags about her hair and her bust and as a matter of fact, encourages them. They help the publicity and the publicity helps the stardom, so, in her mind, they are good things.

DOLLY, PROBABLY the top country and western gal singer today, is never seen without a wig of some sort. They run the gamut from simple to ridiculous, from plain little things to towering temples of tresses.

"I started wearing them because they're so handy. I do my own hair all the same, but it's so easy just to stick a wig on when I want to go out. Then it got to be a publicity gimmick — at least, I'm not going to be overlooked in a crowd.

She likes to make the wig business into a little private joke. She says that, as a kid, she dreamed of being a big wig in show business — "and I made it."

THE STRANGE PART about it is that it's true. She did dream of being a star and it was a strange dream for her to have, because at the time, she didn't know what a star was. In fact, she hardly knew what a performer was.

Home, for Dolly, was a tobacco farm in the Smoky Mountains of eastern Tennessee. Lee Parton had a family of 12 children and Dolly was the fourth down from the top.

Somehow, Dolly Parton began singing. Her mother's family was, she says, musically inclined, so that's where it probably began. At five, the little tow-headed girl started singing — and the strange thing was that the songs she sang were songs she made up herself.

"I had a gift of rhyme," she says. "I'd listen to the conversations the grown-ups was having and I'd make up songs about them. I got a guitar when I was six and a half and kept on making up songs. I've about wrote myself to death since then."

At 10, she first sang on the radio and made her first record. At 18, she went off the Nashville to follow her dream.

She never faltered in her pursuit of that dream. And it turned out to be fairly easy. There were some early struggles, but not many, not long, not severe. She thinks that her early religious training helped her succeed.

"I OWE A LOT to my religious background," she says. "My folks were always positive people and they made me positive, too. I never think negative thoughts. I'm a really happy person. I've had my problems, but nothing I couldn't get out of."

She still writes most of the songs she records for RCA. She says 99 per cent of the songs she sings are her own. She never studied music, but the melodies and the words come to her, and she sings them into a tape recorder and somebody transcribes them and a song is born.

Success, in country music, is a big thing. A lot of money comes to Dolly Parton as the result of her recordings, her appearances, her TV work.

She's able to indulge all those childhood fantasies. At her home, she has all the animals she ever dreamed of having — cows, ducks, peacocks, cats, dogs, whatever. In fact, the entire dream has come true, and it's all beautiful, with one exception.

"My only major problem," Dolly says, "is my throat. It's bothered me some the last few years. I've been under a doctor's care for four years. I think it must be some kind of allergy to something. I think maybe it's the humidity in Tennessee."

AN ODD (OR EVEN) GAME

This game is for two players. One chooses to be Odd. The other is Even. Cut 18 squares of cardboard from an old cereal box. Write the number 1 on two squares. Continue, making two squares of each number through 9. Put all the squares in a paper bag. Shake to mix.

Each player pulls out one square without looking. Add the numbers on the squares. If they add up to an odd number, the Odd player gets both squares. If they add up to an even number, the Even player gets them. The winner is the player to get all the squares (or has the most when they stop playing).

Star explodes: it's a matter called the nova

Andy sends the respected two-volume World Book Dictionary to Anne Jacobson, 13, of Waterford, Wis., for her question:

WHAT IS A NOVA?

People once believed that a nova was a newly created star. This isn't the case.

A nova is a star that suddenly explodes and throws part of its own matter out into space. As the nova explodes, there would be a growing brightness followed by a fading and a return to its original brightness.

All novae — that's the plural of a nova — occur on distant stars and can only be observed through powerful telescopes. The word nova comes from the Latin word for new.

Some novae develop so quickly that they reach their greatest brightness within a few hours or a day. Fading generally starts almost immediately and the original brightness is back within several months. Some, however, may take a month to reach their full brightness and several years to fade.

About two novae each year are observed by astronomers in our Milky Way galaxy, but it is more likely that between 25 and 40 occur. Most go unnoticed since they happen on stars so far away from earth. Novae in one of the Milky Way's neighboring galaxies, astronomers believe, occur at about the same rate as novae in the Milky Way.

A star that explodes much more violently than a nova and shines more brightly for a longer period of time is called a supernova. As much as 10 per cent of a star's matter can be thrown off during a supernova explosion. Brightness may increase as much as a billion times within a few days. Astronomers believe that perhaps 14 supernova explosions have happened in the Milky Way during the past 2,000 years. The Crab nebula is the remains of a supernova seen in 1054 A.D.

Some novae have flared up more than once since they were first observed by astronomers. These are called recurrent novae and are believed to explode regularly. Most flare up so rarely, however, that recurrence has not been noticed.

Astronomers do not know what causes novae.

This isn't anything for any of us to worry about, but some astronomers believe that our own sun may some day be involved in a nova explosion. But this won't happen for at least 5 billion years from now. If it does, the outer regions of the sun may expand about 40 million miles — to about the distance of Mercury. The earth's temperature will then become too high for life to exist, but probably by that time the entire population of the earth will have moved by rocket ships to a distant, safe planet.

Andy sends the 1977 World Book Science year Annual to Ajay Agarwala, 9, of Kendall Park, N.J., for his question:

WHAT IS DANDRUFF?

Flakes of dry skin from the scalp are called dandruff. Mixed with the flakes of skin is grease from the oil glands of the scalp.

A certain amount of scaling of the skin from the scalp is normal. Control can be established by setting a regular routine of properly washing, brushing and occasionally oiling the scalp and hair.

A condition called seborrheic dermatitis is actually a disease in which there is an excessive supply of sebum, the oily secretion from glands of the skin. The result is a greasy scaling of the skin's surface.

Dandruff also can be found on parts of the body other than the head, such as the chest or under the armpits.

Send your question on a post card to Ask Andy in care of The Daily Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006, making sure to include your name, age and address. Entries are open to boys and girls 7 to 17.

Win at bridge

Only one play for 3 NT

Here is a hand to try out on your friends, but if you do try it out, don't laugh at those who miss the correct line of play. It is the sort of hand that looks so automatic that almost anyone from the best player in the world to the worst player in the world will land in the soup.

South wins the spade lead and will attack clubs right away. If he goes after diamonds he will wind up with just three diamonds, three spades and two hearts.

Therefore, he has to lead a club at trick two and here is where the right club must be led. South must lead the queen of clubs.

If clubs are going to break 2-2 or 3-1 it doesn't matter which club South leads. If West has all, it doesn't make any difference, but there is East with all four. If South leads a low club East takes his ace right away and plays a second spade. Now South won't be able to run clubs and won't have time to establish diamonds.

If South leads the queen of clubs and East takes his ace, South wins the return, ducks a club next and scores four clubs, three spades and two hearts. If East ducks, South goes right after diamonds.

AN ODD (OR EVEN) GAME

This game is for two players. One chooses to be Odd. The other is Even. Cut 18 squares of cardboard from an old cereal box. Write the number 1 on two squares. Continue, making two squares of each number through 9. Put all the squares in a paper bag. Shake to mix.

Each player pulls out one square without looking. Add the numbers on the squares. If they add up to an odd number, the Odd player gets both squares. If they add up to an even number, the Even player gets them. The winner is the player to get all the squares (or has the most when they stop playing).

Star explodes: it's a matter called the nova

Andy sends the respected two-volume World Book Dictionary to Anne Jacobson, 13, of Waterford, Wis., for her question:

Editor's note . . .

I've often wondered how a radio team works. How they trade comments back and forth, hour after hour, without jumping in on each other's words or winding up with embarrassing pauses when neither has anything to say.

Bob and Betty Sanders, who broadcast four hours a day, five days a week on WBBM radio, have no problem filling their airtime. They chat with the casual ease of two people who know each other well and genuinely like each other. Such is the case with the Sanders -- a husband and wife team with a large and loyal following. Page 5.

If you've read and enjoyed Edgar Lee Masters' "Spoon River Anthology" you'll feel as though you've been to the quiet valley nestled in Western Illinois. Spoon River Valley does exist and right now it's preparing for its annual fall festival — an event that takes the visitor back to the days of homemade apple-butter, spinning and quilting. Page 10.

Editor's note . . .

I've often wondered how a radio team works. How they trade comments back and forth, hour after hour, without jumping in on each other's words or winding up with embarrassing pauses when neither has anything to say.

Bob and Betty Sanders, who broadcast four hours a day, five days a week on WBBM radio, have no problem filling their airtime. They chat with the casual ease of two people who know each other well and genuinely like each other. Such is the case with the Sanders -- a husband and wife team with a large and loyal following. Page 5.

If you've read and enjoyed Edgar Lee Masters' "Spoon River Anthology" you'll feel as though you've been to the quiet valley nestled in Western Illinois. Spoon River Valley does exist and right now it's preparing for its annual fall festival — an event that takes the visitor back to the days of homemade apple-butter, spinning and quilting. Page 10.

Saving the shoreline

Lake Michigan's vulnerable lakeshore is under constant attack from man and the elements and each year a bit of the battle is lost.

Story by Lynn Asinof
Photos by Dom Najolia

It has tides and currents like the ocean and is so large you can't see the opposite shore. Three hundred miles long and 120 miles wide, Lake Michigan is a giant.

There is a salty flavor to the stories of old shipwrecks and Lake Michigan shipping ports. Few who visit the area can resist the comparison between Lake Michigan and the Atlantic. The only difference, they say, is the salt air at the ocean.

Illinois can claim only 60 miles of the 1,600 miles of Lake Michigan shoreline. That short distance, however, opens the state to a whole world of shipping and boating, not to mention water supply, recreation and industry.

Most people in the Chicago area know about the beaches and the boating, but few have bothered to learn more of the character of the lake. That is one reason for the Landmarks Preservation Council's new shoreline tour, offered every Saturday through Nov. 12.

Developed as part of the state's coastal zone management program, the tour provides answers to many of the mysteries of Lake Michigan.

The tour offers talk of alewives and coho, erosion and beaches, early settlement and even the great mansions built along the lakefront.

But the message is more serious. The lakeshore uses compete with each other and without adequate planning important parts of the lakefront may be lost. The Landmarks Preservation Council wants people to know that the lakeshore is a vulnerable part of the landscape, and thinks the best way is to show them.

"We are trying to get as many people as possible to listen to us talk about it," tour guide Don Greenway said, noting that without care there will be "irreversible damage" to the lakefront.

On the 2½-hour bus tour it is hard to miss the sheer power of the lake front. Scenic piers are explained as beach protection devices and interesting boulders along the lake are seen as erosion protection.

The entire lakeshore seems to be girded against the waves and currents, but each year a bit more of the battle is lost.

Greenway talks of man's inability to control the lake. There are the luxury high-rise apartments that were built in the 1960s just south of Winnetka when lake levels were low. In those days there were about 200 feet of beach in front of the apartments.

"Now the first floor floods," Greenway said, noting that lake levels have risen three or four feet. "The beach has disappeared."

Other things have disappeared on the lakefront, including the town of St. John, which used to be located just south of what is now Fort Sheridan.

"There was a town out there when all the shipping was going on," said tour guide Mary Marfise. "It's just not there anymore because they couldn't protect it. It's now about 50 yards into the lake."

The most serious erosion problems are in the bluff area, located on the Lake County lakefront. In Lake Bluff for example, the shoreline is retreating about two feet each year with 267 feet lost since 1872.

"The only reason that we see it as a problem is that people live there," Greenway said of the bluff erosion.

To help people on the tour understand the forces of erosion, Greenway uses a small model to simulate wave action on a shoreline. But a look at the actual shoreline tells the story better.

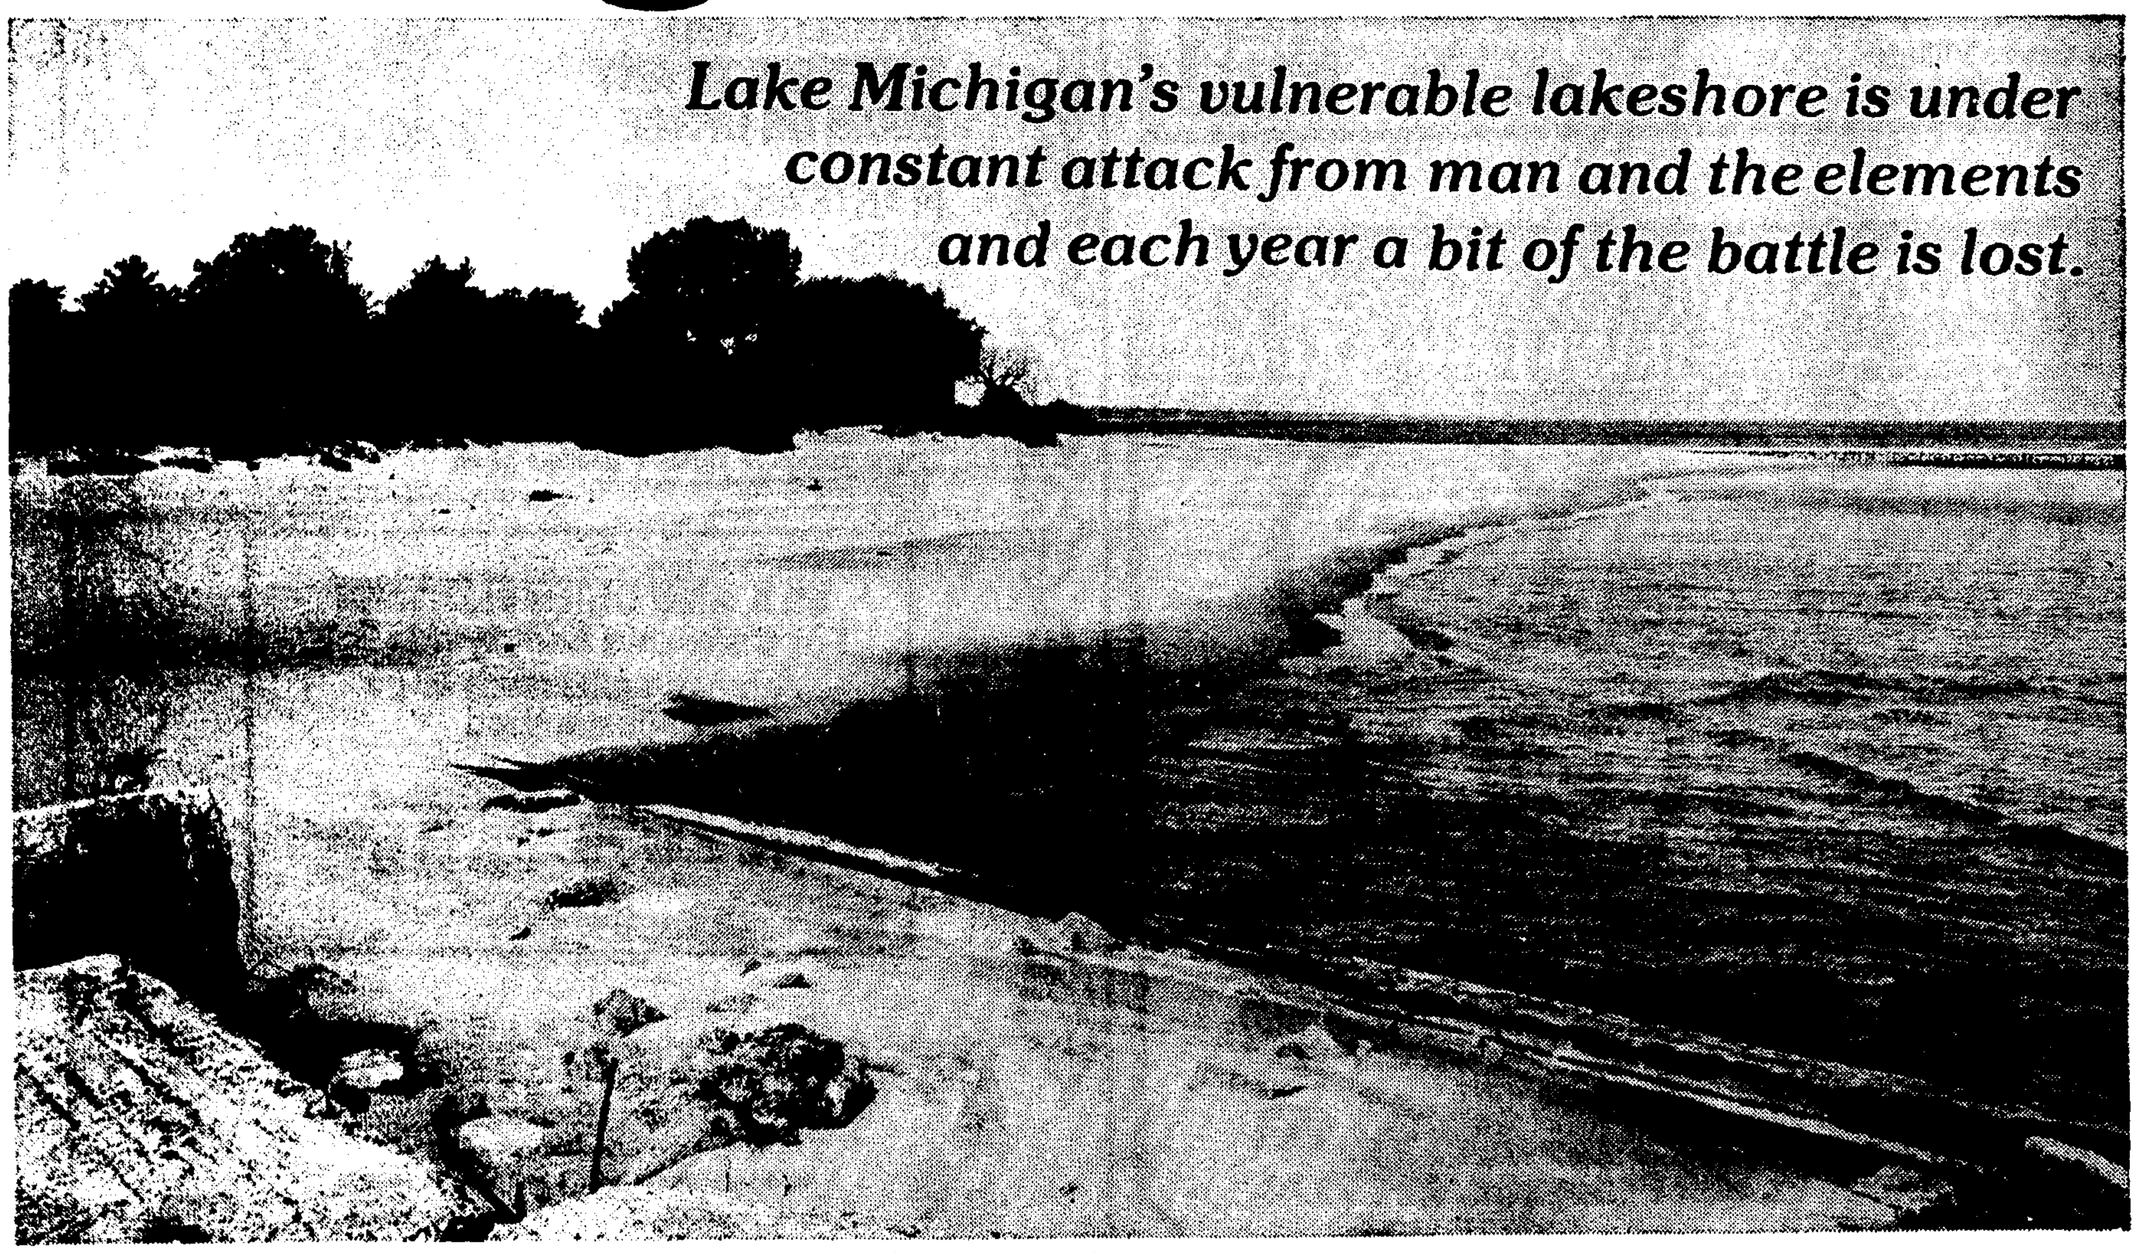

The tour starts at Gilson Park in Wilmette which borders Wilmette Harbor. The harbor is one of only two recreational harbors located north of Chicago, and it is very overcrowded.

There are long waits for boat slips at all the harbors, and the state estimates that 1,800 slips and 900 moorings will be needed to satisfy the demand by 1980.

Developed as a shipping port, Wilmette served as a refuge to people fleeing Chicago even in its early days. Many came to Wilmette at the time of the Fort Dearborn Massacre and it became a haven for those trying to escape the cholera epidemic in the 1800s.

Grosse Pointe Lighthouse

Wilmette Harbor is one of only two harbors north of Chicago.

The tour's next stop is the Grosse Pointe Lighthouse, built in 1873 during Chicago's peak years as a commercial shipping port. Now used as a park, the lighthouse and the keepers quarters are open on weekends for visitors.

Next door to the lighthouse is the Clark house, built in 1926 and described as one of the last great houses built on the North Shore. Now used as the Evanston Art Center, the house cost $500,000 when built and is styled after Tudor architecture.

Also on the tour is the Dawes House, built in 1894 in the style of a French chateau. With twenty-eight rooms, seven baths and a ballroom, the building was designed to have a sweeping lawn set back from the shoreline. It is now a park and home of the Evanston Historical Society.

A visit to Northwestern University's 164-acre landfill in Evanston provides a good look at the way Chicago's lakeshore developed. Originally swamp, most of the lake front has been filled, turned into parks and preserved for public use.

The Northwestern landfill, built in the 1960s, is the newest of the landfill projects. There have been some problems as the fill compacts, causing cracks in buildings and roadways.

"The whole fill has had some trouble," Marfise said. "It is still compacting. It will take about ten more years for the land to settle."

Perhaps the most popular question on the lake tours has been about the alewives, the fish that are regularly washed up onto Lake Michigan beaches.

Originally a salt water fish, the alewives came down the St. Lawrence River following the lamprey eel. The migration started about 1820 with the completion of the Wellman Canal, but it took almost 100 years for the alewives to reach this area.

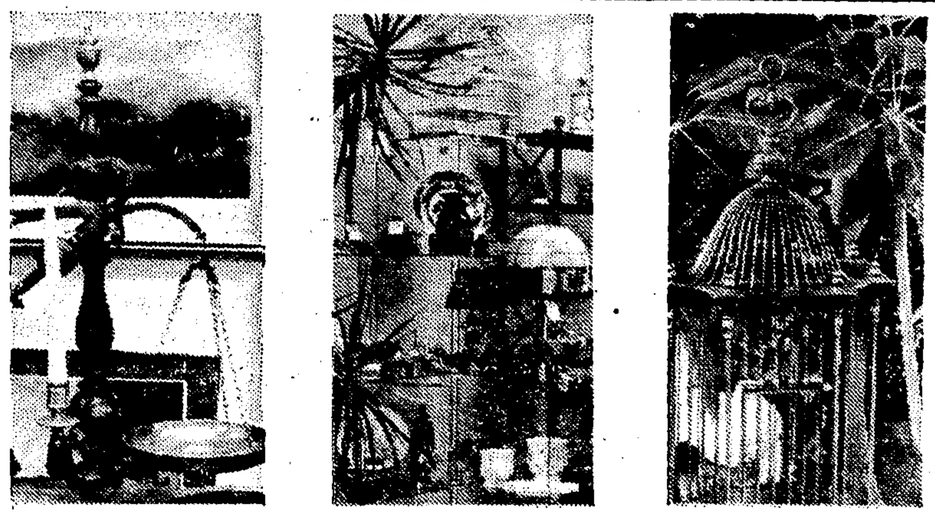

Everyone has heard at least one story about why the alewives die, but Marfise said the truth is they are killed by sudden temperature changes in the lake.

The tour guides don't have the answers to all questions, and they are the first to admit that they expect to make changes as the tour develops. One big change is that in the spring the tour may take to the water, exchanging the bus for a boat.

Until then, however, the tour will leave at 2 p.m. every Saturday through Nov. 12. Admission is $4 for adults and $2.50 for children under 12. Reservations and information are available by calling 922-1742.§

Property owners along the lakeshore have found it difficult to stop erosion.

They are just ordinary people with middle class interests and values — qualities that have brought them a loyal listening audience for their WBBM radio talk show.

BOB & BETTY SANDERS: thriving on togetherness

by Linda Punch

It's 1 p.m. on a rainy Tuesday and Bob and Betty Sanders are swinging into the final hour of their daily radio show. The quiet routine of the broadcast area is broken as guest Connie Stevens enters. Betty pulls out an instamatic camera and asks a bystander to snap a picture of the husband and wife team with the entertainer. The photographer takes the picture, apologizing for his clumsiness with the camera.

Typical Bob Sanders.

In the everchanging world of broadcast personalities, Bob and Betty Sanders have proved a durable quantity with their positive, wholesome, down-to-earth outlook on life. While other radio personalities make a splash by feeding on controversy, the Sanders have attracted an audience of more than 100,000 listeners by being a middle-aged couple with a wide-range of middle-class interests. They are, as Bob is quick to point out, "just what you hear on the radio."

"We don't have any kind of hangups, we're not into anything way out," said Betty. "We're just simple people. If you keep life less complicated, you're better off."

The Sanders' warm conversational tone belies the fact that they work out of a small, sparsely furnished studio on the fourth floor of the CBS building in Chicago. From 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. daily, Bob and Betty sit at a horseshoe shaped desk surrounded by microphones and a small wire machine. One wall is decorated with the skyline of Chicago while another is covered with broadcasting and public service awards.

The Sanders face the window to the control booth, where people often gather during interviews with celebrities. During commercial breaks, they frequently chat with the engineer and producer sitting in the booth.

The two have built a close relationship with their WBBM-radio audience and have developed a devoted following. It is an audience that stretches across all backgrounds from college student to housewife to businessman.

"We answer every piece of mail and all the phone calls personally. People feel as though they know us because we're invited into their homes. As a consequence we become a friend they want to talk and write to," she said.

In appearance, the Sanders are indistinguishable from many of the other middle-aged couples who are their neighbors in the Northwest suburbs. Bob, with his full but neatly trimmed graying hair, sports a mustache. His taste in clothes runs to three-piece gray, pin-stripe suits. Betty, who wears her dark brown hair fashionably short, dresses in beige blouse and navy blue skirt with matching jacket.

Their lifestyle, also is similar to their neighbors. Bob is a tennis buff, who takes every occasion to get on the court. Betty participates in physical fitness classes and church work. Both love the outdoors and talk with pride about the time they hiked around Lake Geneva in one day.

"We don't think of ourselves as different than anyone else," Betty said.

Despite their five and a half years on radio as a husband-wife team, the Sanders have not lost their fascination with people, celebrities or non-celebrities. And while they are not in awe of their guests, they still exhibit an intense interest in the famous and near famous that pass through the broadcast room.

Following a recent interview with Connie Stevens, Betty watches with amusement as the sexy blond plants a kiss on her slightly flustered husband. Betty falls back in her chair flinging her arms out as laughter breaks out among spectators in the adjoining control booth.

"She kissed him, she kissed him," Betty said with a laugh.

"Yeah, I always did have trouble with blondes," he said, trying to regain his composure.

Gentle, affectionate ribbing is a trademark of the Sanders in both their personal and public lives. But the teasing lacks the underlying hostility and cutting remarks of other teams, such as Sonny and Cher.

"If I thought it would embarrass him about Connie Stevens, I wouldn't have said anything," Betty said.

The Sanders' met in the 1950s while Betty was doing commercials for the Liberace

"We don't have any kind of hangups, we're not into anything way out," said Betty. "We're just simple people. If you keep life less complicated, you're better off."

The Sanders' warm conversational tone belies the fact that they work out of a small, sparsely furnished studio on the fourth floor of the CBS building in Chicago. From 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. daily, Bob and Betty sit at a horseshoe shaped desk surrounded by microphones and a small wire machine. One wall is decorated with the skyline of Chicago while another is covered with broadcasting and public service awards.

The Sanders face the window to the control booth, where people often gather during interviews with celebrities. During commercial breaks, they frequently chat with the engineer and producer sitting in the booth.

The two have built a close relationship with their WBBM-radio audience and have developed a devoted following. It is an audience that stretches across all backgrounds from college student to housewife to businessman.

"We answer every piece of mail and all the phone calls personally. People feel as though they know us because we're invited into their homes. As a consequence we become a friend they want to talk and write to," she said.

In appearance, the Sanders are indistinguishable from many of the other middle-aged couples who are their neighbors in the Northwest suburbs. Bob, with his full but neatly trimmed graying hair, sports a mustache. His taste in clothes runs to three-piece gray, pin-stripe suits. Betty, who wears her dark brown hair fashionably short, dresses in beige blouse and navy blue skirt with matching jacket.

Their lifestyle, also is similar to their neighbors. Bob is a tennis buff, who takes every occasion to get on the court. Betty participates in physical fitness classes and church work. Both love the outdoors and talk with pride about the time they hiked around Lake Geneva in one day.

"We don't think of ourselves as different than anyone else," Betty said.

Despite their five and a half years on radio as a husband-wife team, the Sanders have not lost their fascination with people, celebrities or non-celebrities. And while they are not in awe of their guests, they still exhibit an intense interest in the famous and near famous that pass through the broadcast room.

Following a recent interview with Connie Stevens, Betty watches with amusement as the sexy blond plants a kiss on her slightly flustered husband. Betty falls back in her chair flinging her arms out as laughter breaks out among spectators in the adjoining control booth.

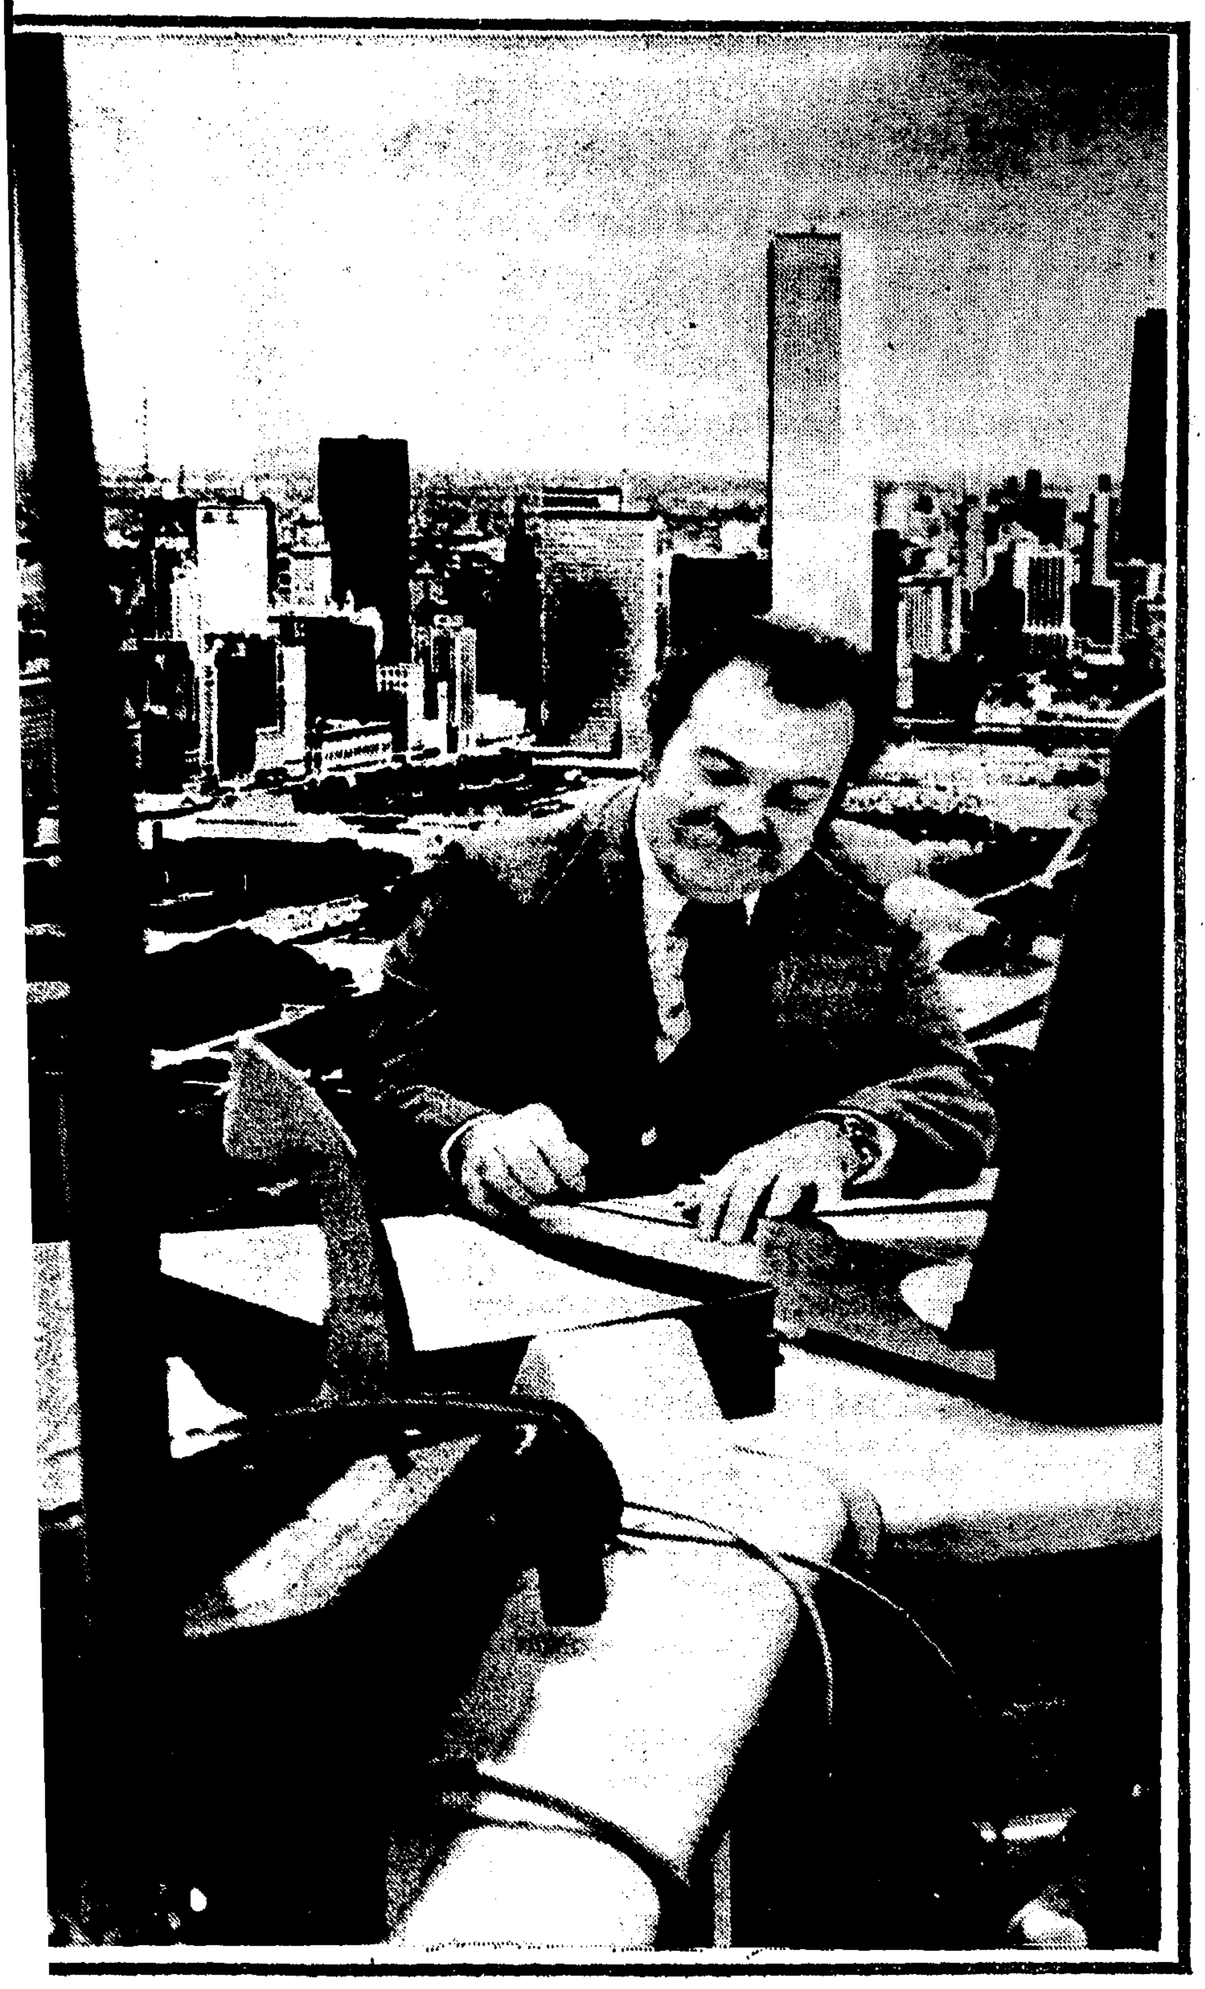

"She kissed him, she kissed him," Betty said with a laugh.

"Yeah, I always did have trouble with blondes," he said, trying to regain his composure.

Gentle, affectionate ribbing is a trademark of the Sanders in both their personal and public lives. But the teasing lacks the underlying hostility and cutting remarks of other teams, such as Sonny and Cher.

"If I thought it would embarrass him about Connie Stevens, I wouldn't have said anything," Betty said.

The Sanders' met in the 1950s while Betty was doing commercials for the Liberace show at a St. Louis station where Bob was a staff member. They began working as a husband and wife team in 1972, the first such radio duo in the country.

When the Sanders first began their program they occupied the slot from 9 a.m. to noon. The show included features on family care and cooking interspersed with the news of the day. As time passed, the two began conducting interview with celebrities and authorities in various fields.

"This show just kind of evolved," Betty said.

The show now includes interviews on a wide range of topics, news reports and the daily "Who's News" quiz.

Despite five and a half years of almost continuous companionship, the Sanders seem to truly enjoy each other. They often joke about the constant intimacy ("God, it's hard," said Bob.) but Betty explained the relationship works because "we decided we were going to do it and we do it."

"We talk alot. We're together so much, not only physically and mentally, but in small spaces like the studio, the car and the newsroom. If anything goes wrong we have to talk about it right away. If we let it smoulder, it gets all out of proportion," she said. "We were amazed to find out that the average couple talks to each other only 29 minutes a week. That's incredible. You've got to keep the line of communications open. It's just got to be that way."

Bob said the success of their radio relationship is based on the same factors as a good marriage.

"To have a successful marriage, you have to like as well as love someone. We have a good working relationship because we like each other. If we didn't, we couldn't be together as much as we are. We never run out of things to talk about," he said.

Their intimate knowledge of each other's interests also adds to their broadcasting success, Betty said.

"We know things about each other we wouldn't know if we weren't married. One of the people who interviewed us said we play to each other's strengths. That's really the truth. If I think Bob is weak in an area, I'm not going to rub his nose in it. We make the best come out in each other. When your dealing with a situation as intimate as this, you've got to be yourself."

The Sanders work as a precision team, with the two trading off chores during their four-hour show. During commercial breaks, Bob sets up the schedule for the next half hour while Betty checks the lastest weather report or thumbs through her notes. They rarely miss a beat as the conversation bounces back and forth between them.

The team, however, has encountered the awkward moments familiar to all participants in live broadcasting.

"We goof up all the time," Betty said. "Most of the time when we're talking for a prolonged period. We do our homework, but sometimes, we're caught off guard."

Bob recalls two incidents where "we got so interested in what the guest was saying, we forgot the next question.

"We had egg on our face but with live interviews you have to fumble through. You have to present a moving target, keep moving."

"I've learned some of the fanciest footwork," Betty added.

Over the years, the Sanders have interviewed a number of well-known personalities and movie stars, including actor Gregory Peck, comedienne Lucille Ball and comic Jack Carter. Yet, they are most often impressed with the non-celebrities.

"Celebrity guests are not necessarily the most interesting to the audience. Guests that tell how to do things provoke a great deal of interest — doctors, lawyers and clergymen," Betty said.

And the Sanders insist that all their guests be familiar with the subject they will be discussing.

"I get a little skittish when the guest wants to know what we're going to ask. Those are the ones I'm afraid of. I tell them just to know their subject," Bob said.

Betty adds that she is leery of any self-proclaimed expert who has no actual background in his field.

"I've made a rule. If somebody is going to talk on divorce then they must have taken part in a divorce. There are experts on childrearing who never had a child of their own. How can they tell me how to raise my child if they never had any? They haven't been through the situation and they don't know," she said.

Among their celebrity guests, Betty said that Gregory Peck was "one I was personally most impressed with.

"He's something special. He's more a presence and his total charisma. When he was in the station, not only women came to watch but the men, too. You can tell how interesting a person is by the number of people who collect at the windows to watch the interviews," she said.

Morris the Cat of cat food fame also was a big draw on the Sanders' show.

"Morris the Cat and his handler got the largest audience. Morris just walked around the room while we talked to his handler. He was just like a kid. When his handler was not on the air, Morris sat on his cage but when he knew the handler was at the microphone, he got off his box and started investigating. He walked around the room and sniffed and scratched a little," Betty said.

Actor Van Johnson also is remembered with affection by the Sanders.

"Van Johnson is a true character. He came into the studio while I was reading a live spot, came up behind me and put his hands over my eyes. I broke up," Betty said.

Mickey Rooney is another "character," Bob said, adding, "He wouldn't let us talk. You ask one question and he takes off."

While the Sanders' seem prepared to handle any guest, Betty admits to being "hesitant" about an interview with actor Richard Dreyfuss.

"I read one of the Chicago papers' interviews about how he was a horrible person. We already had booked him for the show but I was very hesitant to go through with the interview. He came in and he was pleasant and communicative. He had a bone to pick with some producer but he wasn't anything like the way he came across in the newspaper. Now, I make it a practice not to read anyone's impressions of people," she said.

The Sanders' take a very positive outlook on life and Betty feels that many people fail in their goals because they "are afraid of success."

"I believe people are much more afraid of success than failure. When you succeed at doing something, you're on another level. With each success you have to give up something and there are more demands. If you fail, nothing is expected of you," she said.

Bob adds that "you learn more from success than failures."

"From failure, you only learn what not to do. From success, you learn how to do things right," he said.

The Sanders have no long range plans, although Betty said they both share a deep interest in pyschology.

"We've always thought that if we started another profession, we might look into psychology because it's so fascinating. The things you see and do are interesting. It's a fascinating field," she said. "I like working with people. I'm more of a people person than I have an opportunity to be."

The Sanders are philosophical about the future of their radio program. "Everything runs its course," Bob said.

"Nothing lasts forever," Betty added. "We'll do other things. I have a few things in mind that I want to do when this is all over. Until that time, I just want to accomplish what I can."§

Chug down to Union, Ill.

Long before the automobile became a second home and jet airplanes began thundering through the clouds, the unchallenged king of American transportation was the all-powerful steam locomotive.

Chugging noisily through the 19th Century with great fanfare, the traditional iron horse of the Illinois prairie was at one time an almost mythical symbol for growth and prosperity. And within decades of the founding of such mud and stick villages as Chicago, the segmented tracks of American railroad enterprises were already linking Midwest communities with a vast network of steel and timber.

Railroad beds stretched across Illinois from the lead mines of Galena to the Lake Michigan shore; down through the hilly corridor of the Mississippi River Valley, through Peoria and Springfield, and all the way to Cairo and the Ohio River. By 1851, in fact, Illinois boasted almost 3,000 miles of tracks, more than any other western state.

If you've wondered where they all went — those monster steam locomotives, trolley cars and plush passenger wagons of the 1800s, look no further. Because you can view the world's largest display of railroad artifacts at the Railway Museum in Union, Ill.

Located an hour's drive east of Rockford off Route 20, the Railway Museum is a non-profit organization operated by volunteer railroad buffs who want to keep a tight grip on the colorful heritage of train, trolleys and those tempestuous locomotives which tamed the raw Illinois wilderness.

The museum calls itself the world's largest operated railway display and features over 140 steam engines, streetcars, inter-urban vehicles, elevated railway cars and trolley buses. In addition to an intriguing collection of antiques which visitors can view, there are also several operating pieces which afford a chance to actually step aboard and ride a relic from the past. The 46-acre outdoor museum also boasts a 1.5 mile demonstration railroad. Of thirteen authentic locomotives, some of which represent pieces from a dozen other states, visiting travelers can enjoy a jostling ride on four.

Museum president Jeff Brady quotes yearly attendance at around 60-70,000 and adds that the museum is constantly collecting new items from throughout the country. The museum's oldest train was built 87 years ago and once steamed its way across the arid desert flats of Nevada.

Visitors might want to stop at the 1851 depot building which has been converted into a gift shop. Fairs for train rides are $1 for adults and 50 cents for children.

If you feel like experiencing what it was like during the less refined days of 20th Century transportation, try riding the Burlington Zephyr steam engine, a 1923 trolley — or the old 1904 Chicago Red Rocket.

Free parking is available near the museum and the entrance fee is 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for children. Kids under six are free.

Schedules for all rides vary, with all displays open during the warm weather months. For a complete schedule, call: 815/923-2488, or write the Illinois Railways Museum, Box 431, Union, Ill. 60180.

Located in Union, and also a restored remnant from Illinois' past, is the Seven Acres Museum and Village. Visitors here can sample an old time doctor's office, tobacco shop, barber shop as well as free movies and one of the largest collections of old time phonographs in the world.

Don't Waste Fuel Dollars

First, some straight talk
Let's face it. It costs you more every year to heat or cool your home no matter what type of fuel you use. And chances are the cost will continue to rise. So, there's no better time than right now to insulate your home with Insulspray foam insulation.
Common sense will save you dollars.

Why Insulspray?
In most homes, more heat escapes through the walls than from anywhere else. New Insulspray foam insulation effectively reduces costly heat loss through walls as never before possible. In hot weather it works just as well to keep cool air in. Insulspray makes your home more comfortable to live in and much more economical to live with.

What is Insulspray?
Insulspray is a non-toxic, two-part insulation system made of liquid urea-formaldehyde resin plus a hardener containing a foaming agent.
The urea-formaldehyde and hardener are fed, under pressure, into a specifically designed mixing gun. The two components are ejected from the gun as a liquid foam consisting of millions of tiny air cells, highly effective in reducing heat loss in winter and heat intake in summer.

How is Insulspray installed?
Insulspray is installed from the outside, without mess, and usually in one day.
It is applied directly into the hollow stud space within the outer walls of your home. It flows up and down, around obstacles and fills every crack and crevice. Insulspray leaves no uninsulated pockets.
In a few days, the foam completely sets and forms a permanent insulating layer within the wall cavity.

What are the advantages?
First and foremost, Insulspray reduces costly heat loss through the walls of your home where it occurs most. It sets up a barrier to block the natural tendency of heat to flow from warm to cold surfaces of building materials. Consequently, your home stays warmer in winter, cooler in summer. And your fuel costs drop considerably.

Chicagoland Craft Festival in October

More than 100 booths and exhibits by national manufacturers of crafts and craft supply products will participate in the first Chicagoland Craft Festival, Oct. 7-9 at McCormick Place. The festival is open to the public and there will be no charge for admission, lecture demonstrations or craft workshops.

The Craft Festival is sponsored by Frank's Nursery Sales, Inc. with nine specialty craft and nursery shops in the greater Chicago area. No products will be sold at the festival.

The festival will feature make it and take it workshops. These will be small classroom situations providing basic instructions and demonstrations in various crafts. Participants will actually construct and assemble projects, which they may take home.

Hours will be from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Oct. 7 and 8, and from noon to 7 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 9.

Pheasant Run resort plans an Oktoberfest

Dick Themi and the Alpiners will fill the Hofbrauhaus with oom-pa-pa music featuring polkas and sing-alongs at the Oktoberfest Sept. 30 and Oct. 1 and 2 at Pheasant Run Resort in St. Charles. Appearing at the three day event will be a group of costumed shuplattler dancers and yodeler, Heidi Siewert entertaining on Friday and Saturday. Authentic German food, imported wine and beers will be available.

The Oktoberfest will be held in the New Orleans ballroom from 6 p.m. to midnight Friday and Saturday and from 3 to 7 p.m. Sunday. Admission is $2 for adults and $1 for children. On Sunday only, all children and senior citizens will be admitted free. There are no reservations. For information call 584-6300.

CANCER DETECTION
HEART ATTACK PREVENTION

A resting electrocardiogram is taken at the Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. to detect any heart abnormalities.

Of every six people who get cancer today, two will be saved and four will die. Of the four who would otherwise die, one might be saved with earlier diagnosis and prompt treatment. (According to American Cancer Society publication '76 Cancer Facts and Figures.)

The health examination services available at the Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection include all cancer detection procedures recommended by the American Cancer Society, Illinois Division.

Heart Disease accounts for nearly half of all deaths each year. Unlike most Cancer, Heart Attack can be postponed through reducing one's risk factors such as diet, exercise, blood pressure, smoking, etc. Dr. Morris Collen, a well-known specialist in preventive medicine, was quoted in the January, 1977 Issue of FORTUNE "if one has a checkup every year or two at age thirty-five and thereafter, directed at postponable diseases, the mortality rate from those diseases after seven years is approximately 50 percent of what it would have been without exams."

The Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. offers a preventive health screening examination designed for three purposes:

1. To establish a health profile for each individual to be used as a baseline for future care.
2. To analyze an individual's risk factors for heart disease and cancer and statistically forecast probable life expectancy and suggest ways it might actually be increased by reducing the risk factors found.
3. Screen for treatable disease. Early detection and prompt treatment increase the probability of a favorable outcome.

This meticulous 3 hour, low cost examination includes a computerized medical history, health risk analysis, physical examination, proctosigmoidoscopy, chest x-ray, electrocardiogram, blood pressure, over 30 chemical determinations on blood and urine, vision, audiometry, spirometry, glaucoma test, body measurements. Women also receive a pap smear and instruction in breast self-examination. Exercise stress test, 24 hour holter monitor, and echocardiography are available as options.

Give yourself the best protection available today against cancer and heart disease by calling your physician or the Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. located at 1000 Grand Canyon Parkway, Hoffman Estates, Illinois (Near Woodfield Mall.) Lecture on Frank Lloyd Wright architecture

As part of the expanding interest in Frank Lloyd Wright's architectural designs, noted architecture historian, writer and lecturer, Kathryn Smith of Los Angeles, will be guest speaker at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Veterans Room at the Lake Street Branch of the Oak Park Library, 834 Lake St., Oak Park. The program is sponsored by the continuing education program of The Frank Lloyd Wright Home and Studio Foundation.

Smith will speak on Wright's work in Los Angeles from 1918 to 1924 after his Oak Park period. The lecture will focus on the Barnsdall commission, the concrete block houses, and the work of his son, Lloyd Wright.

New Asian elephant arrives at Brookfield Zoo

A new elephant has arrived at Brookfield Zoo. The pachyderm, a 7-year-old, 4,500 pound Asian male, seven feet at the shoulder, was donated to the zoo by White Hen Pantry, Inc.

Brian Shrago, Evanston, submitted the winning entry in the White Hen Pantry's naming contest for the animal. The name he chose was "Pasha," a Turkish title of honor.

Gem, mineral, jewelry show at McCormick Place

Chicago will host its first International Gem, Mineral and Jewelry show Sept. 29 through Oct. 2 at McCormick Place.

More than 75 internationally-known dealers in quality gems, jewels, artifacts, minerals and fossils will create a multi-million dollar marketplace for persons interested in hand-crafted and natural objects of art.

The show will feature educational lectures, films, slides and rare museum pieces on loan from the Lizzadro and Field Museums, the Koster Site and the Smithsonian Institution, which has sent for exhibit a $250,000 20th Century Jadite vase.

Visitors also will be able to see a full range of working demonstrations by a variety of craftsmen in the gem, mineral and lapidary hobby and profession.

The show will be open from noon to 9 p.m. Sept. 29, from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Sept. 30 and Oct. 1 and from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Oct. 2. Admission is $3, children under 16 years old accompanied by a parent are admitted free.

Fall festival at Morton Arboretum

Morton Arboretum's annual fall festival open house will be held Sept. 30 and Oct. 1. Events will include a chili supper served from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Friday followed by an outdoor slide lecture about the arboretum by Walter Eickhorst in the visitors center. Cost of the meal is $3.75, no reservations are necessary.

Saturday a bird hike will leave from the visitors center at 7:30 a.m. Events planned from 1 to 5 p.m. include guided walks in the Prairie Restoration Project and tours on the 1937 open-air bus. Open to the public will be the Sterling Morton Library, the greenhouse, the Founder's Room and other facilities.

During the fall festival there will be no admission charge to the arboretum, located on Route 53, Lisle.

Chicagoland Craft Festival in October

More than 100 booths and exhibits by national manufacturers of crafts and craft supply products will participate in the first Chicagoland Craft Festival, Oct. 7-9 at McCormick Place. The festival is open to the public and there will be no charge for admission, lecture demonstrations or craft workshops.

The gentle Spoon River rolls over a dam near Bernadotte.

SPOON RIVER

The sleepy little valley does exist

For myself I know
I stirred certain vibrations in Spoon River
Which are my true epitaph, more lasting than stone.

Edgar Lee Masters

by Katherine Rodeghier

Until Masters penned his "Spoon River Anthology" in 1915, the world knew very little about this quiet little valley in Western Illinois.

But all was changed when Masters' anthology and its sequel "The New Spoon River" quickly gained acclaim in the literary world. Spoon River brought fame to Masters and Masters brought fame to the people of the Spoon River Valley. It was a type of fame that was not always appreciated.

Masters' books are collections of free verse epitaphs, supposedly written for inhabitants of the valley, Masters' boyhood home. Some of the tombstone verses were too candid for the tastes of Spoon River citizens who felt Masters' lightly veiled descriptions of well-known town personalities — the banker, the editor, the town drunk — struck too close to home.

Edith Bell

Miss Middleton opened her door a little
To get the secrets of people passing.
And Mrs. Kessler, the washer woman,
Read the cartouches on pillows and napkins
But I with receivers clamped to my ears,
In a back room over Trainor's
Drug Store
Learned all the secrets of Spoon
River
While plugging wires and snapping switches:
Who was happy, and who was wretched;
And who was in love, and who was out of it;
And who was to wed, or have a baby;
And who was meeting who in Chicago;
And who was kind and who was cruel;
And who was a friend, and who a foe;
And who was plotting, hiding, lying,
Making money, or losing the game.
And I say the commandment not to judge
Went out with the telephone!

Many of the townsfolks were enraged at Masters for exposing their secrets, and letting family skeletons out of their closets.

Two or three generations have come and gone since Masters' first poems brought scandal to Spoon River but the valley has changed little. It is still quiet, peaceful and isolated and if one takes the time to talk to some of the residents he will find that some of Masters' characters are still around.

The vibrations caused by the poet are felt today in the valley. Thanks to Masters, Spoon River has become a familiar place — even to those who have never laid eyes upon it. People come from the four corners of the continent to find out if that sleepy little valley really does exist.

It does. You can see it for yourself on a 65-mile self-conducted tour of the valley that has been mapped out by a local organization called the Spoon River Scenic Drive Associates. Anyone can drive, hike or bike along the tour at any time of the year but fall is an especially beautiful time when the leaves are beginning to show their autumn colors and the valley is settling down for a long winter's nap.

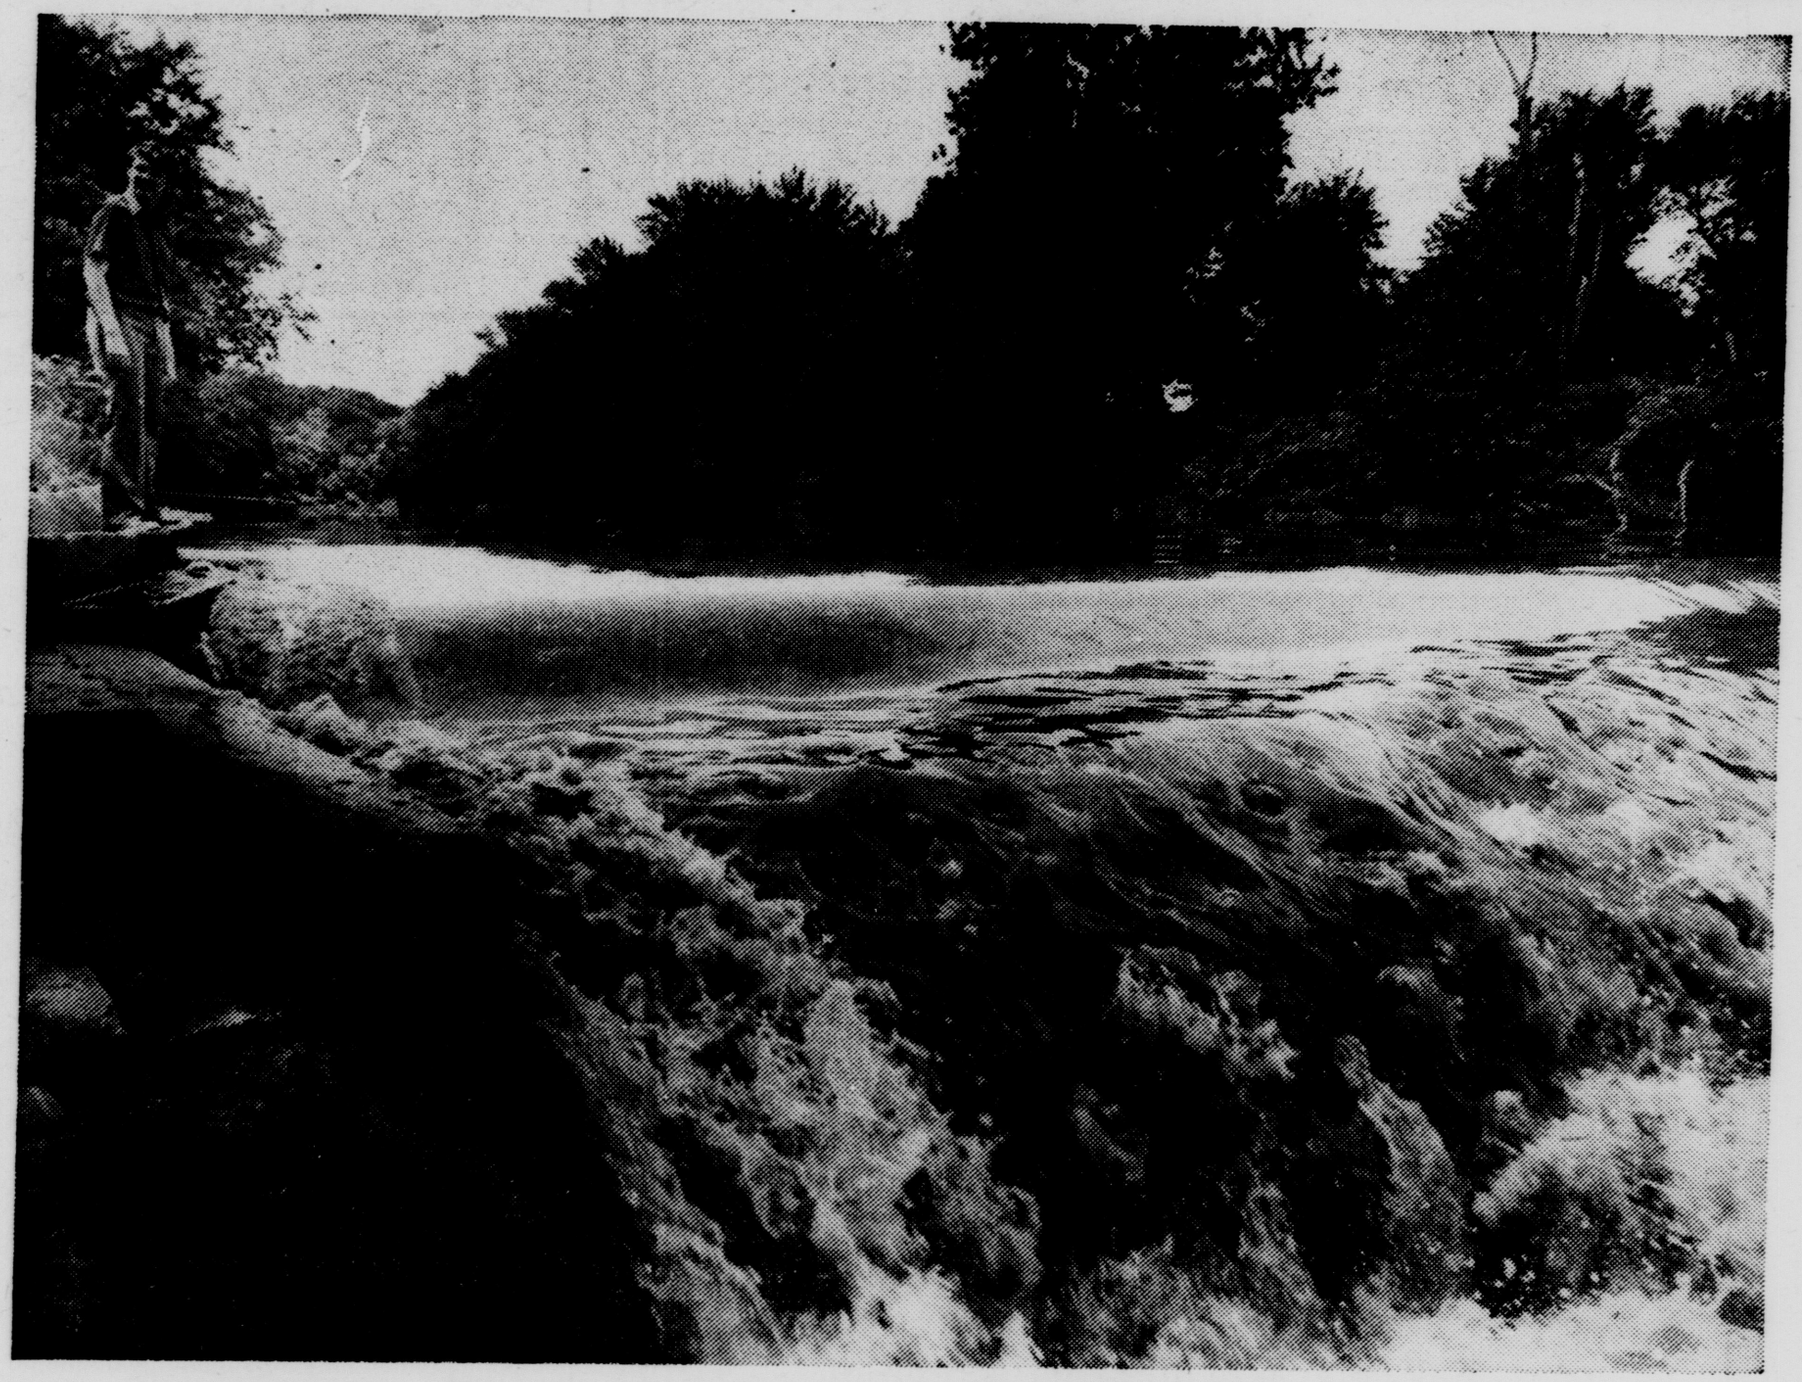

Each autumn during the first two weekends of October the people of Spoon River Valley stage a "Fall Festival" with residents dressed in period costumes, special exhibits, arts and crafts demonstrations, shows and other activities. No one goes hungry because there is plenty of homecooked food being served. The people of each of the towns and hamlets of the valley go all out to make the festival something special.

There will be an antique car and hot rod show this year in Lewistown on Oct. 1, the first day of the festival and on both Saturday nights of the festival, Oct. 1 and 8 there will be street dances in the town. Throughout the valley residents will be selling apples, sorghum and hot cider. And, of course, there are always dramatic readings of the infamous epitaphs. As you drive along the route check for signs announcing special events.

villages, old weather-beaten barns, historic sights, apple orchards and picturesque scenery. There are no "big" cities and when it comes right down to it there really isn't much to do here. In contrast to the hustle and bustle of the city things here move slowly as if in a dream. It's a place to come and sit a spell and remember the good ol' days.

In old Spoon River we rode our horses
Hunting ducks by the lake or river;
Now they are chasing the anise bag
Over the hills and down the hollows.
We used to walk and we used to work,
Now it's golf at the country club,
And polo ponies instead of racing.
This was a place of simple delights:
We read old books, and talked of evenings,
And rode to the country in our buggies.
Now it's the magazine and the movie,
And flivers as thick as summer flies

An interesting historic footnote about the Spoon River Valley is that at one time the valley and the City of Chicago were both part of Fulton County. The State of Illinois was settled from south to north. Our pioneer ancestors came to Illinois by floating down the Ohio river and gradually making their way up the Illinois River and the Mississippi. As more northern territories became populated more counties were created.

In January 1823 Fulton County was created with its southern boundary set at the Illinois River extending north to the Wisconsin border. People from the northern sections of the county had to come to Lewistown, the county seat, for all government business including the issuing of licenses and the casting of ballots in elections. Some of the historians in the valley say the people from Chicago were stuffing ballot boxes way back then. As they traveled down the Illinois River toward Lewistown they would pick up people on the other side of the river and get them to vote in Fulton County.

Travelers to Spoon River who are interested in ancestor hunting will certainly want to include the Lewistown court house in their plans. Although many documents were destroyed in the Chicago Fire, records dating before the creation of Cook County can still be found in the court house.

There is still a little bit of Chicago in the Spoon River Valley. The Metropolitan Sanitary District of Greater Chicago has a 7,000-acre land reclamation project in the county where treated sludge is used to fertilize both agricultural and prairie land.

Rustic bridges, built decades ago, span the Spoon River.

Valley residents dress in costume for the annual fall festival.

The Fulton County Conservation Area takes up 400 acres of MSD land and for a $1 daily gate fee visitors can fish in any of the well stocked lakes on the property. A variety of wildlife can be viewed in the conservation area including the Giant Canadian Goose, which was once thought to be extinct. A 14-mile hiking trail, Sister Creek Trail, takes you through pine groves and around lakes past the historic Sister Creek School House.

Camping is available on the Fulton County Conservation Area on seventy-five campsites. There are three other major campgrounds in the county: Lake Wildwood Haven in Bushnell, Ill. with 1,000 campsites; Anderson Lake Conservation Area in Astoria, Ill. with 120 sites; and Rice Lake Wildlife Refuge outside Canton with thirty-four sites. Motels are located in the valley in the towns of Canton, Banner, Havana and Lewistown. Visitors interested in accommodations with the larger hotel and motel chains will find them in larger cities outside the valley — Peoria, Galesburg and Macomb. Advance reservations are advisable especially during the fall festival.

In addition to the marked highway route for vehicles on the Spoon River Scenic Drive there are also marked trails for hikers and bicyclists. The trip can also be made by canoe but canoe rentals are limited in the valley. Most canoeing enthusiasts bring their own.

For drivers the scenic routes make use of both the rural byways and state highways. Although most of the roads have been dustproofed, either by oiling of gravel roadways or blacktopping, there are still some narrow back country roads included in the scenic route.

The time it takes to complete the trip depends on your interest. You can make it a quick one day tour or take two days stopping frequently in the towns along the way to take in a few exhibits or demonstrations. Remember that this is Spoon River Country and things move slowly. Remember also that you have come for no better purpose than to drive past some fine Midwestern scenery so 35 to 40 miles per hour will probably be an average speed. If you're a "lead foot" better bypass this trip and stick to the interstate highways.

Bruno Bean

With the advent of the automobile
I turned my stable into a garage,
And worked as a chauffeur now and then.
But I saw no change in the game of men,
And nothing gained by the swifter wheels:
A mounted copper chased the buggy;
And a motor cycle chases the auto;
You speed to hide, there are other
speeders;
A punctured tire is a winded horse;
And instead of hay and corn and stalls,
There's rubber and gas and oil
and padlocks;
And if there isn't a whip to wind
The lines around, there are levers
and brakes,
And groves by the river, though
farther away,
As quickly reached in a car!

One tip for those planning to make the drive during the Fall Festival — most people start at the northern end of the route and head south. You might save time and avoid traffic congestion if you started at the southern end and worked your way north.

The North Entry of the drive is at Riverside Park in London Mills about a half mile north of Rte. 116. The south entry is near Waterford about a quarter mile west of Dickson Mounds Museum just off Rtes. 78 and 97. Programs detailing the drive and festival events are available at the entry points and at various places along the way. Most activities along the drive are open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. unless otherwise stated in the program.

The biggest attraction at the southern entry point of the drive is Dickson Mounds Museum, a branch of the Illinois State Museum. The museum is world renowned for its archeological diggings of prehistoric Indian villages and burial sites. Skeletons and artifacts dating back 1,000 years have been unearthed and left just as they were found by archeologists in order that they may be preserved in their original state. The museum is open from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily and a picnic area on the grounds is open until sundown.

Located nearby is the abandoned town of Waterford. The town was platted in 1829 at a place where early travelers had to ford the river (hence the name Water-ford) but the town was abandoned when the town of Sepo was established a half mile north on the Narrow Gauge Railroad. Waterford Town Hall, Waterford School and the restored Plank Road Ticket Office are all that remain of this bygone era.

A side trip can be taken from this section of the scenic route. The trip leads travelers north to the hamlet of Little America. Here is a lookout point where visitors will see an unusual view of the valley where the Spoon and Illinois rivers join. Further north is the MSD project and the Fulton County Conservation area. The sidetrip also takes in Canton, the largest city in the county.

Back on the main route of the scenic drive the next points of interest are in the town of Lewistown. The old Rasmussen Blacksmith Shop Museum, open from 1 to 5 p.m. daily, is on south Main Street. Other attractions in the town are the Fulton County Courthouse built in 1898; the office of the Fulton Democrat, the county's oldest newspaper, established in 1855; the Spoon River Hotel which goes back to 1850 and lists several Civil War dignitaries on its guest list; the Fulton County Jail built in 1850 and the oldest jail in the state still in use; a Narrow Gauge Railroad depot; a church listed on the National Register of Historic Places; and Oak Hill Cemetery which many believe is "The Hill" referred to by Masters in "The Spoon River Anthology."

Masters' boyhood home, though not open to the public, is also located in Lewistown. Although some believe Lewistown is the actual setting of the imaginary town Masters' calls "Spoon River," many literary critics believe the town is actually a composite of many places in the valley.

From Lewistown a sidetrip is available to Duncan Mills where grist mills were built in the 1830s by George Duncan. The mill site is located in a picturesque setting along the river.

The next major point of interest on the main route is the town of Bernadotte which was named for the French Marshal who became King of Sweden. Grist and saw mills were both located in the town during its heyday. Bernadotte was once situated in a valley surrounded by seven hills but the hills were torn up by bulldozers in 1942 when the U.S. government built Camp Ellis here.

Bernadotte was a mecca for picnickers, fishermen, artists and visitors and it is now making quite a comeback in this respect. The river is especially beautiful here and is a favorite spot for photographers and artists eager to paint or sketch landscapes.

Edward Hill

Where there is love of the art, there
the love of man is;
And where the love of man is, there
is love of the art.
How deeper is the creative virtue
of these words
Than the words: where a man's treasure is there is his heart also!
I was the son of the good and tireless
physician,
Myself a painter of the fields
For the delight of Spoon River!

There's rubber and gas and oil
and padlocks;
And if there isn't a whip to wind
The lines around, there are levers
and brakes,
And groves by the river, though
farther away,
As quickly reached in a car!

One tip for those planning to make the drive during the Fall Festival — most people start at the northern end of the route and head south. You might save time and avoid traffic congestion if you started at the southern end and worked your way north.

The North Entry of the drive is at Riverside Park in London Mills about a half mile north of Rte. 116. The south entry is near Waterford about a quarter mile west of Dickson Mounds Museum just off Rtes. 78 and 97. Programs detailing the drive and festival events are available at the entry points and at various places along the way. Most activities along the drive are open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. unless otherwise stated in the program.

The biggest attraction at the southern entry point of the drive is Dickson Mounds Museum, a branch of the Illinois State Museum. The museum is world renowned for its archeological diggings of prehistoric Indian villages and burial sites. Skeletons and artifacts dating back 1,000 years have been unearthed and left just as they were found by archeologists in order that they may be preserved in their original state. The museum is open from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily and a picnic area on the grounds is open until sundown.

Located nearby is the abandoned town of Waterford. The town was platted in 1829 at a place where early travelers had to ford the river (hence the name Water-ford) but the town was abandoned when the town of Sepo was established a half mile north on the Narrow Gauge Railroad. Waterford Town Hall, Waterford School and the restored Plank Road Ticket Office are all that remain of this bygone era.

A side trip can be taken from this section of the scenic route. The trip leads travelers north to the hamlet of Little America. Here is a lookout point where visitors will see an unusual view of the valley where the Spoon and Illinois rivers join. Further north is the MSD project and the Fulton County Conservation area. The sidetrip also takes in Canton, the largest city in the county.

Back on the main route of the scenic drive the next points of interest are in the town of Lewistown. The old Rasmussen Blacksmith Shop Museum, open from 1 to 5 p.m. daily, is on south Main Street. Other attractions in the town are the Fulton County Courthouse built in 1898; the office of the Fulton Democrat, the county's oldest newspaper, established in 1855; the Spoon River Hotel which goes back to 1850 and lists several Civil War dignitaries on its guest list; the Fulton County Jail built in 1850 and the oldest jail in the state still in use; a Narrow Gauge Railroad depot; a church listed on the National Register of Historic Places; and Oak Hill Cemetery which many believe is "The Hill" referred to by Masters in "The Spoon River Anthology."

Masters' boyhood home, though not open to the public, is also located in Lewistown. Although some believe Lewistown is the actual setting of the imaginary town Masters' calls "Spoon River," many literary critics believe the town is actually a composite of many places in the valley.

From Lewistown a sidetrip is available to Duncan Mills where grist mills were built in the 1830s by George Duncan. The mill site is located in a picturesque setting along the river.

The next major point of interest on the main route is the town of Bernadotte which was named for the French Marshal who became King of Sweden. Grist and saw mills were both located in the town during its heyday. Bernadotte was once situated in a valley surrounded by seven hills but the hills were torn up by bulldozers in 1942 when the U.S. government built Camp Ellis here.

Bernadotte was a mecca for picnickers, fishermen, artists and visitors and it is now making quite a comeback in this respect. The river is especially beautiful here and is a favorite spot for photographers and artists eager to paint or sketch landscapes.

Edward Hill

Where there is love of the art, there
the love of man is;
And where the love of man is, there
is love of the art.
How deeper is the creative virtue
of these words
Than the words: where a man's treasure is there is his heart also!
I was the son of the good and tireless
physician,
Myself a painter of the fields
For the delight of Spoon River!

Spoon River:

A sidetrip from Bernadotte takes motorists past the site of old Camp Ellis, where the chimneys of the old buildings still stand; the town of Ipava where a local church is noted for its stained glass windows; and the town of Vermont with many fine mansion type homes.

The route from Bernadotte is almost straight north with various side trips and alternate routes. There's the town of Checkrow with a red rural school dating back to 1845 and Checkrow Community Church which remains one of the few active old country churches in the area.

As you drive you will note many iron bridges over the Spoon River. A particularly interesting one is located near the town of Babylon.

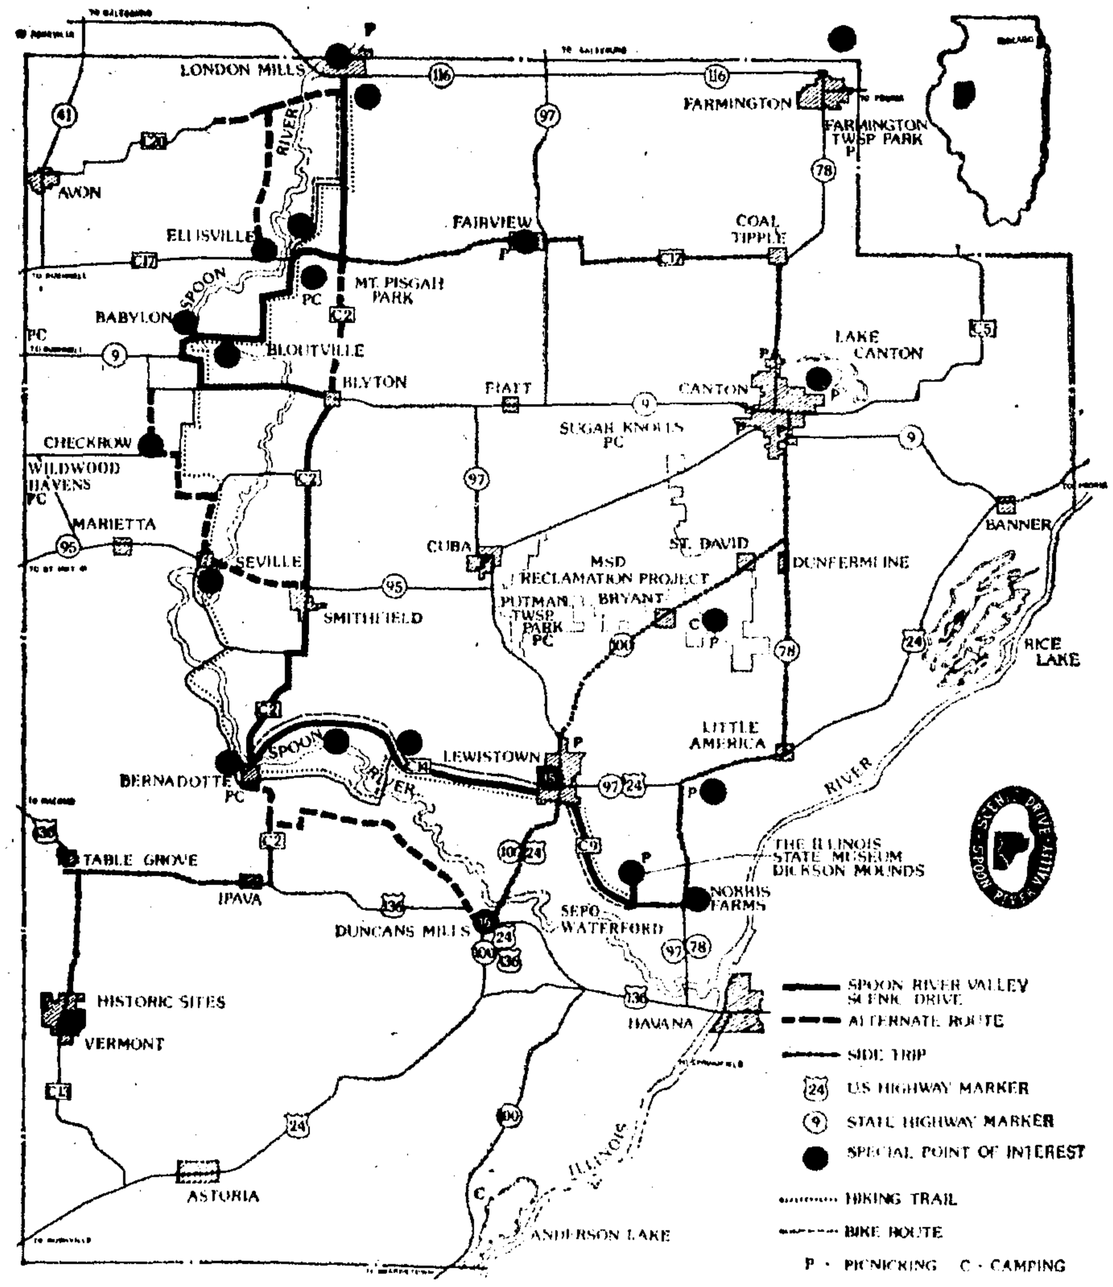

Some of the attractions on the northern end of the scenic route are Blout Farms where visitors can buy sorghum, honey, apples and cider and see demonstrations of such farm occupations as sorghum making, and sheep shearing; the town of Fairview with a historic old church and town hall; Ellisville with its old Opera House, churches, cemetery and arts and crafts displays; Mount Pisgah County Park with picnic areas; and London Mills with Riverside Park, a replica of the Statue of Liberty, the old Ross Hotel and remnants of grist and saw mills along the river.

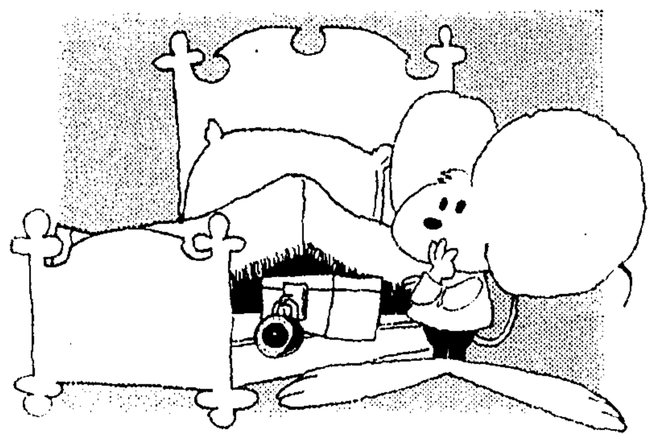

Information on the Spoon River area is available from Mrs. Lawrence I. Bordner, president of the Spoon River Scenic Drive Associates, 45 N. Park Dr., Canton,. Ill. 61520. Persons needing specific information about camping, canoeing, etc. should send Mrs. Bordner a long, stamped self-addressed envelope and indicate their particular interesta. Brochures will be sent by return mail. §

Dickson Mounds Museum is renowned for its archeological diggings of prehistoric Indian villages and burial sites. Artifacts dating back more than 1,000 years are displayed in the modern museum, a branch of the Illinois State Museum.

Canoe trip designed with fall in mind

Looking for a novel way to view Mother Nature's fall colors?

Why not take in the yellows and the browns and the reds while quietly paddling down the Wisconsin River in a canoe? At Blackhawk Ridge Recreation Area in southern Wisconsin overnight canoe trips are planned for this weekend and for Oct. 1 and 2 and Oct. 8 and 9 when the fall colors along the river are usually at their peak.

Weekend

Canoes will be launched below the Castle Rock Dam with lunches on the river and dinner and breakfast at a scenic campsite. Canoers must provide their own sleeping bags but Blackhawk Ridge will provide dormitory tenting.

Highlights of the 20-mile river trip include the changing Wisconsin terrain and the fascinating geological formations in the Wisconsin Dells areas. To participate in the canoe trip you must be at least 16 years of age. Cost of the guided outing is $50 per person.

Blackhawk Ridge is a 600-acre recreation area near Sauk City, Wis., about 25 miles northwest of Madison. The privately owned semi-wilderness area is open to campers, hikers, horseback riders, bird watchers, and picnickers as well as canoeists. In the winter cross-country ski trails wind along the ridge.

Other unusual features of the recreation area are a petting zoo with deer, geese, peacocks, rabbits, puppies and kittens; sleigh rides in the winter; and a Borrow-a-Burro plan which allows visitors to rent a lovable donkey as a pet or beast of burden for 50 cents an hour.

If you're not too keen on riding a donkey there are always horses available for rides on trails winding through the woods and meadows on Blackhawk Ridge. Riding is $5 per hour on weekdays and $7 per hour on weekends. Trail riding instruction is also available which would lead to certification allowing a qualified rider to round-up, feed, saddle and ride without a trail guide. Instruction is $7 an hour on weekdays and $9 an hour on weekends. Riders who have completed instruction can then rent horses on weekdays for $4 an hour and on weekends for $6 an hour.

Information on activities at Blackhawk Ridge is available by writing P.O. Box 92, Sauk City, Wis. 53583 or calling 608-643-3775.

Blackhawk Ridge Recreation area is about a 3-hour drive from the Northwest suburbs and is reached by taking I-90 north of Madison to Rte. 78 and then southwest toward Sauk City.

Canoe rentals, shelter and campsites are available at Blackhawk Ridge.

It's time to plan for your autumn color tour

We in the Midwest are lucky, you know. This part of the country probably has the largest variety of fall scenery in the nation as nature's fall colors spread south from Northern Wisconsin and Michigan into Illinois and Indiana.

And the best time for viewing the fall colors is during the next few weeks when the low humidity, warm days and cool nights of "Indian Summer" combine to transform the rich, green colors of summer into vibrant autumn hues.

In short, it is a perfect time of year for Sunday afternoon drives and quiet walks in the country. It's a time to recall the hazy memories of youth.

It is nearly impossible to predict the exact time for fall color peaks. Remember that the weather plays the most important part in determining the time and intensity of the fall colors. The right combination of cool weather and low humidity are the all important factors but it is likely that the leaves may turn two or three weeks earlier than usual because of this year's mild summer.

Here are some suggestions for viewing the fall colors in the following Midwestern states:

ILLINOIS

Mid-October generally is the best time to view the changing colors in this part of the central Midwest. In Northern Illinois the Mississippi Palisades would be a good place to visit as would nearby Galena. Illinois Rte. 2 follows the Rock River south from Rockford and is an especially pleasant drive for fall color adventurers.

A favorite Chicago-area attraction is the Morton Arboretum near Lisle, where 4,800 plant species can be viewed in one afternoon.

In Central Illinois a drive along the Illinois River from Peru to Peoria is another color tour favorite. State parks are always convenient on this drive with Starved Rock at the northern end and Pere Marquette near the southern end.

INDIANA

Autumn in Indiana brings to mind many scenes. In mid-October the entire state is ablaze with color and one of the best routes to follow is Ind. Rt. 46 through colorful Brown County. Clifty Falls State Park on the Ohio River also will be beautiful during the fall, and can be reached using Ind. Rte. 56.

The Parke County area is another excellent attraction during the fall with many picturesque covered bridges dotting the landscape reminding travelers of another era when life moved along more slowly.

WISCONSIN

Since the changing colors of fall begin in the north and moves slowly south with the changing weather conditions, Northern Wisconsin generally peaks in late September or early October, with the rest of the Badger State peaking in mid-October.

In the northern Eagle River-Rhinelander-Manitowish Waters area, U.S. Rte. 51 and Wis. Rte. 70 are good major routes to explore. The traffic is very light in late September offering many opportunities for leisurely driving.

In Eastern Wisconsin, Door County is another great fall color and recreation area. The best routes in this area are Wis. Rte. 42 and 57. The Kettle Moraine Forest, west of Milwaukee, is traversed in both its sections by Wis. Rte. 67 and is a beautiful place to motor through any time of the year.

For those with more time, try following the Wisconsin River Valley west to the Mississippi River and then north on Wis. Rte. 35 along the banks of the Mississippi. Both of these river valleys are breathtaking when decked out in fall colors.

MICHIGAN

Like Wisconsin, fall colors come first to Michigan's northern area. All of the Upper Peninsula is forested and all of it is beautiful in late September. Michigan Rte. 28 offers an especially beautiful route to follow.

The peak color period is usually mid-October in the western and southern portions of the Lower Peninsula.

Several events are scheduled in the state to coordinate with the fall color season. Color tours are scheduled Oct. 1 on Houghton Lake and in Harrison. The popular color cruises on Lake Charlevoix are scheduled three weekends — October 1-2, 8-9 and on Saturday Oct. 15. The price is $6 and reservations should be made in advance with the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce.

Guided color tours of Newago County are scheduled Oct. 1 to 16 and a fall color tour is scheduled in the Pictured Rocks area of the Upper Peninsula on Oct. 2 to 7. On Oct. 9 Gladwin County will be showing off its fall foliage through guided tours of the countryside.

Construction at O'Hare Airport may cause delay

If you are going to be catching a flight at O'Hare sometime during the next 60 days give yourself extra time to get to the airport.

Road work on the upper level near departure gates is snarling traffic and causing delays. One lane of the two lane ramp to the upper level is closed for repaving as are the outer two lanes of the four lane circular drive around the terminal. The work began last week and is expected to end sometime in mid-November.

Travelers are advised to leave for the airport about 1 hour before their flight is scheduled to depart. Traffic congestion is mendation that travelers check in at the airport about 1-hour before their flight is scheduled to depart. Traffic congestion is the worst at peak departure times which are usually 3 to 9 p.m. on Fridays, Sundays, Mondays and Thursdays.

If someone is going to drop you off at the airport you may want to try the lower (arrival) level. You will then have to walk inside the terminal and take an escalator upstairs to the check-in counters and gates.

Enjoy scenery from a floating hotel

When Spanish and English adventurers charted the spectacular, labyrinthine ocean trail of British Columbia's "Inside Passage" they were intent on finding the fabled Northwest Sea between Europe and China.

Thanks to these intrepid sailors — and the captain and crew of BC Ferries' Queen of Prince Rupert — today's vacationer can just relax and absorb the spectacular scenery aboard a floating hotel.

The Queen of Prince Rupert plies the 528-km (330 mile) waterway between Kelsey Bay at the northern end of Vancouver island and Prince Rupert on northern British Columbia's mainland in 20 hours, year round. It provides an overnight pleasure cruise and a critical link in the "totem circle," a network of highways that wind through the interior of B.C., from Vancouver to Prince Rupert, and down the inside coast of Vancouver Island, between Kelsey Bay and Victoria.

Whether you're going full circle or only doing the maritime link it's all a pleasure aboard the Queen of Prince Rupert.

The narrowest point along the route is the Grenville Channel. You sail this stretch in the tranquil shadows of snow-capped mountains and precipitous waterfalls.

Along the way you'll see Indian fishing villages and log booms — the past and present of British Columbia's coastal life. From time to time the public address system announces settlements with exotic names like Bella Bella, Namu, or Alert Bay — site of the world's tallest totem pole. It's not uncommon to see log barges working their way south to Vancouver and freighters carrying loads north to Alaska.

Succulent British Columbia salmon is daily fare in the licensed dining room, along with such robust offerings as steak and roast beef. For less formal dining there's a large self-serve cafeteria.

After a hearty meal and a turn on deck many passengers retire for the night, but during summer's longer days you can linger, watching the magestic cycles of sun and moon, with help from the northern lights. Salt air and the gentle roll of "The Inside Passage" will soon lull you into slumber.

The Queen of Prince Rupert can accommodate 430 passengers in staterooms ranging from two-berth deluxe to four-berth standard. All staterooms are equipped with a private bath or are adjacent to washrooms.

A leisurely breakfast or fortifying brunch prepares one for morning disembarkation, whether it's north to Alaska, off into the interior of British Columbia, or a drive down the coast of Vancouver Island.

Both Prince Rupert and Kelsey Bay are served by bus. Prince Rupert is the southern terminus of Alaska State Ferries and is served by Alaska Airlines for southeastern Alaskan communities.

The Queen of Prince Rupert carries up to 90 automobiles and can accommodate pickups and campers. Car deck clearance is 5.2 m (14 ft. 8 in.), but reservation requests should include vehicle height if it exceeds 1.9 m (6 ft. 5 in.).

Reservations can be made by writing British Columbia Ferries, 1045 Howe Street, Vancouver, B.C., V6Z 1P6.

Delta promises dream vacation in Bahamas

Delta Air Lines' 1977 Bahamas Dream Vacation program includes Nassau and Paradise Island, Freeport and Lucaya on Grand Bahama, and the Out Islands.

"Nassau Summer Life" offers the posh summer life of a vacation at the Nassau Beach Hotel. Package price varies according to type of accommodations and season and ranges from $154 to $196 per person, double occupancy, for eight days, seven nights not including air fare. The price includes ocean-view room; daily beachside native entertainment; use of new "Windsurfer" — a surfboard with sail; unlimited tennis; backgammon lessons, native dance lessons, and native cooking lesson; plus native nightclub show, with a drink; bike and picnic box lunch; and Delta bonus souvenirs.

"Bahamas/Florida Pik A Pak" is a pick and choose vacation. The vacationer has a choice of Nassau or Freeport, or three Florida cities if a U.S. and foreign vacation is desired. Vacation price of $60 to $172, per person, double occupancy, includes accommodations for eight days, seven nights, in Nassau or Freeport, or four nights in Bahamas and three nights in either Miami Beach, Fort Lauderdale, or Orlando. Air fare is not included. In Nassau the package includes a one-and-a-half-hour sightseeing tour, admission to Ronnie's Rebel Room, and cocktail at Tail of the Tiger Discotheque; in Miami Beach or Fort Lauderdale, admission to dog track; and in Orlando, discount ticket to Mystery Fun House.

"Freeport-Princess For Everyone" offers a choice of three Princess hotels, with accent on tennis or golf. Recommended for those who like the excitement of the casino and International Bazaar, the package costs from $127 to $221 per person, double occupancy, for eight days, seven nights not including air fare. In addition to entertainment, tramride of Princessland, and chaises at pool and beach, the Tennis Holiday includes unlimited daytime tennis, 30-minute group clinic, racquet cover, and private half hour lesson. The Golf Holiday includes greens fees on two 18-hole PGA courses, shared golf cart daily, three golf balls, and golf hat.

"Out Islands: Abaco" introduces the vacationer to the peaceful isolation of a small cay "out from Nassau." Vacation package for eight days, seven nights, per person, double occupancy offers a choice of Out Island and a variation in price: at Valentine's Yacht Club on Harbour Island, package price is $110 EP; at Cape Eleuthera Resort on Eleuthera, $241.50; and at Bluff House on Abaco Island, the cost ranges from $210.00 to $236.25. Special features are offered at each resort.

Luxury cruise to Nassau features needlepoint

Erica Wilson, America's creative needlework authority, has created a seminar-cruise vacation. She's combining the best of the stitchery world with the pleasure of a luxury cruise when Holland America's S.S. Rotterdam departs from New York Nov. 5 for a seven-day cruise to Nassau and Bermuda.

During the cruise, Ms. Wilson will conduct seminars, lectures and workshops in many of the stitching techniques she has made famous. A registration fee of $75 includes workshops with instructions, lectures and all materials necessary for completion of the seminar project.

The cruise fare ranges from $445 to $795 per person.

Additional details are available from your travel agent or Holland America Cruises, 2 Penn Plaza, New York, N. Y. 10001.

Try a river boat cruise down the Mississippi

You can view the autumn foliage along the Mississippi River from a vantage point on a river boat from now until the end of October by taking a budget-priced fall color tour package being offered in Dubuque, Iowa, a historic Mississippi River town.

The package includes one night double occupancy lodging at the Holiday Inn; a 1½-hour excursion down the Mississippi aboard the "Spirit of Dubuque," an authentic sternwheel river boat; a round trip ride on Dubuque's block-long Fourth Street Elevator, the world's steepest, shortest cable car built in 1882; a tour of the Five Flags Theatre, a beautifully restored 1910 theater listed in the National Register of Historic Places; an all-you-can-eat dinner and breakfast. The total price for two people is $49.95, tax included. Each child staying in the same room pays $12.

For information and reservations contact Holiday Inn of Dubuque, 1111 Dodge St., Dubuque, Ia., 52001 or call the Chicago number 751-2284.

Learn about tipping practices 'round the world

Trans World Airlines has issued a new easy-to-use consumer information booklet designed to take the worry out of tipping practies when traveling abroad.

Titled "Tipping Abroad," the pocket-sized folder details current tipping procedures in major European countries and the Middle East. It covers categories ranging from waiters, chambermaids, porters, doormen, concierges, taxicab drivers to theatre ushers. Copies of "Tipping Aborad" are available at all TWA sales and city ticket offices.

ULTRA DIET

A Protein Sparing Modified Fast Diet!

IT'S SAFE • IT'S EASY
IT'S HEALTHY • IT'S NEW!!
Lose up to 15 lbs. a week

WITHOUT PILLS, SHOTS, MEDICATION OR EXERCISES

Now, at last, Medical Science has developed a diet for RAPID WEIGHT LOSS! Without Hunger. Faster. Easier. Safer than any other diet and pounds stay off. ALPHA II ULTRA DIET is of SUPERIOR QUALITY, consisting of Casein and Whey Protein, together with ALL vitamins, minerals and fatty acids required for OPTIMUM NUTRITION. Whey Protein has a nearly perfect balance of VITAL AMINO ACIDS, soy protein does not. It's practically tasteless and more easily digested.

It is this high quality protein that permits rapid, safe weight loss without hunger pangs and without affecting the muscles of your body, your heart, liver, kidneys, spleen — all vital organs from which you lose protein on other reducing diets; protein that should not be lost! The diet is extremely simple — it's all in the can and additional food is permitted throughout the day. Because the weight loss is so rapid, pound for lost pound ALPHA II ULTRA DIET is more economical than others. Money back guarantee.

"The primary relationship of husband and wife has to take precedence over children," Joan Garrity found in interviewing "lifetime lovers."

'J' wants to help you keep your man

by Laura Schmalbach

"You know, I'm really a small town girl," says Joan Garrity with just a hint of a giggle. "I like to walk down the street and be able to see people I know. I'm a traditionalist in a lot of ways."

At first glance, you'd tend to agree. After all, what could be more small town than a pleasant, gregarious woman who wears a flowered dress and pink rouge, and who has rather lumpy hips just like the rest of us?

Like her appearance, Ms. Garrity's background certainly fits the homey image. Reared in Kansas City, she now combines public relations and writing (golf how-tos and children's books are among the topics) in the fresh-air-and-sunshine atmosphere of Palm Beach, Fla.

But Joan Garrity isn't your everyday down-home sweetheart. As author "J" in the best seller "The Sensuous Woman," she sent uninitiated readers reeling by suggesting such turn-on techniques as the "Whipped Cream Wriggle" and "The Hoover" — all geared toward pleasing men and turning women from "let's get it over with" party-poopers into joyful, imaginative lovers.

After embarrassing her mother, mortifying the religious community, and electrifying the parents of many a single young woman, she went on to pen the introduction to "My Secret Garden," a collection of women's intimate sexual fantasies.

And in "Total Loving," (Simon and Schuster, $8.95) her new sequel to "The Sensuous Woman," Ms. Garrity writes about toning up pelvic muscles, the advantages of sex therapists, and how to create "love environments" that will keep a lover or husband intrigued long past the first "I love yous."

Of course, by this time a healthy (and not so healthy) interest in sexuality is as all-American as Sears and apple pie. If "J" piqued her readers' curiosity in 1970, Masters and Johnson, "The Hite Report" and Larry Flynt's "Hustler" have since told them all they ever wanted to know — and more.

Ms. Garrity is well aware that times have changed: "When I wrote my first book telling women how to masturbate, many of them had never even heard of the term before," she recalls with a wry smile.

But an increased sexual awareness hasn't fazed "J" at all. She's happy to observe that "sex is getting better all the time . . . we've come a long way from the '60s, when women said, 'O.K., now make me have an orgasm.' " And she's more than content to switch her focus from landing men and orgasms to keeping them.

The transition from "The Sensuous Woman" to "Total Loving," a conversational look at several "lifetime lovers," was a lengthy one. But Ms. Garrity defends the seven-year delay with the firm conviction that "a love affair is the most difficult personal relationship to maintain . . . I could have done a quickie sex book, but so many women told me they wanted to know how to keep up a love relationship that I knew it would take a lot of time."

To discover the secrets of a successful love relationship, Ms. Garrity interviewed married couples across the country. Most of her "lifetime lovers" were married for between twenty and thirty years, and their advice was similar: keep working at the sexual aspect of a relationship, and seek outside help if you can't solve the problems yourself.

While 96 per cent of the couples had children, "they all recognized that the primary relationship of husband and wife has to take precedence over the children," noted Ms. Garrity.

Keeping the kids in their place wasn't the only surprising aspect of the "lifetime lovers' " lifestyles, she added. To her astonishment, the wives were "all active in their own right . . . if they didn't hold down paid jobs, they did volunteer work — they definitely were not dull.

"I thought at first I'd find a 'Total Woman' type with frilly aprons and no personality,

A fictionalized critique of special education

JOHNNY'S SUCH A BRIGHT BOY, WHAT A SHAME HE'S RETARDED by Kate Long (Houghton Mifflin, $8.95)

Reviewed by Diane Granat

If a government or consumer agency investigating deceptive labeling practices were to leave its jars, bottles and boxes on the shelf and turn to the nation's schools, it might find an alarming process occurring every day: the identification of children as retarded, slow, brain damaged or otherwise handicapped — labels which will stick to them throughout their lives and frequently doom them to a separate and sometimes unequal educational system.

It is this labeling practice, often unfair and frequently misleading, that comes under attack in Kate Long's indictment of special education, "Johnny's Such a Bright Boy, What a Shame He's Retarded."

The system she describes is a tangled web of funding regulations and bureaucratic procedures which send children who do not fit easily into the traditional classroom to a segregated system for the "abnormal."

Ms. Long issues her barbs through a fictionalized account of an earnest young woman's struggle to reform the special education system of an imaginary county in an unnamed southern state.

Unable to last in Copper County for more than one school year, Maggie Callahan tries to overturn the county's special education program and replace it with the increasingly popular practice of mainstreaming, the integration of children with learning problems and other disabilities into regular classrooms.

Her determination to change things is strengthened by her encounters with so-called handicapped students. There was Jenny, full of questions and an eager reader, who attended the county's special school — nicknamed "Dummy Tech" — but she didn't know why. "Two men came and asked my mother to sign a paper, and she did," Jenny says. Getting there wasn't hard, but getting out would be.

Then there was Donald, who was recommended for "Dummy Tech" after a psychologist described his "low mental ability." What the tester never bothered to find out was why Donald kept nodding off during the exam — the amount of sleep he had the night before was never a factor considered in his one-time stab at an IQ test. Did he justly earn his label?

As implied by the book's title, the special education system described by Ms. Long is filled with contradictions. The most evident are the children who don't belong there but are shuffled into special education classrooms because their behavior is too difficult for their regular teachers to handle or, more disturbingly, because the school district needs to fill its quota of special education children to qualify for federal funds.

The methods by which children are tagged receive some of Ms. Long's most severe criticism. One IQ test, she writes, "must be one of the most carefully guarded secrets of the educational world. If somebody read this thing aloud on prime time television, it would be the educational equivalent of the release of the Pentagon Papers."

Ms. Long also attacks the system which automatically discriminates against poor children by thrusting them into separate "special" classrooms. The children in her contrived county come from mountain shanties, the sons and daughters of backwoods farmers who often never went to school beyond sixth grade. With IQ test questions geared to children with middle class experiences and values it is little wonder that these children are doomed from the start.

Although Ms. Long tries to make educational jargon more palatable by injecting it into conversations, important facts and issues often get lost in irrelevant story lines. At times it appears that she would have done better by sticking with nonfiction.

A witty account of Hollywood's stars and glitter

SCARLETT O'HARA'S YOUNGER SISTER by Evelyn Keyes (Lyle Stuart, $10)

Reviewed by Wandalyn Rice

Ah, will we ever tire of stories of those beautiful, wicked, larger-than-life people who populated Hollywood during the Golden Era?

Evelyn Keyes and her publishers certainly hope not — at least not until thousands of avid readers have purchased Ms. Keyes' Hollywood memoir.

Despite the title, Ms. Keyes spends very little time discussing her role in "Gone With the Wind." Instead she chronicles in a bright, cynical style her wanderings through the Bright Lights as a naive aspiring actress under the tutelege of such producers as Cecil B. DeMille and Harry Cohn.

Ms. Keyes, who according to publicity releases wrote "every word herself," has genuine narrative skill. She can plot a scene and give it dramatic pacing. If the reader must ocassionally wonder if real life was quite as neatly put together as her story, well, who hasn't heard of poetic license.

The book drops names with abandon. She took acting classes with and had a brief fling with Anthony Quinn. (DeMille told her to "stay away from that half-breed.") She married, in succession, Director Charles Vidor, John Huston and bandleader Artie Shaw. She had an affair with Michael Todd before he married Elizabeth Taylor.

In reading the book, we discover that Humphrey Bogart was impatient with the slow pace of shooting on "Treasure of the Sierra Madre," that Huston once brought a chimpanzee home with him and that Artie Shaw was a firm believer that a wife's sole duty was to wait on him.

There are basically three kinds of Hollywood books — those, like Brooke Hayward's "Haywire," that have a serious purpose; those that are nothing more than "cut and paste" jobs for nostaligia buffs; and those in the "Modern Screen" style of breathless, gossipy scandal. Ms. Keyes book is better written than most of the third category, but it clearly belongs in the "Modern Screen" genre.

There are times when Ms. Keyes aspires to rise above mere gossip and to point out some sort of moral about the pampered beautiful people. She is her own worst enemy in that endeavor, constantly slipping in such tacky cutsies as "And there was Kirk Douglas, in and out — in more ways than one. Our — uh — whatever it was — lasted no more than four months . . ."

The above passage is a fair example of the worst of Ms. Keyes prose. At her best, though, she is conversational and highly readable. If her book lacks intellectual weight, it at least strives, like a slightly tipsy guest at a cocktail party, to be witty and amusing.

A mixture of a mystery novel and the occult

THE OUTER DARKNESS by James S. Wallerstein (Aurelon Tales, $9.95).

Reviewed by Linda Punch

Jimmie and Jamey Kramer are seemingly living out a modern day version of the Biblical tale of Cain and Abel. Jimmie, tall and blond, has "the mark" of Cain on his forehead. He seems irresistibly drawn to evil. His brother Jamey, small and dark, can do no wrong. Yet, he is bound to his brother in a relationship that transcends blood ties.

The story of Jimmie and Jamey is told in "The Outer Darkness," a novel by James S. Wallerstein. Before the tale is finished, the two boys will become enmeshed in a world filled with murderers, criminals and witches.

Wallerstein begins the novel by recounting Jimmie and Jamey's childhoods. Jimmie, the product of an illicit union between a mysterious woman named Lilly and a murderer, Mal Garreldyne, is taken into the Kramer household as a young child. Mrs. Kramer, believing Jimmie to be her husband's son from an affair with Lilly, wants the baby as a constant reminder of her husband's infidelity. Jamey is the Kramer's child, born shortly after Jimmie.

In the beginning, the novel sounds like a sociological study of indifferent parents and unloved children with Biblical undertones. Jimmie is slowly drawn into the world of crime, starting with truancy and petty thefts and ending with his involvement with a blackmail ring run by a strangely beautiful woman. Jamey, the loved son, struggles to save Jimmie from himself and to reconcile his brother with their parents.

As the story unwinds, elements of the supernatural creep in. Jamey discovers that the exotic leader of the blackmail ring is Jimmie's long lost mother, Lilly. Madame La Strega, an old witch fortune teller who also bears the mark of Cain, discloses that she is Jimmie's great great grandmother.

Throughout the book, the supernatural entwines with everyday happenings. Jimmie lives in fear that his dreams of mass murder will come true and that he will someday fulfill the legacy of Cain by murdering his brother. Madame La Strega also prophesies imminent death but tells the brothers that the future can sometimes be changed.

"The Outer Darkness" is a strange mixture of a mystery novel and writings of the occult. Wallerstein mixes them so skillfully, however, that the reader is never sure whether the two brothers' dealings with the supernatural are real or the products of an overactive imagination.

The book gets off to a slow start but after the first hundred pages most readers will find it difficult to put down.

Philosopher Adler pens an autobiography

PHILOSOPHER AT LARGE, by Mortimer J. Adler (Macmillan, $12.95)

Reviewed by John N. Frank

Mortimer J. Adler's autobiography "Philosopher at Large" is not light reading. To understand it, the reader should be familiar with the works of Aristotle, Plato, Thomas Aquinas and a host of American educational theorists.

But if one has read all of the above, then Adler's work will provide an interesting insight into a man who has spent his entire adult life trying to update the ancients in the world of philosophy and education.

Adler starts his work with his decision to go to Columbia and then traces his career through his years there as a student and professor, his stay at the University of Chicago and beyond.

But as the more than 300-page tale unfolds, very little is said about the actions of Adler the man. Rather we are told of Adler the thinker, how his views on learning and education evolved and how he eventually settled on his dream of writing a "Summa Dialectia" to compliment Aquinas' "Summa Theologica."

It's regrettable Adler didn't devote more space to telling us about himself. He was involved in some of the more interesting changes on the American educational scene this century and is still affecting untold numbers of college students who use his quickly written "How to Read a Book."

But to dwell more on his life and less on his thoughts would not have been a comfortable task. As he explains: "Nor have I ever found the idiosyncracies of human beings, including myself, more interesting than their ideas."

Adler's ideas revolve around the nature of education and the nature of knowledge.

He argues that philosophy, which of late has focused more on situationalism than absolutes, is a science with obtainable truths.

Those truths were unearthed by the ancients, such as Aristotle and later Aquinas, and it is to these masters that modern man should look, Adler argues.

"Philosophy, like science, is a body of knowledge, not a set of opinions, knowledge of the world in which we live, of the nature of things, of man and society," he writes, going on to define the task of the philosopher:

"Philosophy is everyone's business. The task of the philosopher is to shape his thought and to express it in such a way that it is accessible to anyone who will make the effort to think about the matters under consideration."

From these two premises follows the conclusion upon which Adler based his courses in reading the so-called great books of the Western World.

The knowledge of man, the world, etc. is there, in those books, he reasoned. People need only a guide in rooting it out. And so he and numerous associates acted as guides, teaching great books courses and seminars, cooperating with the Encyclopaedia Britannica to produce a great books series and a way for the average reader to understand them.

The temptation on finishing "Philospher at Large" is to judge if Adler is correct in his assertions about philosophy and even more to judge if he had any moral right to spend his career in an ivory tower of philosophy while the world plunged into World War II and its Cold War aftermath.

Such questions are far too weighty for one reviewer to answer, except to say there is a need in the world for thinkers such as Adler to tell the men of action what needs to be done.

Men in the future will judge if Adler is truly one of those thinkers or merely someone who made a great deal of money out of pretending to be one.

All that can be said now is that his intellectual autobiography is an interesting account of the thinkings of one very well known philosopher at large.

A witty account of Hollywood's stars and glitter

SCARLETT O'HARA'S YOUNGER SISTER by Evelyn Keyes (Lyle Stuart, $10)

Reviewed by Wandalyn Rice

Ah, will we ever tire of stories of those beautiful, wicked, larger-than-life people who populated Hollywood during the Golden Era?

Evelyn Keyes and her publishers certainly hope not — at least not until thousands of avid readers have purchased Ms. Keyes' Hollywood memoir.

Despite the title, Ms. Keyes spends very little time discussing her role in "Gone With the Wind." Instead she chronicles in a bright, cynical style her wanderings through the Bright Lights as a naive aspiring actress under the tutelege of such producers as Cecil B. DeMille and Harry Cohn.

Ms. Keyes, who according to publicity releases wrote "every word herself," has genuine narrative skill. She can plot a scene and give it dramatic pacing. If the reader must ocassionally wonder if real life was quite as neatly put together as her story, well, who hasn't heard of poetic license.

The book drops names with abandon. She took acting classes with and had a brief fling with Anthony Quinn. (DeMille told her to "stay away from that half-breed.") She married, in succession, Director Charles Vidor, John Huston and bandleader Artie Shaw. She had an affair with Michael Todd before he married Elizabeth Taylor.

In reading the book, we discover that Humphrey Bogart was impatient with the slow pace of shooting on "Treasure of the Sierra Madre," that Huston once brought a chimpanzee home with him and that Artie Shaw was a firm believer that a wife's sole duty was to wait on him.

There are basically three kinds of Hollywood books — those, like Brooke Hayward's "Haywire," that have a serious purpose; those that are nothing more than "cut and paste" jobs for nostaligia buffs; and those in the "Modern Screen" style of breathless, gossipy scandal. Ms. Keyes book is better written than most of the third category, but it clearly belongs in the "Modern Screen" genre.

There are times when Ms. Keyes aspires to rise above mere gossip and to point out some sort of moral about the pampered beautiful people. She is her own worst enemy in that endeavor, constantly slipping in such tacky cutsies as "And there was Kirk Douglas, in and out — in more ways than one. Our — uh — whatever it was — lasted no more than four months . . ."

The above passage is a fair example of the worst of Ms. Keyes prose. At her best, though, she is conversational and highly readable. If her book lacks intellectual weight, it at least strives, like a slightly tipsy guest at a cocktail party, to be witty and amusing.

A mixture of a mystery novel and the occult

Reviewed by Linda Punch

Jimmie and Jamey Kramer are seemingly living out a modern day version of the Biblical tale of Cain and Abel. Jimmie, tall and blond, has "the mark" of Cain on his forehead. He seems irresistibly drawn to evil. His brother Jamey, small and dark, can do no wrong. Yet, he is bound to his brother in a relationship that transcends blood ties.

The story of Jimmie and Jamey is told in "The Outer Darkness," a novel by James S. Wallerstein. Before the tale is finished, the two boys will become enmeshed in a world filled with murderers, criminals and witches.

Wallerstein begins the novel by recounting Jimmie and Jamey's childhoods. Jimmie, the product of an illicit union between a mysterious woman named Lilly and a murderer, Mal Garreldyne, is taken into the Kramer household as a young child. Mrs. Kramer, believing Jimmie to be her husband's son from an affair with Lilly, wants the baby as a constant reminder of her husband's infidelity. Those who believe that the fun is in the doing will find in this assortment of craft books dozens of ideas for creating gifts, personalizing bedrooms, experimenting with recycling, sprucing up classrooms, lulling away rainy Saturday afternoons and concocting things just to see how it's done. All have inviting formats, easy-to-follow directions and numerous diagrams, photographs and drawings.

Marilyn and George Gould are careful to list specific instructions for sidewalk surfers who want to enjoy their sport less expensively. In "Skateboards, Scooterboards and Seatboards You Can Make" (Lothrop, $5.95), young enthusiasts will find information on building all three vehicles. Guidelines include such basics as finding a place to work, gathering tools and deciding on a design. Step-by-step instructions for measuring and cutting the board, attaching the wheels and finishing the wood follow.

To prepare skateboarders for the actual ride, the authors give hints for flat tracking, turning and even falling, with special tricks included for advanced riders. Directions for making skateboard variants — a scooterboard which has post and handle and a seatboard which allows steering while sitting — are extra bonuses. Safety precautions are listed throughout, but, although the authors don't say so, younger children will need adult supervision.

"Recyclopedia" (Houghton Mifflin, $6.95) is a timely book which people of all ages can enjoy. In clear instructions and well-labeled diagrams, Robin Simons offers a wide variety of ideas and suggestions for creating "games, science equipment and crafts from recycled materials." Cans, jars, milk cartons, oatmeal boxes, spools, cardboard tubes and empty orange juice cans are just a few of the items used to make terrariums, puppets, looms, rhythm instruments and even a pinhole camera.

More than just a how-to book, "Recyclopedia" emphasizes new ways of looking at once-used materials, suggests methods for finding materials and attempts to inspire creativity in the user. The book is an outgrowth of a recycling program at the Boston Children's Museum.

Cardboard is certainly an item that can be used again and Jeremy Comins shows how in "Slotted Sculpture from Cardboard" (Lothrop, $5.95). Intended for upper elementary and junior high schoolers, the projects, successfully tested by students, include abstract geometric constructions, mobiles and sculptures of boats, airplanes, cars, people and animals. The later are the most diversified, with photographs depicting completed sculptures of eagles, pigs, dragons, cats, rabbits, beavers, pandas and giraffes.

General information on necessary tools and working techniques prefaces each project. The author shows how slotted cardboards can also be used for models when sculpting in other mediums such as plywood, metal and dough.

The simple projects in "Decoupage for Young Crafters" (Dutton, $7.95) will appeal to 8 to 10-year-olds. Oatmeal boxes, bandage cans, shells, wooden boards, metal cans and paddle ball toys are the basis for constructing crayon boxes, shell necklaces, barrettes, wall plaques, key holders and collectors' boxes.

Children will be delighted with the appealing transformations that decoupaging creates. A helpful introduction recommends specific materials, gives application pointers and lists necessary tools. However, since instructions for individual projects are given in paragraph form, they may be difficult for some children to follow and so require adult supervision.

"Concoctions" (Dutton, $5.95), intended for middle-graders, is a book purely for the fun of the moment. It's filled with recipes for concocting such concoctions as soap bubble mix, fake plastic, marshmallow soap, salt writing, strawberry stamps and toothpaste putty. Thirty-eight recipes featuring easy-to-find ingredients are included. Author Lowi Price gives explicit directions and tips for success. Where special care is advised (if, for example, a heat source is required), safety precautions appear in dark type.

Offering two-fold fun — first in the making, then in the playing — Harvey Weiss describes more than 35 "Games and Puzzles You Can Make Yourself" (Crowell, $6.50). Using such common materials as tin cans, marbles, pencils, paper, rubber balls and string, young people can avoid expensive commerical products. Three-D Tictacktoe, Rag Basketball, Fox and Geese, Go-bang and Para-shoot are some of his more intriguing games. One called Pop-it-in simply requires a clothespin, a square scrap of wood and a dish. Weiss encourages readers to invent their own games or to devise variations to those described.

Model railroad buffs will devour "How to Run a Railroad" (Crowell, $8.50). For the beginner, Harvey Weiss' detailed descriptions include kinds of trains available, where to get them, and explanations of how they work. Operators ready for more advanced ideas will find the chapters on switching, coupling and track planning interesting and readable. Construction information includes how to build a train table, lay tracks, construct bridges and buildings and add derricks, water tanks and landscape to achieve a realistic look.

The life of this bored woman is boring reading

Reviewed by Cathy Collison

Poor Mabel Dodge Luhan. She was married four times, widowed once, divorced twice, had numerous lovers, traveled around the world, and played patroness to personalities from D.H. Lawrence and Isadora Duncan to Lincoln Steffens — yet she was bored. Poor "Mabel" reader — who will be equally bored with Emily Hahn's latest biography.

Ms. Hahn's credentials for writing such a book are not lacking. A patroness of sorts herself, she probably finds Mabel's life fascinating. Ms. Hahn's perceptive writing and gentle humor have won acclaim — most recently for "Once Upon a Pedestal: An Informal History of Women's Lib." She has authored a number of other books and is a frequent contributor to New Yorker.

Fortunately, Ms. Hahn does not attempt to excuse Mabel Luhan's selfish, spoiled and domineering ways:

"There can be no doubt in the mind of anyone who follows her career that Mabel enjoyed the kind of power that comes from meddling in other people's emotional lives."

Nonetheless, a candid portrait of a bored woman fascinates few readers.

Ms. Hahn relies too heavily on Mabel's own memoirs. While she reminds the reader that Mabel's accounts may not be accurate, Ms. Hahn offers no fresh insight into Mabel's personality. She intersperses the chronological story of Mabel's life with quotes from encyclopedias, letters, other books and Mabel's daughter-in-law. But why document dullness?

This intimate portrait of Mabel is 200 pages too long. Although D.H. Lawrence, Hutchins Hapgood and other notables of the time are sprinkled throughout the biography, it is only their relationships with Mabel that concern Ms. Hahn. Such a vivid background is spoiled by the drab foreground — Mabel.

Critique:

visor herself, it seems that "Johnny's Such a Bright Boy . . . " could have been Ms. Long's own journal. But like Maggie Callahan, Ms. Long got out of the system, and that knowledge lends a depressingly negative outlook to the prospects for reform.

A hopeful note, however, is that the publication of Ms. Long's book coincides with the arrival of a new federal law which may bring some positive changes to special education.

The "Education for All Handicapped Children Act," P.L. 94-142, guarantees a free and appropriate education to all handicapped children and promotes the placement of children in the "least restrictive environment," a possible answer to the segregation and negative labeling which has dominated some special education programs in the past.

The life of this bored woman is boring reading

Reviewed by Cathy Collison

Poor Mabel Dodge Luhan. She was married four times, widowed once, divorced twice, had numerous lovers, traveled around the world, and played patroness to personalities from D.H. Lawrence and Isadora Duncan to Lincoln Steffens — yet she was bored. Poor "Mabel" reader — who will be equally bored with Emily Hahn's latest biography.

Ms. Hahn's credentials for writing such a book are not lacking. A patroness of sorts herself, she probably finds Mabel's life fascinating. Ms. Hahn's perceptive writing and gentle humor have won acclaim — most recently for "Once Upon a Pedestal: An Informal History of Women's Lib." She has authored a number of other books and is a frequent contributor to New Yorker.

Fortunately, Ms. Hahn does not attempt to excuse Mabel Luhan's selfish, spoiled and domineering ways:

"There can be no doubt in the mind of anyone who follows her career that Mabel enjoyed the kind of power that comes from meddling in other people's emotional lives."

Nonetheless, a candid portrait of a bored woman fascinates few readers.

Ms. Hahn relies too heavily on Mabel's own memoirs. While she reminds the reader that Mabel's accounts may not be accurate, Ms. Hahn offers no fresh insight into Mabel's personality. She intersperses the chronological story of Mabel's life with quotes from encyclopedias, letters, other books and Mabel's daughter-in-law. But why document dullness?

This intimate portrait of Mabel is 200 pages too long. Although D.H. Lawrence, Hutchins Hapgood and other notables of the time are sprinkled throughout the biography, it is only their relationships with Mabel that concern Ms. Hahn. Such a vivid background is spoiled by the drab foreground — Mabel.

visor herself, it seems that "Johnny's Such a Bright Boy . . . " could have been Ms. Long's own journal. But like Maggie Callahan, Ms. Long got out of the system, and that knowledge lends a depressingly negative outlook to the prospects for reform.

A hopeful note, however, is that the publication of Ms. Long's book coincides with the arrival of a new federal law which may bring some positive changes to special education.

The "Education for All Handicapped Children Act," P.L. 94-142, guarantees a free and appropriate education to all handicapped children and promotes the placement of children in the "least restrictive environment," a possible answer to the segregation and negative labeling which has dominated some special education programs in the past.

but it didn't turn out that way," she continued. "They broke all the rules, and the pressures must have been terrific."

After observing couples who have made it over the long haul, Ms. Garrity tackled those who are still looking for Mr. Right. Yes, he's still around and "J" has devised a "Cosmopolitan"-style checklist to help find him.

To Ms. Garrity, selecting the right man should get at least as much attention and scrutiny as choosing a new car. But unfortunately, she contends, there are a lot of women out there who still believe in the white-knight-in-shining-armor routine.

She's followed her own advice: she was engaged while writing "Total Loving," but after taking her own quiz, she decided her Mr. Right was wrong.

"Knowledge is really the key," she says emphatically. "Women have to start taking responsibility for their own emotional and sexual pleasure — if you go about choosing a mate in a practical way, it will free you to be even more romantic."

But don't assume that Ms. Garrity is exclusively pro-marriage. At 37, she has been engaged "more times than I care to admit," and while she waits for Prince Charming, she's thoroughly enjoying her single status.

"Marabelle (Morgan, the controversial author of "The Total Woman") and I do agree on one point — we're both pro-sex," says Ms. Garrity. "But I don't think the man is the final authority, and I'm for alternatives to marriage — we get married because we don't know how to live alone, but thankfully that's changing."

Yet for all her pronouncements on independence in marriage, sexual freedom and a practical approach to courtship, there's still a good share of the old "J" in Joan Garrity.

"When it comes right down to it, Marabelle is right. Until we figure out how to increase the percentages, women have to keep catering to men — there are more of us around. We're still working harder at making love work."

BEGINNER'S CORNER

BLACK WINS HEAVY MATERIAL

After winning half its games in a 1968 simultaneous exhibition in Edinburgh, Scotland, the MIT computer chess program MacHack was made an honorary member of the U.S. Chess Federation. (Huh?)

Six years later in Stockholm, thirteen computers competed in their first world championship tournament. (You came a long way baby!)

The Soviet entry Caissa triumphed after winning a crucial game against Ostrich (Columbia University), which squandered a couple of winning chances. In an exhibition of friendship after the tournament, CHESS 4 (Northwestern University), which had tied for second but was the acknowledged strongest U.S. program, drew in sixty-five moves with the Soviet World Champion.

This August, the Second World Computer Championship was held in Toronto, Canada. The Northwestern entry, promoted and renamed CHESS 4.6, waited lean and hungry for its Soviet rival.

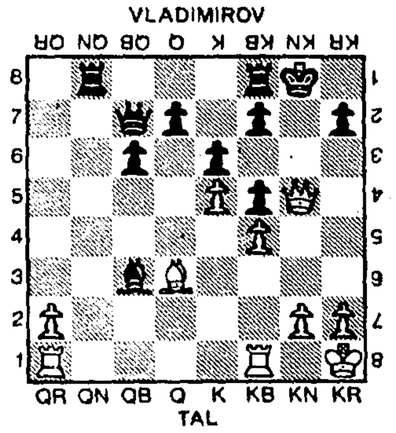

But the big match failed to materialize, when Caissa unexpectedly lost to the Duchess, an "aggressive" Duke University program, in the first round. Non-plussed, CHESS 4.6, which has won the Minnesota State Championship (humans), swept its mechanical counterparts to become champion.

Caissa tied for second with Duchess, while Univac's Chaos and Ma Bell's Belle tied for third and fourth in the sixteen-man field.

Ironically, the CHESS 4.6 program is run on Control Data's Cyber 176. The latter is the very computer which the U.S. State Department would not let be sold to the Soviet Union.

Olga knows

ARIES (March 21-April 19): What the gods have dealt is fair, Ari, so stop whining. The game is over and someone else cashes in the chips for a change. A winner by nature, you find this hard to take. But take it you must. Next week will be rosier. Honestly. Would Olga kid a sweetieface like you? Never.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Solve new problem with old-fashioned solution, Taurus. Axioms apply. Lay everything on thick. Salve, compliments and alibis. Week slithers to a hectic finale.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Protect yourself from rude invasion, Gem. A show-down with pushy associate may be in order. You're certainly not shy but you are civilized, and others (the boors especially) sometimes try to take advantage. Week ends on spunky note.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Self-understanding highlighted. Don't be surprised if you meet the enemy and he/she is you. Have you allowed yourself to become court jester in your own castle? If so, then it's time you take off that silly hat you're wearing and start demanding respect. NOW.

LEO (July 23-August 22): One who has reputation for "soft-sell" is actually flim-flam artist. Only if you stay alert and stay calm can you hope to stay solvent. Week of many choices ends on key of C for career, cash and candor.

VIRGO (August 23-September 22): You get chance to move up on totem, Virgo. New position gives you not only more prestige but also better vision. Hidden machinations can now be seen. Complex week stumbles to a noisy conclusion.

LIBRA (September 23-October 22): Happy Birthday Libra! You are flexible, artistic, easygoing, romantic and somewhat of an idealist. You are also frivolous, flirtatious and easily flattered. But you are seldom flummoxed. When it comes to decisions your instinct is usually right. October and March memorable months in year ahead. Logic opens a universe of freedom.

SCORPIO (October 23-November 21): Check blueprints, Scorp. Deviating from plan can result in major tilt. Exactness builds solid foundation for present project. Helper may think you picky. So what? Stick to your slide rule and final day finds you laying corner stone. Or whatever.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22-December 21): Put the "give" back into "give and take" Saj. Positive attitude generates friendly current and you get added jolt. While power is high, forge ahead. Emotionally-charged week ends with a switch.

CAPRICORN (December 22-January 19): Keep on truckin', Cap, for you have miles to go before you sleep and no room for hitch-hikers. Taking "the road less traveled by" may mean many lonely nights, Cap, but it will make all the difference. Honestly. Olga knows.

AQUARIUS (January 20-February 18): The whistling you hear ain't "Dixie" friend, it's Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs going off to work. W-O-R-K — and that spells "trouble" if you don't get there on time. Vacation is over, and now it's back to the old grind. Sharpen your pencils and your wits. But not your tongue, because that's sharp enough already.

PISCES (February 19-March 20): Your symbol of the two fishes swimming in opposite directions illustrates the two opposite forces within you, Pisces. You are both positive and negative. You are the sage and the fool. You are saint and sinner. In short, you are all of us. This week you are lured by ancient line. Don't bite.

Bernadine M. Rechner

Stamp notes

On Oct. 7 the U.S. Postal Service will release a 13-cent commemorative stamp marking the 200th anniversary of the surrender of British General John Burgoyne to General Horatio Gates at Saratoga, N. Y., in 1777.

First day ceremonies will be held at Schuylerville, N.Y. which, at the time, was called Saratoga.

The surrender of Burgoyne is considered a major turning point in the Revolutionary War and artist Bradbury Thompson based his stamp design on John Trumbull's famous painting of the scene. The painting, executed sometime between 1816 and 1824, hangs in the Yale University Museum.

The commemorative adhesive is semi-jumbo in size and will be printed on the gravure press in five colors. There will be five plate numbers on each pane of forty stamps.

Collectors affixing the new stamp to covers may submit them for first day cancellation to "First Day Cancellations, Postmaster, Schuylerville, N.Y. 12871." There is no charge for this service.

Collectors wishing the Postal Service to affix the new commemoratives should submit self-addressed envelopes to "Saratoga Stamp, Postmaster, Schuylerville, N.Y. 12871." You must enclose the proper remittance which is the cost of the stamps to be affixed.

All orders for first day cancellations must be postmarked no later than Oct. 22.

The Northwest Stamp Club will elect officers for the coming year at its next regular meeting, 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 28 at the Arlington Heights Public Library, 500 Dunton Avenue.

Guests are welcome.

The 1974-75 $5 Wood Duck migratory bird stamp will be withdrawn from sale by the Philatelic Sales Branch on Sept. 30.

The Sales Branch's current Form 3300 incorrectly states that two other duck stamps will also be withdrawn on that date.

* * * *

First day cancellations for the 13-cent Bicentennial of Sound Recording stamp totaled 867,216; there were 1,194,554 cancellations for the Pueblo Indian Pottery block of four and 242,208 for the $1 booklet pane.

The Irish Post Office on Oct. 10 will issue commemorative stamps marking the Golden Jubilees of the Electricity Supply Board (10p), the Agricultural Credit Corporation (12p), and the introduction of Greyhound Track Racing to Ireland (17p).

Requests for first day cancellations should be sent to the "Philatelic Section, GPO, Dublin, 1, Ireland."

Long run series keeps Lord basking in Hawaii sunshine

By Vernon Scott

Jack Lord stars in the most durable television drama currently running, "Hawaii Five-O," but it's a short-termer compared to one of his movies which has played continuously for 24 years.

"Hawaii Five-O" is now in its 10th year. "The Story of a Patriot," in which he starred, is destined to surpass "The Birth of a Nation" and "Gone With The Wind" in longevity.

"The Story of a Patriot" plays every day over and over again in side-by-side theaters in Williamsburg, Va., as part of the tourist attraction of the restored Colonial settlement.

The 40-minute film dramatizes six landmark incidents that led to the American Revolution. Only Lord's role of John Frye is fictional.

Lord hasn't seen the picture since its completion almost a quarter century ago, but the film continues to play an important part in his life.

"I was a young actor under contract to Paramont in 1953 when I did the picture," He recalled the other day, "George Seaton was asked by the Rockefeller Foundation, which restored Williamsburg, to produce and direct a film for the project.

"I was paid guild minimum scale and we shot it in Williamsburg in and around those wonderful old buildings. I had no idea that it would run in perpetuity.

"From what I understand, 'The Story of a Patriot' will be playing those theaters as long as Williamsburg is around, or until the Rockefellers go broke. It'll be playing long after I'm gone.

"This year alone they've worn out 16 prints of the movie. Virtually hundreds of prints have been used up over the years. There's no telling how many millions of tourists have seen it.

"Prints are circulated in schools and for educational television. Someday it may be seen by more people than any film ever made."

Each year Lord receives cascades of letters from fans who have enjoyed the film. Children seeing "The Story of a Patriot" shout "There's Steve McGarrett!" — The character he plays in "Hawaii Five-O."

For a decade now Lord has been happily locked into the role of McGarrett but not so delirious that he would like to play the part in perpetuity too.

He was as unprepared for the longevity of "Five-O" as he was the continuing popularity of "The Story of a Patriot."

"I can't believe we've done 240 episodes," he marveled. "Among dramatic shows only 'Gunsmoke' and 'Bonanza' have had longer runs.

"Over the years we've knocked out nine shows put against us. And we've been consistently in the top 15 in the ratings."

Lord knows more about his series than do most stars. He owns the show in partnership with CBS and undoubtedly has amassed more wealth from its profits than most television performers see in a lifetime.

He attributes several factors for the series' continuing popularity. Hawaiian locations, good stories and guest stars.

Perhaps the most important contributions are made by Lord himself. In addition to starring in the show he rides herd on scripts, directors and other performers.

"There's no question that Hawaii itself is the major attraction for our show," he said. "And we've always featured top guest stars.

"This year we've signed Rossano Brazzi, Jean Simmons, Geraldine Page, Eleanor Parker and Carol Lynley to name a few.

"I have to make some tough decisions. I get called names once in a while. But the series is worth it. "Five-O" has been awfully good for me and for Hawaii.

"The Hawaiian Visitors Bureau polled tourists visiting the Islands for the first time and found that 25 per cent of them came because of what they'd seen on our series.

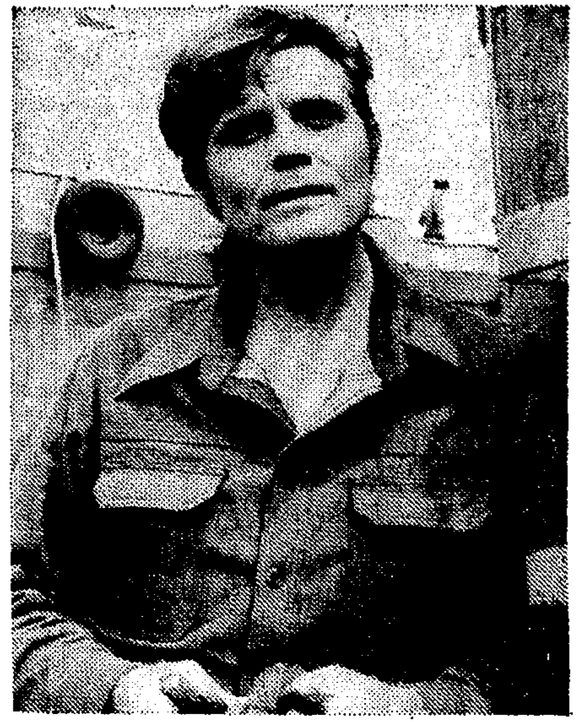

"We can honestly say that we have a worldwide audience of 300 million. We're shown in 72 countries and dubbed in Chinese, Japanese, Swahili and Arabic, not to mention all the European languages.

"Now we're going to be seen twice a week on network television. CBS is putting us on at our regular spot on Thursdays at 8 p.m. and again at 10:30 p.m. on Wednesday.

"You're looking at a very contented actor."

And an exceedingly rich one as well.

Alfred Hitchcock

I love suspense movies! Some of my favorites are "The Other," "See No Evil," and "Sisters." Could you please tell me some other good suspense movies that seem to be the best ones?

L.P.

This may be a matter of personal preference, but I can tell you that movies by Alfred Hitchcock really send chills up my spine. (I guess you could call that good suspense!) "Vertigo," "Torn Curtain," "The Birds" and "Psycho" (to name only a few) should leave you with your nails bitten off.

I really enjoyed watching the reruns of the old Jack Benny shows which appeared on TV not too long ago. Since I'm 17 years old, I don't know too much about this great comedian. How did he get started in show business? And where was he born?

W.K.

Jack Benny

Born in Waukegan, Illinois, Benny launched his show business career as a violinist when he was 8 years old. (His squeaky theme song is "Love in Bloom," in case you're wondering.) He began to develop his comedic talents while serving in the Navy during World War I, and combined comedy with his fiddle playing when he returned to vaudeville after the war.

Benny made his radio debut in 1932 and soon launched his long-running radio series. He moved to television in 1950.

"Jack Benny Show" ended in 1965, but Benny himself continued to make TV guest appearances until his death in December, 1974.

I really enjoy the angelic face of Bernadette Peters as Charley in "All's Fair," but has she ever been in movies?

L.A.

The kewpie-like cutie's movies include "Ace Eli and Rodger of the Skies," "The Longest Yard," "W.C. Fields and Me," "Vigilante Force," and "The Silent Movie."

I love suspense movies! Some of my favorites are "The Other," "See No Evil," and "Sisters." Could you please tell me some other good suspense movies that seem to be the best ones?

L.P.

This may be a matter of personal preference, but I can tell you that movies by Alfred Hitchcock really send chills up my spine. (I guess you could call that good suspense!) "Vertigo," "Torn Curtain," "The Birds" and "Psycho" (to name only a few) should leave you with your nails bitten off.

I really enjoyed watching the reruns of the old Jack Benny shows which appeared on TV not too long ago. Since I'm 17 years old, I don't know too much about this great comedian. How did he get started in show business? And where was he born?

W.K.

Jack Benny

Born in Waukegan, Illinois, Benny launched his show business career as a violinist when he was 8 years old. (His squeaky theme song is "Love in Bloom," in case you're wondering.) He began to develop his comedic talents while serving in the Navy during World War I, and combined comedy with his fiddle playing when he returned to vaudeville after the war.

Benny made his radio debut in 1932 and soon launched his long-running radio series. He moved to television in 1950.

"Jack Benny Show" ended in 1965, but Benny himself continued to make TV guest appearances until his death in December, 1974.

I really enjoy the angelic face of Bernadette Peters as Charley in "All's Fair," but has she ever been in movies?

L.A.

The kewpie-like cutie's movies include "Ace Eli and Rodger of the Skies," "The Longest Yard," "W.C. Fields and Me," "Vigilante Force," and "The Silent Movie."
